Recall may be in future

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

City of Charlevoix resident D.J. Way has been offered a blank check to mount a recall campaign aimed at unseating three members of Charlevoix's City Council.

"There is support for it (a recall) but it's (the recall effort) ugly. I want to make sure there is enough support for it first," Way said.

Way has counted the number of people who have approached him and voiced their opinion in favor of or against a letter he wrote that was published in the Charlevoix Courier and Petoskey News-Review.

The letter blasted council's 3-2 decision made Dec. 16 to deny Charlevoix Area Community Pool its request that the city enter a contract for $6,974 to support the pool's dollar nights swim program. And it also said maybe it is time to recall those who some feel are negatively representing the city of Charlevoix.

Since the letter was published, Way said he has had 15 people say they support a recall effort and one who said council's decision to deny the pool its contractual request was a good one. Another supporter, who Way would not name, offered a "blank check" to financially support a recall.

In spite of a bleak report, the possibility of a conference center facility being located in Charlevoix is still being discussed.

Charlevoix's Downtown Development Authority (DDA), city council Chamber of Commerce and the Convention and Visitor's Bureau will meet with Charles Skelton, president of Hospitality Advisors Consulting Group of Ann Arbor, to review the group's convention center feasibility study findings. The meeting is scheduled to take place at 6:15 p.m., Jan. 6 at city hall located at 210 State Street in Charlevoix.

The convention study committee met Sept. 20 to review the findings and decided to put the conference facility idea on the back burner.

In a previous interview committee member and DDA chair Hugh Mason said at the meeting the committee decided a conference center would most likely not happen in Charlevoix.

He said two factors played a role in the committee's decision

The top 10 headlines of the Charlevoix area

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

From wind turbine generators and sewer lines to major projects Charlevoix was a place where controversy, major infrastructure projects and community thrived in 2002.

The following is a "top 10" list of important events that shaped what is now Charlevoix's history in 2002.

1) On Jan. 10, the city of Charlevoix purchased the Wharfside building, which was located at the corner of Mason and Bridge streets in East Park for $1.23 million. The building was demolished in the spring to open up viewing of Round Lake as part of the park and marina renovation project. Charlevoix's City Council unanimously approved a marina plan on Sept. 25 and an East Park plan Dec. 16. The city is hoping to start marina construction in 2005.

2) A two year battle between the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association and Charlevoix Public Schools over the district's new high school off Marion Center Road was put to rest June 26. That day Charlevoix County Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas approved a consent judgment entered by Charlevoix Public Schools, the city of Charlevoix and the preservation association.

Pajtas' approval officially shut

The names dominating the local news in 2002

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The year 2002 was a busy one for many Charlevoix residents and politicians in the area.

But, a certain 10 dominated the headlines throughout the year. They are, in no particular order:

- Charlevoix schools superintendent John Sturock — This year, Sturock saw the end of the last of several lawsuits filed against the school district over the new high school on Marion Center Road. In August, he also saw the culmination of a lot of stress and hard work come together for the grand opening of the new high school.
- Charlevoix prosecuting attorney Mary Beth Kur — In addition to prosecuting several high profile cases in Charlevoix courts this year — two murders for example — Kur was also at the center of a open meetings act controversy with the Charlevoix County Commission. Kur had found out about a non-posted meeting a committee of the commission had and reported it to the attorney general. Additionally, Kur is also the defendant in a lawsuit filed by former chief assistant prosecuting attorney John Jarema over his termination by her last winter.
- John Jarema, former chief assistant prosecuting attorney — Jarema filed a lawsuit against the county and Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney Mary Beth Kur over his termination in winter 2002. He was also involved in a controversial unposted meeting with the Charlevoix County Commission's Personnel Committee. This meeting was reported to the state attorney general's office as a possible violation of the open meetings act.
- Former Charlevoix County Commissioners James Behling, Carl Price and Don Smith — These three commissioners who were

A few thoughts about recalls and conventions

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

There are two big issues on the front page of the Charlevoix Courier this week that I think beg for some comment from me.

Since they are both very timely issues, the best way for me to do this is though this column format. So, without further ado, here we go.

Recall

There has been some talk in Charlevoix recently about recalling certain members of the Charlevoix City Council because of the recent vote to not give almost $7,000 to the community pool.

Let me just say I will not be supporting any recall effort of any member of the Charlevoix City Council that is based on this subject.

Just three years ago this community was torn apart by a very controversial recall election of some school board members. It was so bad, there are still people who refuse to talk to each other because of their positions on this recall.

The hurt that campaign caused this community was huge. A recall is not simply people arguing about an issue, a recall removes elected officials from office. This is basically erasing a vote of the people that put these officials in office, not to mention the extra cost a recall election puts on a city's budget.

Recalls should only be used when the elected official has broken the law or committed other vile and despicable acts. Any other time, a community should just wait until the next election.

A vote for or against giving $7,000 to the pool is not justification for a recall. Whether you agree or disagree with the council on this, they were the ones who had to make a decision and they made it.

And they made some good points when they voted against the funding request: The pool is run by a private body; the pool issue itself was voted down in the past by voters and council told pool officials last year to take the matter to the people in an election and not to ask for money this year.

But, the pool does provide some valuable benefits to the community, is highly supported by many and $7,000 really isn't that much money considering the amount of money the city spends on Mount McSauha, the golf course and the Venetian Festival.

However, council was elected to make these types of hard decisions on what to do with taxpayer money. Right or wrong, they did their jobs.

If you don't agree with the way they are doing their jobs, vote them out of office in the next election. Or, even better, run against them for their seats.

Convention Center

The Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce wants further discussion on building a convention center in Charlevoix, even though a recent study on the matter indicated it wasn't feasible.

The chamber will be having a joint meeting with members of the Charlevoix City Council and Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority about the convention center feasibility study conducted last year on Jan. 6.

The study — which was partly paid for with taxpayer money — basically said most of the use for a center would be in the summer, which is a time when the community does not need more business. The study said a convention center in Charlevoix would add to traffic congestion, parking congestion and there would not be enough hotel rooms available for participants.

Members of a DDA and city council committee and a couple of chamber members who looked at the results of this study late last summer agreed a convention center was not feasible and decided to drop the issue. But, the chamber and the Charlevoix Convention and Visitor's Bureau doesn't seem to want to drop it and pushed for a joint meeting that includes the man who conducted the study.

DDA member Hugh Mason told me "The chamber obviously does not want this to die," when I asked him about the meeting.

This begs the questions: Why should the city risk taxpayer money on a center that could fail? Why are we even having this meeting?

The chamber should admit it was a bad idea and move on to other plans that are more favorable for the business climate in Charlevoix before any more taxpayer money is wasted.

As we close out another busy year in Charlevoix, I hope the residents of this community keep asking the hard questions of their public officials. I wish all of you a happy new year.

Don't speak for all of us

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

I try not to write about politics, mostly I like to deal in information as distinct from opinion, and much of politics turns on opinion and appearance rather than information.

There was in mid-December a United Nations regional conference on population issues, given in Bangkok, Thailand. Almost no one would argue that such issues are unimportant in a world that still has an abundance of poverty and health care concerns related to population problems.

The meeting was not widely reported in the American press. This most recent conference followed a much larger gathering in Cairo, Egypt in 1994. The 1994 conference called for controlling population growth by improving health care and education, fighting poverty and AIDS and expanding legal rights for women and the more recent gathering aimed to develop strategies for implementing the agreement arrived at in Cairo.

Few could disagree with such goals.

As is often said, "The devil is in the details." The United States delegation to the Bangkok conference used up most of the week-long meeting by attempting to remove language in the Cairo agreement that referred to "reproductive health services" and "reproductive rights" and to insert language favoring "natural" family planning methods, including abstinence.

Although the Cairo agreement says that abortion should not be promoted as a method of family planning, the United States delegation said that the phrases "reproductive health services" and "reproductive rights" could be understood to endorse abortion and should be removed from the agreement. There were 32 other nations represented at the Bangkok conference and ALL of them voted against the United States' attempts to denounce reproductive rights and birth control.

However one may feel about abortion and birth control, it seems to me over-reaching considerably to attempt enforcing those feelings on all the rest of the world.

The head of the United States delegation announced to the conference that, "The United States supports innocent life from conception to natural death." That is an official speaking for all of us in the name of our entire country.

He did not say, "The present administration of the United States supports innocent life from conception to natural death." He did not say, "Many of the people in the United States support innocent life from conception to natural death." He spoke for the United States.

We are in this country considerably conflicted about issues of abortion and birth control. Given that confusion, let us please not try to tell the rest of the world how they should be handling their problems with too many people, too few health services and too little food. To adopt as our nation's standard what is basically a religious position seems to belie our importance to the world as a secular nation. We should not follow the Taliban in placing strict religious principle at the foundation of our country's posture in the world.

Does all this international talk about the language of an agreement make any difference? Apparently it does. In early December the present administration blocked $34 million that had been approved by Congress for the United Nations Population Fund. To me that sounds way too much like picking up our marbles and going home when we can't dictate everything about the game.

Theresa Vondra's second grade class in Charlevoix for earning money for gifts they purchased and wrapped with gift paper they made; Noreen Joliffe and family for muslin bags to hold stuffed animals; city of Charlevoix for allowing us to use the old post office building; Pam Taunt for dozens of new toys; Jim Berlage for hardcover copies of "The Christmas Story"; Gary Mosey for boxes of new toys; Brian Rockafellow and his middle school industrial arts class for wooden tops they made.

Of course, many individuals and groups donated money for groceries and toys, and a myriad of volunteers worked tirelessly, efficiently, and cheerfully to bring this project to fruition.

This year, with all of the help mentioned above, we gave a little extra Christmas cheer to 145 families and 242 children which may be the largest group we've ever been blessed to assist. Recall response

Editor:

As one of the two persons subject to recall activity by the "Eveline Preservation Group," I believe I should be given the opportunity to respond to their petition.

The Eveline Township Board of Trustees is comprised of five residents of Eveline Township, elected to represent all 1,560 residents of the township. The Eveline Township Planning Commission is comprised of five residents who volunteer to serve for three year terms on a staggered basis.

The planning commission is responsible for, among other things, providing a master plan and zoning ordinance to provide a stable and sound environment for the orderly development of the township.

The Eveline Preservation Group is a group of 10 to 20 self-appointed residents of a small area of the township who demand special treatment to the detriment of all other residents of the township. The planning commission and board worked for nine months in 2001 to develop rules and regulations to not only permit, but control, the orderly development of wind turbine generators in Eveline Township. The preservation group never got involved in the process until a request was received from a local property owner to install them. From that day forward they have tried by intimidation, lawsuits and recall, to get the legally authorized actions of the township board reversed.

They have made many mistakes in the process such as: demanding the board rescind the ordinance which is not legal, requesting the board of appeals overrule the township board, which is not permissible in the ordinance — they have a copy of the ordinance, demanding the planning commission change the rules to suit them and ignoring the zoning ordinance to demand changes.

They have always blamed someone else for their mistakes. The recall process is just one of many of their mistakes, which they blame on the county clerk's office. A recall petition does not have to be truthful — it just has to be readable by the residents of the township. That's what the current recall petitions about me and the supervisor are — readable, not truthful.

When the original petitions were filed in August, the preservation group was given copies of the laws pertaining to recalls, as was I. It very plainly states that signatures must be filed within 90 days of signing. Petitions themselves are valid for 180 days from origination. They could not bother to read the section regarding filing of signatures and therefore kept their petitions too long. Now they want the county to pay them for their mistakes.

I thought volunteering meant you donated your time and effort to a cause you felt was worthwhile. I admit that I get paid for my time and effort but I spend as much as 40 hours per week being a public servant for the entire township, not just a select group of people.

Don Hayden
Eveline Township Clerk

At the upcoming forty-fifth Annual Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce meeting three people who have contributed to the community will be honored and the chamber board will say goodbye to three outgoing members.

The annual event is scheduled to kick off at 5:30 p.m., Jan. 9 with a social hour. Dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m. and the awards ceremony will follow at Grey Gables Inn located at 308 Belvedere Avenue in Charlevoix.

The chamber board has selected recipients of the ambassador award and the outstanding citizen award for 2002. Outgoing board chairman Roger Nesburg selected this year's chairman's award recipient with approval from the board.

Chamber director Jacqueline Merta said the ambassador's award is given to a person who exemplifies the spirit of Charlevoix and of the chamber. Last year the award was given to Bob and Audrey Roloff, emergency personnel with the city of Charlevoix's fire and EMS departments.

The outstanding citizen of the year award recognizes an individual who over a number of years has given freely of their time, talents and resources to make Charlevoix a better place to live. Last year Elizabeth Hoffmann won the award.

The chairman's award recognizes someone who has volunteered their time and/or resources to help the chamber. David Smith took home the honor last year.

"We will also be recognizing outgoing members of the board of directors and thanking them for their service," Merta said.

The chamber board gavel will be officially turned over at the meeting as Nesburg completes his fourth year. Charlevoix resident and owner of Site Planning Development, Inc. and current vice chairman of the chamber board, John Campbell will take over.

Laurie Lesser-Hodgson, owner of LLH Graphics, and local attorney Roy "Joe" Hayes III have completed three year board terms and will be officially replaced at the meeting. Joining the chamber board are: Edward Jones representative Derek Chowen; Jim Berlage, owner of the Bridge Street Book Shop; Reinhard Matye, owner of DCL, Inc.; and Terry Edger, a Realtor with Frisbey/GMAC.

Tickets are available for chamber members and non-members and are $25 per person, at the chamber of commerce located at 408 Bridge Street in downtown Charlevoix.

Women In Black International was honored by Church Women United for their human rights and social justice work that "makes real" the tenants of the Human Rights Declaration of the United Nations.

Church Women United is a diverse Christian women's movement for a world of peace and justice.

Women In Black from around the World were invited to the ceremony in New York. Jo Anne Beemon, of Charlevoix, attended the New York ceremony, representing groups of Women In Black in Detroit, Ann Arbor, Traverse City, Charlevoix and other Michigan communities.

Also honored by Church Women United were Mary Robinson, president of Ireland and United Nations High Commissioner of Human Rights; Maxine Waters, U.S. Congresswoman and social activist, 345th Congressional District of California; Adjoa A. Aiyetoro, chief legal consultant to the National Coalition of Blacks for Reparations Coordinating Committee and International Consultant and Social Justice Advocate of Washington, DC. The Drapchi 14 Nuns of Tibet, imprisoned in Drapchi Prison in Tibet, were also honored.

Founded in 1941, Church Women United (CWU) represents 25 million Protestant, Roman Catholic, Orthodox and other Christian women, organized into more than 1,200 local and state units. They are recognized as a non-governmental organization by the United Nations.

Women in Black is an international network of women who stand in silent vigil calling for peace, justice and non-violent solutions to conflict.

Begun in 1988 by Israeli and Palestinian women, it has spread around the world. Each group is autonomous. Participants wear black as a sign of mourning for all that is lost through war and violence.

Women in Black vigils began in Jerusalem in January 1988 with a small group of Israeli women who joined together once a week to vigil and pray for peace. The idea spread quickly in the US, England, Italy, Spain and in former Yugoslavia.

Musician to have concert for hospice

While the journey of musician Marty Ward has been primarily one of determination and personal inspiration, his mission has become one of reaching outward.

To that end, the performer/songwriter is embarking on a series of concerts designed to give a little something back.

On Sunday, Feb. 16, Ward will give a performance hosted by and to benefit Hospice of Northwest Michigan, formerly Charlevoix County Hospice.

The concert will begin at 3:30 p.m. at the Boyne City High School Performing Arts Center. Tickets are being offered in a special package which includes two tickets and a sample CD for $35. Individual advanced tickets are also available for $18.50 apiece, or at the door for $20 each.

The concept of the series is an outgrowth of Ward's decision to donate 50 percent of the net profits of the sales of his most recent CD, "Miracles in Paradise," to St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

"Why would I do this? Because as a totally independent artist, I can," Ward said. "But, foremost, I do this because I want to help children who are battling life-threatening diseases."

Being in a life-threatening situation is something Ward is all too familiar with.

On a fast-moving career track with the Chicago-based band "Eighty-Eight," Ward was sidelined by a serious auto accident that nearly took his life. The experience left him with a new attitude about the path he'd been traveling and just where it is that he wanted to go next.

Growing up in northern Michigan, Ward first envisioned himself as a singer/songwriter, and later discovered his talent for expression through the saxophone. Graduating from the prestigious Interlochen Arts Academy, Ward went on to study at Boston's Berklee College of Music and by his early 20s had experienced phenomenal regional success as one of the founding members of the Jelly Roll Blues Band, opening for such legends as Ramsey Lewis and Earl Klugh.

Subsequently, Ward has appeared on Star Search with "Eighty-Eight," has worked on music tracks for a two Jane Fonda "Walk to the Music" workout tapes and on an album sold exclusively on QVC.

WARD

As a follow-up to his critically acclaimed 1994 album "That's What Living Is," Ward released Miracles in Paradise in 2001, the culmination of 20 years of personal and musical growth. The adult-contemporary songs prominently feature Ward's sax, lyrics and vocals.

His hope is that the inspirational nature of the lyrics and music can be of help to "anyone that may be facing a personal challenge in life."

The music, then, is an appropriate vehicle with which Ward can make a contribution to a place like St. Jude's, as well as local organizations such as the Hospice of Northwest Michigan.

Tickets for the Feb. 16 event in Boyne City are available at Boyne Country Books in Boyne City; Busy Bridge in East Jordan; and The Clothing Company in Charlevoix, as well as from hospice volunteers.

For ticket information on Ward's upcoming appearance call Hospice of Northwest Michigan at 536-2842.

December was warmer than usual

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Who: National Weather Service
What: Weather phenomenon called El Niño
What does it mean: This winter is expected to be warmer and drier than normal.

Snow lovers will face a familiar foe this winter — El Niño.

Those looking forward to a white Christmas and powdery runs at local ski hills saw only a trace of snow Christmas Day and shouldn't expect a major storm through Jan. 5.

According to Andy Sullivan, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service stationed in Gaylord, this winter is a "mild" El Niño winter.

"It won't be anything historical or anything like that," he said.

But he said it does mean warmer than normal temperatures and slightly below normal precipitation — a dismal forecast for skiers and snowmobilers.

Through Jan. 5 the National Weather Service is expecting fairly mild weather overall. Sullivan said temperatures will be five to 10 degrees above what is expected in late December and early January with highs in the 30s and 40s and lows in the 20s.

Low temperatures this time of year tend to be in the teens. And there are no big snow storms in the forecast.

The last El Niño winter hit during the 1997-1998 winter. Local precipitation records are kept at the Water Treatment Plant in close proximity to Michigan Beach.

Jim Caldwell, a plant employee, said from December of 1997 to March of 1998, Charlevoix saw 7.93 inches of precipitation which includes melted snow.

That December, the snow season kicked off in similar fashion to this year with a meager .97 inches of precipitation for the month. This year, as of Dec. 26, Charlevoix had seen only .72 inches of precipitation.

If this year continues to follow the 1997-1998 precipitation pattern, January should prove to bring heavier snowfall than December did, followed by a meager February and precipitation numbers peaking in March.

City installs two new payment boxes

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix residents have another option to pay their city bills, a drive-up drop-box in the parking lot between Antrim and Mason streets, next to two mail boxes.

The city recently installed two large green metal boxes that residents can use to pay any city bill — such as taxes, utility payments or parking tickets — in the parking lot. This will allow residents the ability to just drive up to the boxes, drop off the payment in an envelop and drive away without having to leave their vehicles or find parking spaces.

Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson, who installed the boxes, said, "The idea is to enable easier payment of utility bills, especially for seniors."

The boxes were officially opened for business on Dec. 27. They will be checked daily.

Halverson said the boxes are being used on a trial basis, but he expects they will work.

He added the boxes are only for hill payments and not for mail. Before the city officially opened the boxes for use, they sat next to the mail boxes with tape over their openings.

However, when Halverson opened them on Dec. 27, he said he found mail in the boxes, meaning someone pushed the tape aside and dropped in some letters thinking they were mailboxes.

To pay your city bills, Halverson said you need to put the bill stub and payment into an envelop and simply drop it in the box. No stamp is needed.

Charlevoix city treasurer Rick Brandi said drop-boxes like this for city bills have been in the plans for a while.

"We have always looked at it when we looked at redoing city hall. We tried to figure out a way to incorporate it," he said.

After trying five to six different options of a drop-box next to city hall, Brandi said the decision was made to just use the location next to the mail boxes in the parking lot between Mason and Antrim streets.

The boxes cost the city $750 a piece, with the funding for them coming out of the utility budget.

Sheriff offers $200 reward in plant theft

Sheriff George T. Lasater said the sheriff's office will be offering a $200 reward for information leading to the arrest of whoever was responsible for stealing rhubarb plants from the family garden of an 87-and 88-year-old couple.

The couple have had the rhubarb plants for over 50 years.

The perpetrators dug the plants up, which were only a few feet from the family home and only 25 feet from the Boyne City Road in Bay Township.

If anyone has information on this theft from these Charlevoix County senior citizens, please contact Lasater at 547-4461.

Lasater added, these are such nice citizens who never cause anyone a problem.

He said they raised a family on the family farm, paid their taxes, were good neighbors and never had any reason to utilize the services of law enforcement.

Groups continue convention talk

> "They want this thing really bad. But the DDA feels it's not the end of the world if we don't end up with it and where they want it would be tough because of parking."
> Hugh Mason, DDA member

— the spaces they were looking at were not big enough and Charlevoix doesn't need more people here in July and August when convention planners would be interested in coming to town.

The committee included: Mason, former mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell, city manager Mike Wiesner, city planner Gerry Harsch, Steve Bennett and Tracy Sell, representing the visitor's bureau, and Jacqueline Merta and Roger Nesburg, representing the chamber.

In spite of this initial committee decision, another meeting was called for by the chamber board and the visitor's bureau board.

Merta, the chamber director, said, "We are not looking in another direction, we just want to go over the report. We would like the report given to us by the people who did it. Something in written form is good too, but a verbal report will give us the chance to interact and exchange."

While the chamber and bureau called for the meeting to inquire about the study, Mason said the DDA isn't particularly interested in continuing to pursue the conference center plan.

"They (the visitor's bureau and chamber) want this thing really bad. But the DDA feels it's not the end of the world if we don't end up with it and where they want it (Bridge Street Inn on Bridge Street) would be tough because of parking," Mason said.

The study was authorized in June and a written report of its findings was returned in September. It focused on two potential conference center sites, the Bridge Street Inn, located at 113 Michigan Avenue, and the former Charlevoix Middle School off Grant Street.

The report did not support locating a conference facility at either site and questioned its utility in Charlevoix in general.

The consultants concluded that 75 groups would come to Charlevoix in the summer when plenty of people are already here and about 25 groups may use the center in the slower months from November to April.

It noted that the average event facility will cost between $150 and $300 per square foot, not including land and parking. A survey of event planners found they would use between 1,000 and 10,000 square feet of exhibit space and suggested that at least 150 parking spaces be provided.

The total cost of the study was $27,500. The DDA authorized use of $15,000 for the study and the remaining $14,500 was funded by the chamber and the visitor's bureau.

An 8 p.m. organizational meeting of city council will follow the convention facility meeting.

Way says funding offered for recall people who have seen me or called me and supported my small letter. So far the vote is 15-1 in favor of pool funding and getting the negativism off council," he said. "Whether I'm the man to do the recall or not, I don't know."

As of Dec. 27, recall petitions aimed at city council members had not been filed.

And recall election law does not allow the recall of elected officials in their first and last six months in office, which would mean any effort aimed at second ward council member Karen Campbell and her husband, mayor Gabe Campbell, would have to wait five months — both were elected in November. And any effort aimed at third ward council member Shirley Gibson would have to be up and running before May, she is up for reelection in November.

Way said if there is support for a recall effort, petitioners will spend the next five months getting information together aimed at the Campbells and Gibson. Mayor Campbell did not vote, but voiced his opposition to awarding the pool contract.

The recall is not aimed at second ward councilman Bill Bellows who is also up for reelection in November even though he voted against the pool, he said.

"At this point the recall isn't aimed at Bill Bellows, but I was shocked at his pool vote," he said.

While the vote against the contract surprised pool supporters, those who voted against it have stuck by their decision.

"How can you justify saving taxpayer's money as a reason to recall someone? It doesn't make any sense. It's just a special interest group that is angry because they didn't get what they want," Gibson said. "We can't afford to feed every stray dog in town. I know the pool does good things, but we can't get involved in this especially because it was a ballot issue at one time and the voters spoke against it."

Mayor Campbell agrees with Gibson that any recall effort would be unfounded and said he and Karen have both received support from countless city residents.

"I think if they want to do that they are in for a surprise; we have a lot of support," mayor Campbell said. "I recognize recall as part of the democratic process, but to do it they need a reasonable reason and they don't have that."

Way ran against Karen Campbell for an open second ward seat Nov. 5 and lost by 10 votes. He said his opposition to council is unrelated to the election.

"I don't want the job. I won't run again, I'm done. But I want the people in the job to listen to the voters," he said.

Sales numbers slightly down in area for holidays

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Retailers nationwide have reported slight drops in sales this holiday season as compared to last and according to Charlevoix merchants the same trend was realized locally.

Jacqueline Mabee, owner of the Clothing Company, said the Christmas sales season was down about five percent this year.

"It was OK. We are down a little, not a lot, right in line with the rest of the world," she said.

Linda Hoffman, owner of Interior Motives, said pre-Christmas shopping was slow at her home decorations and furnishings store.

But both said three to four days before Christmas things picked up.

"Christmas Eve was the busiest we have ever had," Mabee said.

She attributed the late rush to a loss of a week of shopping because Thanksgiving fell a week later than usual this year. She didn't think a lack of snow impacted her store and said most of her shoppers are locals not skiers and snowmobilers.

While overall holiday shopping and spending in Charlevoix is down a little, Chamber of Commerce Director Jacqueline Merta said the Dec. 7 holiday open house was profitable for many merchants who reported to her it was busier than ever before.

"Let's hope the rest of the season will end up that way too," she said.

Merchants are ready to make up for slower than usual Christmas sales with major in store discounts.

Both Mabee and Hoffman said post holiday sales in their downtown stores and others in town have shoppers out in force.

"It's gang busters now, tables are flying out of here," Hoffman said on Dec. 26 during her post Christmas liquidation sale.

The year 2002 was filled with Charlevoix news

NEWS

three cases the environmental group brought against the school and city. Work on the contentious sewer that connects the school to the city's system was completed later that summer and students started school on time, Sept. 3.

3) The wind power debate in Eveline Township raged throughout the year. A proposal by Bay Windpower of Suttons Bay to place wind turbine generators on the properties of Mark and Dawson Way and Ralph Richardson was entered in November of 2001, one month after a new zoning ordinance was approved in the township. The seven turbine proposal sparked the creation of the Eveline Township Preservation Group who filed a lawsuit against the township in May and initiated a recall effort in mid-August aimed at unseating township clerk Don Hayden and supervisor Dan Skrzeczkoski. After signatures for the recall had been gathered, over 70 of the signatures were disqualified because they had expired and the recall effort has started over. The preservation group has asked the county to cover over $1,200 in expenses it incurred in gathering the first batch of signatures because of erroneous information given to it by county clerk Jane Brannon which they claim led to the expiration of signatures. The new commission which was sworn in Dec. 27, will address this request.

4) City council saw major changes in the Nov. 5 general election when former second ward councilman Gabe Campbell beat former mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell for the mayor's seat, taking almost 55 percent of the vote. And his wife Karen Campbell won his open second ward seat by 10 votes over D.J. Way.

5) Charlevoix Middle School was closed in August and the school board voted to put the property on the market. This fall a private developer, Stuart Kaufman, stepped forward and put in an offer to buy the site to develop single family residences. Kaufman's offer prompted city of Charlevoix administrators and the Charlevoix Public Library to step forward and express their interest in the site.

The city is exploring its parking possibilities and the library its expansion possibilities. Charlevoix's Downtown Development Authority recently authorized payment for a study which will look at use of the old school as a library or a community center. In the meantime recreation youth basketball teams are using the old gym for practice space.

6) The Charlevoix County Commission conducted a closed meeting of its personnel committee March 6 that was not posted in accordance with the state's Open Meetings Act. They met with John Jarema the former assistant county prosecutor who was fired Feb. 27 by county prosecutor Mary Beth Kur. The alleged violation was referred to the state attorney general's office which prompted an investigation by the Michigan State Police. The office ruled in late June that the meeting was not a criminal violation but was borderline.

Jarema filed a lawsuit against Kur in mid-May alleging she had violated the state Whistleblower's Act.

7) On Feb. 20, Charlevoix resident Thomas Shulick was sentenced to 30 to 50 years in prison for the April 29, 2001 murder of Elk Rapids resident Scott Cook at the Charlevoix Municipal Marina. He was convicted of second degree murder.

8) A 6.7 mile stretch of the non-motorized bike trail called the Little Traverse Wheelway, from Waller Road in Charlevoix to Bay Shore was completed this fall after 20 years of planning. The project was done through the Michigan Department of Transportation. This stretch was a milestone in the plight to connect Charlevoix to Harbor Springs via a non-motorized trail system.

9) On Dec. 16 , Charlevoix's City Council voted a second time against entering into a contract for just under $7,000 with Charlevoix Area Community Pool to help fund its dollar nights program. On Dec. 2, after fielding backlash from community members about the initial denial of the request voted on Nov. 18 council voted to put the issue back on the table at its Dec. 16 meeting. But time didn't change the opinion of the three council members who believe funding for the pool should come from a ballot proposal.

The decision may cost the pool a $25,000 challenge grant from the Frey Foundation. Council's decision sparked stirrings of a possible recall of the three members who voted against it — second ward council members Karen Campbell and Bill Bellows and third ward council person Shirley Gibson.

10) In April, Ninth District United States Coast Guard Commander Doug McCann announced Charlevoix's buoy tender the ACACIA is scheduled to be decommissioned in 2006 and will likely not be replaced. City and state officials are working to get another ship to replace it but nothing has been earmarked for Charlevoix by the Coast Guard.

Major projects and hot topics for 2003 have already materialized — this year Charlevoix residents will watch as the Charlevoix Public Library moves forward with its building plans and planning for marina and East Park renovations progresses. And, knowing Charlevoix, during the year there will also be a few notable surprises.

also a part of the county's personnel committee were accused of breaking the state open meetings act with a unposted meeting last winter with former chief assistant prosecuting attorney John Jarema, by county prosecuting attorney Mary Beth Kur. Kur reported the incident to the state attorney general's office which eventually ruled the meeting did not violate the act criminally, because no decisions were made, however it did come "dangerously close." Behling and Price ended up deciding against running for reelection for their commission seats this year and Smith was beaten in the Republican primary by Valerie Snyder.

- New Charlevoix mayor Gabe Campbell — Campbell beat incumbent Alvin "Butch" Russell in November to become the new mayor of Charlevoix. In this first month in office he has been active in setting up a committee to find a new fire chief to replace the retiring Doug Carver and was involved in a controversial decision not to give almost $7,000 to the Charlevoix Area Community Pool.
- Eveline Township resident Nancy Ferguson — Ferguson has been the bane of wind turbine promoters for the past year in northern Michigan, especially in Eveline Township. She has been at the front of a push to keep them out of the township and has said they do not belong in northwestern Michigan. Ferguson is also leading a charge to recall two members of the Eveline Township Board due to the wind turbine issue.
- Steven Smiley — Smiley, of Bay Windpower, wanted to put wind turbine generators on two properties in Eveline Township and started the process of getting the proper permits from the township. But, his plans were cut short when some township residents, led by Nancy Ferguson, fought the turbines saying they posed environmental and safety hazards and said they would harm the scenic beauty of the area. This resulted in the residents filing a lawsuit against the township and mounting a recall campaign against two township board members. Smiley and Bay Windpower have since pulled out of Eveline Township.
- Peter Pollack, principle park and marina designer with Pollack Design and Associates of Ann Arbor — Pollack is working with United Design Associates to create plans for a new East Park and marina in Charlevoix. After meeting with residents and city officials in several public forums, he presented three park and marina plans for consideration. The city chose an East Park plan and marina plan from these, now Pollack is working on combining the two and getting the proper permits.
- Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson — Last winter, Halverson represented Charlevoix and law enforcement in general by volunteering his services at the Winter Olympics in Salt Lake City, Utah. In addition to meeting many of the athletes who took part, Halverson helped provide security at the event.
- Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater — Lasater had a busy year in 2002, most notably during the fall when he had a run-in with a man armed with a shotgun on the county's west side. In late September, Lasater came to a home the man was at during the early morning hours to serve an eviction notice that was the result of a recent divorce. The man met Lasater on a stairway with a shotgun in hand and shoved the barrel of the gun into Lasater's face, taking out the sheriff's front teeth, badly cutting his lip and knocking him out. After deputies pulled the sheriff to safety, a two-day standoff ensued, which ended when the man was found at a nearby home.

This injury should have put the sheriff out of commission for a while, but it didn't. Less than 24 hours later, Lasater and his deputies were at the home of a man wanted by the FBI in East Jordan, who he talked into surrendering peacefully.

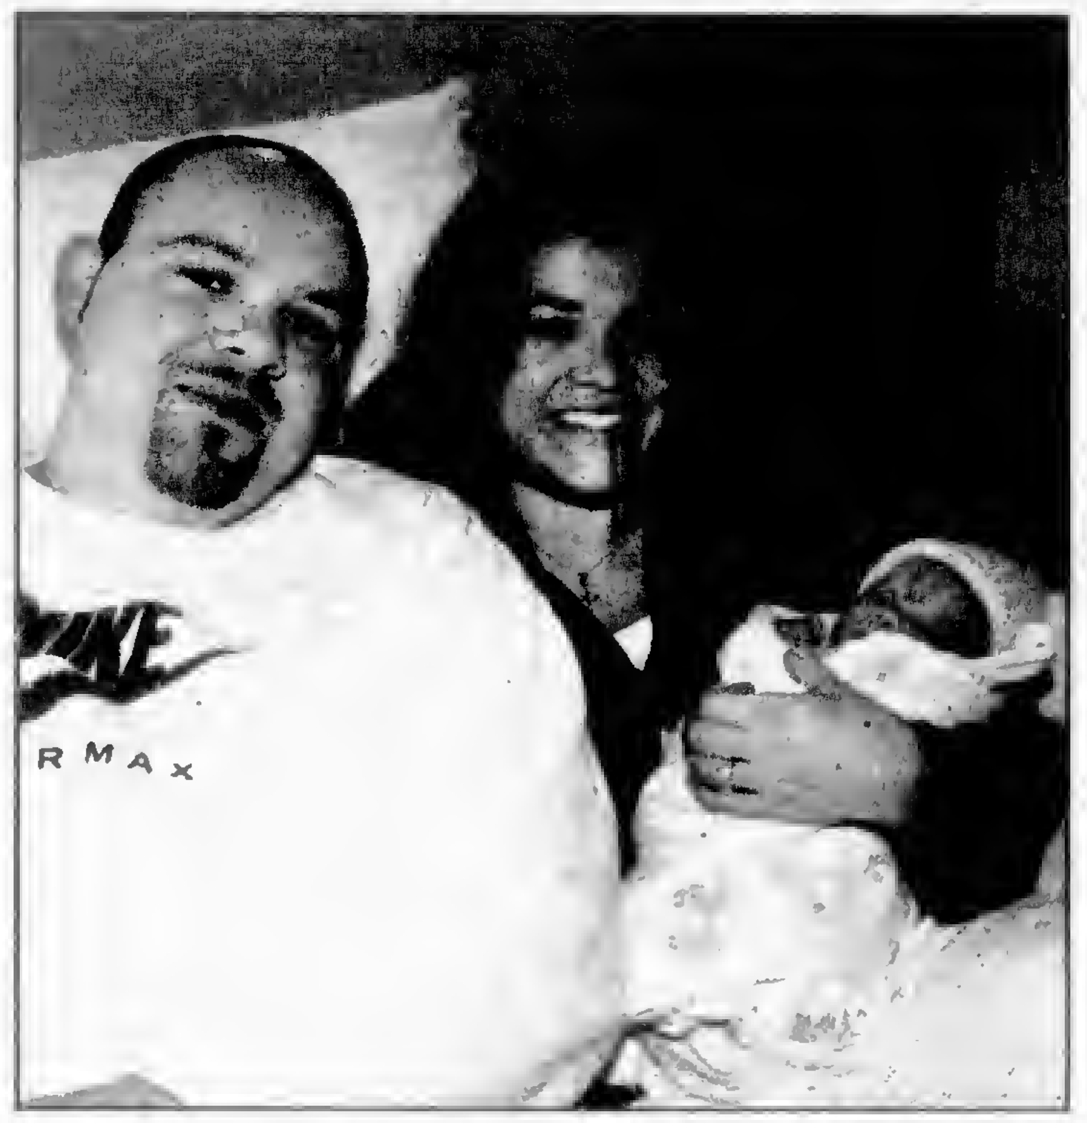
The first baby of 2003

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer



Charity and Chad Closson are the parents of Camilla "Kami" Love, the first baby born at Charlevoix Area Hospital in 2003. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

Charity Closson, 26, and her husband Chad Closson, 30, of Charlevoix, arrived at Charlevoix Area Hospital at 4:30 a.m., Jan. 2, anxious to meet their first child.

That night, at 10:26 p.m., they welcomed Camilla "Kami" Love Closson, to their family.

The sweet, petite newborn arrived nine days later than doctors had anticipated, but right on time to take home the honor of being the first baby born at the hospital in 2003.

She weighed 6 pounds, 10 ounces, stretched 20.5 inches from her tiny toes to the ends of her soft, light hair.

Charity described Kami as a miracle who fills her parents hearts with love.

The healthy baby was delivered by Dr. James Jeakle, who also guided the Clossons through their prenatal care.

Charity said they chose Charlevoix because "it's the best."

"I wouldn't go anywhere else," she said.

And more women will now have the opportunity to utilize the hospital's state-of-the-art delivery and recovery rooms. The obstetrics department is eagerly anticipating the opening of four new rooms.

The expansion started in August of 2001 and the department, which is expected to open in six weeks, will now offer eight labor and delivery rooms.

In recognition of Kami's grand entrance into the world as the first baby born at Charlevoix Area Hospital in the new year, she was given a new outfit.

The couple wrapped Kami up and took her to their Charlevoix home Jan. 4.

The baby's maternal grandparents are Paul and Connie Bradley of Charlevoix and her paternal grandparents are Bill and Caren Closson of Fort Wayne, Ind.

Groups still pushing for center

A look at whether a Charlevoix conference facility would benefit the local economy will focus on possible use during the town's shoulder and off seasons.

Charlevoix's Downtown Development Authority (DDA), city council, the Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors and members of the Convention and Visitors Bureau met with Charles Skelton, president of Hospitality Advisors Consulting Group of Ann Arbor Jan. 6.

Skelton reviewed the findings of a study concerning potential use of a Charlevoix conference facility his consulting group conducted. Out of two sites studied, the former Charlevoix Middle School and the Bridge Street Inn Bed and Breakfast, he said the inn was the more viable option because of its proximity to hotels.

"We want to make sure the facility has as many competitive advantages as possible. It's a horrendous-

Donations fund pool dollar night

"I thought, here's an opportunity for us to do something positive in the community from the get go."

Ross Biederman, President of WCCW radio

The "Dollar Nights" program at the Charlevoix Community Pool has received the financial backing it needs to stay afloat in 2003.

Pool director Al Gooch said that in December and early January the pool received numerous donations including two generous checks that came in Jan. 2 and totaled over $11,000.

Gooch said that because of these January donations and others that came in during December, Dollar Nights will definitely be a viable program in 2003.

"People saw what we are doing and are trying to do and really stepped up," he said.

One of the donations from Jan. 2 for $4,500 was given by an anonymous donor and the other for $6,974 was donated by a Traverse City radio station.

Ross Biederman, president of WCCW Radio, was at the city council meeting Dec. 16 when the pool's request for the city to enter a contract for $6,974 to subsidize dollar swim nights was denied by a vote of 3-2.

Many of the people who attended the meeting spoke in favor of the contract and the pool and left mumbling and shouting comments of disapproval.

Biederman was there to have his lease request for space in the city's Mount McSauba radio tower heard. Council approved the request and in two weeks WCCW is expected to hit Charlevoix's airwaves on station 107.9 FM.

But, while he was at the meeting, Biederman saw more than a tower lease come to fruition, he saw an opportunity to be part of the community before bringing his oldies station to town.

"I heard all the people speak and there is obviously a tremen-

Resolutions can be a weighty issue

How to take those holiday pounds off in the new year

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Many rang in 2003 with promises and goals of weight loss and strict exercise schedules for the new year — an annual phenomenon that for a short time floods local gyms with resolution hopefuls.

Southside Gym owner Dean Spencley, Elite Fitness Center personal trainer Bob Sandahl and Candy Smith the manager and personal trainer at Harbor Health and Fitness, all said their gyms see a big increase in users this time of year.

"Some people want to lose 10 pounds or that spare tire around their belly area. Others want to take off 30 or 40 pounds they gained last year," Spencley said.

And Spencley and Sandahl agreed that over the years they've found that only about 25 to 40 percent of those who sign on because of resolutions stay and make regular exercise part of their lifestyle throughout the year.

Sandahl said he feels the problem is the human need for instant gratification.

"We live in a world of instant gratification and that is not going to happen when you're working with your body," he said.

Each of the fitness experts said that making fitness goals a reality is possible by staying motivated.

To stay motivated, Spencley suggests changing routines and going to the gym with a workout plan.

But he and Smith both stressed not to go into a new workout regimen too motivated and overdo it. This is because pain keeps many people from returning for another workout.

For those who haven't worked out in a while they suggest coming in at a slow pace.

Smith said to make sure your workout includes a warm-up and cool down with stretching to skip any discomfort the next day.

In making the effort to stick with it, Spencley said to avoid the scale, because muscle weighs more than fat. Instead, gauge success by how you feel in your clothes and by keeping a diary to chart progress.

Smith said to write in a diary or make a mental note of your energy level, mood and sleeping patterns.

She and Sandahl said to achieve long-term fitness and weight loss goals, gym users should set short term goals, aimed at reaching three, six and nine month objectives.

In keeping motivated and setting short term goals both Sandahl and Spencley said there is one more key component to achieving success — changing eating habits.

"It's a combination of working out and changing eating habits that will change the way you look," Sandahl said.

Spencley said that doesn't mean starving yourself, but it does mean making healthy choices and eating small meals often.

Lastly, they said results will only be seen if fitness motivation and healthy eating are pursued with dedication.

"The real secret is consistency — not giving up. If you stick with it even a little bit will make a difference," Smith said.

Create winter events to boost slow season

EDITORIAL

There has been a lot of talk lately about creating a conference center in Charlevoix.

Many of those in business organizations think a conference center would be the savior of the off-season for them. They think it will bring in new customers with money to spend.

To pump up their claims, a study was conducted to see if such a center would be viable in Charlevoix. This study focused on building one near the hotels on Michigan Avenue.

But, that study indicated that a convention center was probably not going to work in Charlevoix. The study stated that a center would bring in the most people during the summer months, thus adding to summer traffic problems and parking problems. It also stated, in plain terms, it would bring in very little business during the winter.

This confused those who wanted one, so they have decided to keep looking into it. And on Jan. 6 these business groups and government officials met and discussed the study for the second time. Now they are going to propose another study that will look into the issue further.

While they may think it is silly to say, but, perhaps the study was right the first time. Perhaps a conference center is not the answer to boost revenues in the winter months.

Sure, a conference center may bring in one or two groups in the winter. But, they will most likely stay near the hotels by the conference center, as it is too cold to walk downtown most of the time, thus really only improving business at those hotels. So, we would essentially have a conference center that only supports a couple of businesses in town.

Maybe we should be spending our time trying to find something that will increase the overall business in the winter months.

Perhaps we should look at events, such as a winter carnival, ice fishing contest or festival. These events, if properly planned and promoted, could reasonably bring in more people than one or two conferences.

These events would be attended by both tourists and residents, thus increasing the overall number of people in the downtown area, not just those small numbers from out-of-town in hotels for a conference.

City fire department helps lower home insurance costs

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

Before the city council goes off on the deep end again, council members may be interested to learn that Charlevoix Fire Department's new rating with the Insurance Service Organization has been advanced from a 7 to a 5 for the city, and to a 6 rating for Marion, Norwood and Eveline Townships. (This is based on 10 being the lowest and 1 being the highest.)

What does this good news mean for us? The lower the rating the less we pay for fire insurance!

Because of this new rating, my insurance company promises me a rebate, so I advise you to check with your insurance agency informing them of this new lower rate for the city of Charlevoix and the three Townships. The amount of your rebate depends on the value and size of your home.

The Insurance Service Organization is a national organization that rates cities for fire protection. Fire Chief W. Douglas Carver Sr. tells me that the three townships have the lowest rate for any rural area in the state. The city of Charlevoix is only a point away from being rated a 4.

To achieve this lower rating all the city needs to do in conjunction with the Water Department, is to put in bigger water mains between Mercer and the Coast Guard Station, as well as build a training tower for firemen, which would not be expensive to build.

The training tower would be used for practice drills by all volunteer firefighters, both men and women, who need to pass a physical agility test. Remember that firefighters do more than fight fires. They perform high angle rescues from tall buildings and places such as water towers, confined space rescues from places like sewers, dive teams are needed for underwater rescue and ice rescue in the lakes, and of course, an emergency medical team staffs the ambulances.

Whoops, the phone rings as we speak, and Chief Carver informs me that a new ambulance just arrived. In addition he is pleased to report, that all our equipment is "right up to snuff."

Today we have four paid firemen, one for each shift. They work a 56 hour week. An additional 24 volunteer firemen and 12 emergency medical team volunteers support the line up. Plus, there is a young volunteer group, called explorer scouts, composed of 14 to 18 year olds, who hopefully will become future volunteer fire fighters.

Chief Carver, now on the verge of retirement, sees the need of the Charlevoix Fire Department to continue to grow, despite the fact that the national trend has been for fewer fires. In 1962 there were 12,000 people killed by fire. Today, even though the population has doubled, only 6,000 people have been lost by fire.

This is, he tells us, because we have better electrical appliances, more smoke alarms and there is less cigarette smoking.

It's good to know that Charlevoix is blessed with such a fine, well-rounded, well-trained fire department led for the last 10 years by an outstanding and competent fire chief. We are pleased to learn that he plans to stay in the area and we wish him well in his retirement!

More issues than pool

Editor:

I would like to thank all of the people who have sent cards, made phone calls, and spoken words of encouragement on the street or in stores to my wife and me over the past few weeks.

Although some folks are becoming annoyed with the self-appointed spokesman for the pool and pre- and post-election babble, I urge the voters not to let that dissuade them from approving a quarter mill pool tax, if that vote ever comes to pass. However, it appears that a few misguided souls think it would be easier to stack the council and shove the pool funding down people's throats.

We, in the city of Charlevoix, have a lot of work to do and will definitely need the help of the community. We need to work on a safe crossing for our children across Bridge Street near the middle school. We need to pursue an honest chance for our firemen to advance. We need to keep the Coast Guard in town, retain the old middle school and consider many more projects. As always, the council will need the voters' support.

Thank you again for all of the support you have shown so far. May the Good Lord bring peace and a healthy and prosperous New Year to all.

Recall drive restarts

Editor:

On Monday, Nov. 25, 2002, after asking several questions about petition signature validity and being assured that the signatures were okay, I signed over to the Charlevoix County Clerk signed petitions for the recall of Eveline Township Supervisor Dan Skrzeczkoski and Eveline Township Clerk Don Haydon.

On Tuesday, Nov. 26, 2002, when I stopped in to see the County Clerk, she informed me that she had made an error. The result of this error was that not just a portion of the signatures, but all 167 of the signatures were now declared invalid. This meant the process would have to begin all over again.

On Friday, Dec. 13, 2002, the petition language was again approved for clarity. Since the holidays were now in full swing, we decided we all needed to rest, enjoy our families and company, and the peace of the season.

Now, it is time to resume our efforts. We know that signatures are valid for only 90 days.

Here is how you can help. If any of you did not have an opportunity to sign the petitions last time and would like to do so, please contact me. I will have a petitioner contact you. If you were an original signer, we will be contacting you soon.

We need a minimum of 164 signatures. We need to collect as many signatures as possible between Jan. 4 and Feb. 9, 2003. Please help us put this issue on the ballot.

Aquatic therapy is great

Editor:

How wonderful it must be to be able to see into the future and know with certainty that you or someone you love will never need the benefits that aquatic therapy has to offer.

That there will never be stroke surgery, or respiratory illness or the need for a wheelchair in your family or inner circle. That no are you know will ever be in an auto accident nor suffer from arthritis or a muscular disease — all situations that aquatic therapy offers the opportunity to strengthen while offering a buoyancy that only water can provide.

Aquatic therapy kept my mother-in-law out of a wheel chair 10 years beyond what the doctors would have predicted. It also enabled a friend was was in special forces, then rendered a paraplegic to become fourth in the country in weight lifting from a wheelchair as well as the first in the country to complete a surgical residency from a wheelchair.

What is that old saying? That is you want to make God laugh, tell him your plans.

To present anything in the form of a tax being the only solution looks like a manipulative premeditated ploy for defeat. How shocking that in a place so stunningly beautiful, walks such a viscious, vindictive, malignant spirit.

Get genetic testing

Editor:

In August of 2002 our grandson, Aiden Joseph White, was born with a genetic muscular disease called spinal muscular atrophy. There are four types of this disease. Aiden had the most severe form, Type 1, which gave him a two month to two year life span. He died on December 29, 2002. We can't thank the people of this community and our wonderful church, Greensky Hill United Methodist, enough for prayers, love, hugs and concern during this time. Our goal now as a family is to raise awareness so that, until there is a cure, we can honor our grandson by sharing knowledge of this brutal disease. Our daughter and son-in-law compiled and wrote the information below to help in this effort:

First many of you are probably wondering if you are carriers and whether or not you should be tested. We'd like you to know that one in 40 people are carriers of Spinal Muscular Atrophy. Some research says one in 50, but the fact of the matter is that it is not as uncommon as one may think.

Insurance companies do not pay for carrier testing unless you have already lost a child. That is a shame because caring for a child with a terminal disease is more costly than carrier testing. You need to be your own advocate by becoming aware of your family history. Genetic counseling is well worth the time and money. The March of Dimes is a wonderful resource that provides a lot of helpful information on who should seek genetic counseling and why, nutrition before and during pregnancy, childhood diseases and a lot more.

I would recommend visiting their web site if you're contemplating genetic counseling. They have a sheet you can print out that is helpful in finding out family history. After talking with doctors there are a few things that should raise red flags in one's family history that would suggest a couple seek genetic counseling and carrier testing for childhood diseases.

SMA research has shown that women who have a history of miscarriages in their family are at a higher risk of carrying the SMA gene. Some women who are carriers will display signs of muscle weakness and/or lack coordination in sports or other physical activities.

Another disease that is high amongst the caucasian population is Cystic Fibrosis. If you and your mate are caucasian and wanting to have children, it is now recommended by the March of Dimes that you have carrier testing. It is recessive like SMA. The point we're trying to make is that if you look at your ethnicity and family history, with the help of a doctor, you can become aware of possible diseases that your children could be born with.

We hope you will visit www.fsma.org to learn more about SMA as well as pass it along to other young couples that want to have children. Our goal is to honor our son by raising awareness and helping others. Please know that we respect that each and every person has her or his own beliefs and we do not judge anyone for any choice they make, we are only sharing some information that would have saved us a lot of pain.

We hope you'll join us by spreading the word. SMA is the number two genetic killer for children under the age of two.

Thank you for being such a caring community!

Winter eagle count underway in state

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources wants Charlevoix resident's help with counting Bald Eagles in the area.

Glen Matthews, wildlife supervisor at the Gaylord office of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, said from Jan. 1 to Jan. 15 each year, the public is asked to report eagle sightings to the state by either calling or e-mailing the department.

Residents are asked to report the sightings, locations and behavior of any eagle they see. This is done to give officials a better understanding of how many eagles are in the wild.

To report a bald eagle during this time, contact the Michigan Department of Natural Resources by calling (517) 373-1263 or (989) 732-3541. You can also access the reporting form on the department's web site at www.dnr.state.mi.us.

This survey is part of a national winter survey.

"There are new nests to report every year in northern Michigan. The numbers have gradually been going up," he said.

According to Matthews, the birds were starting to grow in numbers in the interior sections of the state in the 1970s. By the 1980s and 1990s, eagles numbers started to grow along the Great Lakes in northern Michigan.

"To my knowledge, there are two bald eagle territories that include Charlevoix County mainland. One around Walloon Lake and another in the lower Jordan River," he said.

Eagles have been spotted around Lake Charlevoix and in Fisherman's Island State Park.

According to the department, bald eagles are found in all 83 counties in Michigan. Last year's survey recorded 990 birds in 69 counties.

The adult eagle has a white head and tail, as well as hooked, yellow bills. They fly with a flat wing pattern and have wingspans up to 7-and-a-half feet.

A bald eagle can live over 20 years in the wild.

The birds are mostly spotted when they are foraging for food. They feed on road kill, rabbits, gulls and ducks, but fish are a staple of their diets.

Their nests are usually near water, such as the Great Lakes or a river.

NOTICE OF SHOW CAUSE HEARING AND JUDICIAL FORECLOSURE HEARING NON-PAYMENT OF PROPERTY TAXES

On March 1, 2002 real estate with unpaid 1998, 2000 and/or prior years property taxes was forfeited to the Charlevoix County Treasurer pursuant to the General Property Tax Act, Public Act 206 of 1893, PA 206, MCL 211.1 to 211.157, as amended.

The State of Michigan is acting as the Foreclosing Governmental Unit in proceedings to foreclose on this property for unpaid property taxes.

There are two hearings scheduled to finalize the foreclosure process. This publication is intended to provide additional notice to parties of interest in these parcels as to the nature, time, and location of these hearings.

A Show Cause Hearing is scheduled for , January 20, 2003-February 6, 2003 at 608 S Washington, Lansing MI 48933.
Any person with an interest in the property forfeited to the county treasurer may appear at the show cause hearing and redeem that property or show cause why absolute title to that property should not vest in the Foreclosing Governmental Unit.

A Judicial Foreclosure Hearing is scheduled for 2:15 PM, 02/14/03 at the 33rd Circuit Court, 301 State St, Charlevoix MI 49720.
At this hearing the Foreclosing Governmental Unit shall ask that the court enter a judgment foreclosing the property as requested in the petition for foreclosure. A person claiming an interest in a parcel of property set forth in the petition for foreclosure, who desires to contest that petition, must file written objections with the clerk of the circuit court and serve those objections on the State of Michigan, the Foreclosing Governmental Unit. The docket number of the petition is 02-142919-CZ.

If you are a person with an interest in property being foreclosed:

- You have the right to redeem this parcel from the foreclosure process by payment of all forfeited unpaid taxes, interest, penalties, and fees prior to the expiration of the redemption period. You should contact the Charlevoix County Treasurer for the amount required to redeem.
- You may lose your interest in the property as a result of the foreclosure proceeding.
- The title to the property shall vest absolutely in the Foreclosing Governmental Unit unless all forfeited unpaid delinquent taxes, interest, penalties, and fees are paid within 21 days after judgment is entered in the foreclosure proceedings.

PLEASE NOTE :

The following list represents parties that appear to have title, lien, or other apparent rights to the parcels being foreclosed by the Foreclosing Governmental Unit.

This notice is required to be given by law, even if the party no longer claims or desires an interest if it appears they hold any undischarged, apparent, or potential title or lien right to the property.

Listing of a party does NOT necessarily indicate that they are the owner of a parcel, or that they are liable for the property taxes.

This list is NOT an offering of property for sale. These parcels are NOT being sold, auctioned, or otherwise made available by virtue of this notice.

There is no procedure for purchasing these parcels from the Foreclosing Governmental Unit at this point in the foreclosure proceedings. Those parcels that are foreclosed and not redeemed may become available at public auction in July, September, and November of 2003. These parcels remain the property of their current owner until redemption rights have expired. No party should make any attempt to inspect or enter upon these parcels assuming them to be for sale. This may constitute trespassing and subject the offender to criminal prosecution. The street address of the parcels listed is based on local records and is not guaranteed to be the actual location of the property.

The amount due listed indicates the balance which was due as of forfeiture on March 1, 2002. The current amount required to redeem must be obtained from the Charlevoix County Treasurer, as additional penalties, fees, and interest have accrued since forfeiture.

American Red Cross Fish-in starts at area bank

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Customers at Charlevoix State Bank on State Street are discovering an odd new fish on display in the business' lobby — a large fiberglass one with scenes of Charlevoix during fall, winter, spring and summer.

"It's beautiful....a beautiful piece of artwork," Richard Hodgson, chairman of the bank, said. The fish has been on display at the bank since New Year's Eve.

The fish is the first of several other fish that will be throughout Charlevoix and northern Michigan this summer as a fund-raiser for the American Red Cross of Northern Lower Michigan, called the Great Northern Fish-In. Each fish is sponsored by an area business and painted by an area artist in a design of their choosing.

The fish will be displayed outside of businesses, on side walks and in parks throughout the north. In August, the fish will be auctioned off, with the proceeds going to the Red Cross. However, sponsors of the fish do have the option of keeping the piece.

Marcia Varble, a member of the Fish-In committee with the Red Cross, said the group based the idea on the "Big Pig Gig" in Cincinnati, Ohio and the "Festival of Fins" in New Orlean's, La.

She said the organization has been working on this project for about a year and wants to have about 50 fish throughout northern Michigan this summer. Besides the Charlevoix State Bank fish, the other fish will appear on the streets in June.

Varble added five-and-a-half fish have already been purchased. Charlevoix State Bank has paid for four, East Jordan High School has bought one, Charlevoix High School is sponsoring one and Beaver Island Community School has a half of a fish.

The Red Cross is looking for an additional $600 to fund the rest of Beaver Island's fish.

Each of the fiberglass fish are made by Glass Hands in Cincinnati, Ohio and were designed by Beaver Island artists Grant West and Eric Heline. Each fish is about 5 feet, 4 inches long and 3 feet, 4 inches high.

After the fish are made, sponsors can pick an artist who will bring some color and life to it. It can take up to a month for the artist to finish working on the fish.

The Charlevoix State Bank fish was painted by Charlevoix artists Russ and Sue Bolt.

Sue said when she was asked to paint the first fish, she thought it sounded like fun. She decided she would paint something on the fish that would "hit" everyone in the community and painted scenes of Charlevoix in every season.

On the bottom of the fish, she and her husband, Russ, added paintings of all the freshwater fish in Michigan. And in the mouth, she created little fishing boats as teeth.

"Once we started to paint, it took us about a week of solid painting at six hours a day," Sue said.

However, this did not tire Sue or Russ down and they are ready to lend their skills to the project again.

"I would love to do another one," she said.

If you would like to sponsor a fish, contact the American Red Cross of Northern Michigan at (231) 348-7666 or visit the web at www.greatfish-in.com. In addition to sponsors, the Red Cross is seeking artists for the Fish-in. If you would like to lend your talents to this project, call (231) 348-7666 or visit the web at www.greatfish-in.com.

Revised master plan, zoning up for review in Eveline

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Eveline Township's newly revised master plan and zoning ordinance are ready for review.

Back-to-back meetings next week will get the approval process rolling in the township for both documents.

Members of the township planning commission will present and discuss the two zoning documents with the township board at its meeting scheduled to take place at 7 p.m., Jan. 14 at the township hall located at 08525 Ferry Road in East Jordan. No decision on adopting either the master plan or the ordinance will be made.

"We'll discuss the ordinance with the board but we feel we are pretty well done," planning commission chairman, Eric Beishlag, said.

Then, at 7 p.m., Jan. 15 the planning commission will return to the township hall to vote whether or not to send the revised ordinance and master plan to surrounding township boards and the Charlevoix County Planning Commission for review.

Beishlag said the planning commission will wait to get comments back from the county planning commission before scheduling public hearings to discuss the ordinance and master plan.

"If they (the county planning commission) don't come up with anything that needs to be changed, I feel we've got it," he said.

The ordinance and master plan address regulations of controversial wind turbine generators. The master plan specifies an area where they could be permitted and the ordinance regulates that area.

The ordinance was adopted in October of 2001 and an application for a special use permit was submitted in November of 2001 by representatives of Bay Windpower of Suttons Bay. The application sought the right to build a wind monitoring device on the property of Dawson and Mark "Barney" Way near Ferry and Brock roads.

It also included a long-range

New library system gives users expanded book titles

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix book worms will soon be able to check out their favorite texts or draw needed research from libraries across the state through a new program called the Michigan Electronic Library Catalog (MELCAT).

"It's really exciting, it's the wave of the future," Charlevoix Public Library director Valerie Meyerson said.

She explained that the cataloging program is a new system being developed by the Library of Michigan that will link all the libraries in the state.

Charlevoix Public Library's recent transition to a shared system called SIRSI puts it in a good position to be connected in the state program's "first wave." The local library recently received an information request from the state so bids can be formulated and planning for the first wave, which is scheduled to begin this fall, can get underway.

"For us it's a great opportunity. It shows even more that we moved in the right direction when we bought this (SIRSI) system, because the library world is moving in the direction of shared systems," she said.

The state electronic library catalog system will connect libraries statewide, allowing Charlevoix patrons to check books out of libraries from Detroit to Iron Mountain using computers at the library and at home.

The library initiated a similar program last year called SIRSI — a shared library information system. Charlevoix shares one database with several libraries including: Petoskey Public Library, Alpena Public Library, Cheboygan Public Library, Crawford County Public Library and Northern Michigan Hospital's library.

Using the current shared system, library patrons are able to search for books at home using the library's web site (www.charlevoix.lib.mi.us). Any books at all of the aforementioned libraries are at a users immediate disposal because a patron of Charlevoix Public Library is also registered at all the others. A book can be checked out and delivered to the most convenient library. Then, when the book comes in, the library notifies the person who held it.

Meyerson said that since the shared system has been up and running the books people want are in their hands fast.

The new state program will expand the local, small shared system to a statewide sharing program.

To operate the program, libraries will be given software capable of searching the servers of libraries across the state. From Charlevoix's web site users will be able to click on MELCAT and do a statewide search from home, check shelf status of books and check books out. The books are then delivered to Charlevoix or the user's closest library.

Meyerson said the state system will eliminate a lot of paperwork for libraries. In the past, borrowing books from libraries outside the SIRSI system has involved a lot of paperwork and has taken about two weeks to have the book delivered. But with the user initiating the loan, the library or "middle man" is cut out and Meyerson estimates books arriving in three to four days.

While the new system sounds like a dream come true for library users, postal costs could create a financial nightmare for administrators of big libraries.

Charlevoix's cooperative currently pays $60,000 annually for its shared system. Meyerson said a state program could free that money up and it could be used to pay Charlevoix's postal costs. But she said for the system to work for larger libraries the postal costs question will have to be answered.

Meyerson said funding for the state project will likely come from a federal grant through the Library Services and Technology Act (LSTA) which is administered by the Library of Michigan — the same source of Charlevoix's SIRSI system funding.

She said this year the state is directing the grant funds to libraries that want to join existing shared systems, like the SIRSI system, because the fewer databases the statewide system has to search, the faster it will be.

Because of the state's desire to have libraries join shared systems, Meyerson has received letters from several libraries interested in joining the SIRSI consortium including: Boyne District Library, Crooked Tree District Library and Presque Isle District Library. Officials from these libraries are currently working to secure grants to join the Charlevoix system and expand the shared database.

HEALTH

Why your sight is blurry around the age of 40

Dr. Robert and Kimberly Molter

'Your health'

It's your fortieth birthday and you've just awakened. It's a beautiful day outside with the sun shining just for you. So far, so good.

You pick up the magazine on the night stand you had started to look through last night. But wait, the printing is completely blurry today and yesterday you could see it just fine.

People really have told us similar stories. In truth, your eyes do start telling you, somewhere in around age 40 that you aren't 20 anymore. Some people start noticing difficulty with near work, not only reading, but sometimes sewing, crafts and computer work even at age 35, while others can hold off until closer to age 50 before reading correction is needed.

Sometimes blur is s primary symptom, but fatigue and headaches can also occur or even a slowness in refocusing at distance after extended near work. What is happening to your 40-year-old eyes and what can you possibly do about it?

What is happening is completely natural; as one ages the lens in the eye is flexible, in a child and young adult and as one focuses from near to far or vice versa the lens is pulled into a thicker or thinner shape by a unique muscle in the eye behind the iris. As the lens ages it does not change shape as easily to focus at different distances. If you've never needed glasses before sometimes this comes as a surprise that you "suddenly" can't read those medicine bottles or see the sliver in your child's finger that he pushes right in front of your eyes.

If you are near-sighted, you may notice with amazement that you can see better with your glasses off for those near tasks.

What is one to do? You hear the word bifocal and think, "Oh no that's what my parents wear." Well, technology has come a long way and there are many options for vision correction now.

Most people in today's computer using lifestyle do best with a progressive lens. In a bifocal lens there is a distance and near portion divide by a line. In a progress lens, the power in the lens changes gradually, progresses through the lens, from distance to near and has an intermediate area built in for tasks such as computer and other tasks you might do at an arm's length. There is no visible line in this lens so no one knows you are wearing a "bifocal."

Lens materials today are also much improved from those of yesteryear. Strong prescriptions can be made much thinner by using different plastics which work by bending light rays at a steeper angle or by grinding methods which can fabricate a lens with a center thickness of only 10 millimeters. Grinding lenses aspherically reduces the "bubble" look to some thicker glasses and reduces that magnified eye look.

Glare free lenses are catching on quickly in America, they are the norm in European countries, and not only make the lenses in the frame less visible so as to better see those baby blues, but also have benefits of reducing glare with night driving and computer screens.

Can you wear contact lenses with those 40-year-old eyes? Certainly. There are bifocal contact lenses, with several new designs available. There are also other ways that contacts can be adapted to be used for work or leisure activities.

There are many options to explore today for anyone waking to his or her fortieth birthday. Remember that while you have no choice about getting older, there are several creative ways to compensate for your new situation.

JAN 2003

Real estate agency closes Charlevoix office

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Frisbey/GMAC real estate office of Charlevoix has closed shop.

According to Mark Knapp, former vice president of Frisbey, the Charlevoix office was bought by Vacation Properties Network last year. The sale became official on Jan 1, 2003, but the Charlevoix Frisbey office closed on Dec. 15. The office was near Oleson's food center on Antrim Street.

Knapp, a 23-year employee of Frisbey, and agents Terry Edger and Ross Maxwell have moved over to Vacation Properties Network in Charlevoix. A couple of the agents have gone on to other real estate offices and one stayed on with the Frisbey company.

"I think it is a great move for us," Knapp said. "It gives Petoskey a chance to concentrate on their market area. We were just a satellite office."

Knapp is now an associate broker with Vacation Properties Network.

Frisbey still has its main office in Petoskey. The company had a Charlevoix office for six years.

Pat Frisbey, owner of Frisbey/GMAC, said the deal was definitely good for her company as it allows her to concentrate more effort on its Petoskey area, which is where the business started in 1969.

She stressed that Frisbey/GMAC still sells property in the Charlevoix area, as well as the rest of the state.

"This area (Petoskey and its surrounding communities) is sort of going to be our main focus," she said.

Township ordinance, plan going before public

plan to construct five wind turbine generators on the Way property and two on the neighboring property of Ralph Richardson if adequate winds were detected.

But when neighbors caught wind of the plan they were outraged and formed the Eveline Township Preservation Group to fight the placement of wind turbine generators in the township.

They claim property values of residents nearby would be negatively impacted with factors like noise, a possible safety hazard and a negative aesthetic impact playing a role.

Aside from these claims made by some residents, they also assert that when the township changed its zoning ordinance in October to include provisions for wind turbine generators, the process followed was illegal. Both factors prompted the preservation group to demand revisions be made.

The township board and planning commission have since been working to revise the ordinance and master plan.

Beishlag said the new ordinance being presented to the board Jan. 14 does not ban wind turbine generators from the township, because by law it cannot, but it does regulate them.

However, he said the size restriction, which was a concern for residents, "didn't change much," neither did noise limits which remain at 50 decibels.

Beishlag said the noise regulation choice was made in accordance with the national trend — across the United States zoning ordinances dealing with wind turbines set limits between 50 and 60 decibels.

The master plan which specifies the area where wind turbines may be located includes five proposed districts.

Beishlag feels the changes to both do address residents' concerns.

"In a lot of instances we went beyond what the preservation group originally asked for," he said. "It's possible for them (township residents) to get it (approval for a wind tower), but the ordinance really limits them."

Beishlag said he thinks the planning commission has made the right changes because township residents that are prospective wind turbine clients and the preservation group will likely both be dissatisfied.

"If both sides are unhappy, we must have done a good job," he said.

Conference center under consideration

ly competitive business and it is not without risk," he said. "You don't want to build a facility that is hard to use, there are too many other options."

He said during the group's exploration of the issue they found Charlevoix's strength and ability to draw groups to a facility is its perceived "mystique."

However, the largest percentage of the 140 to 160 events a year that would be drawn to Charlevoix would be during peak tourist season in late June through early August.

He said these summer events would account for 40 percent of the potential revenue and that a conference facility could bring $8 to $10 million annually to Charlevoix that is not here now.

"The survey told us that the majority of revenue generating for a facility in his community would come about in the same weeks that are already busy. Demand is not as deep in the shoulder season," Skelton said.

But he also said the survey revealed there is a potential for Charlevoix to build a shoulder season and this will take community involvement. It will require events planning and coordination from merchants, restaurants and related support businesses who are willing to stay open and service conference attendees.

Members of all the groups who attended the meeting to represent Charlevoix's business and administrative community said developing this shoulder season, May, half of June, September and October development is their goal.

"It's not the aim of the DDA to do something that could negatively impact the quality of life in the summer. It's our desire to see if there is a cost effective way to stimulate the local economy during that shoulder season. If it's not viable unless it's geared up in the summer, I don't want any part of it," Dan Barron, a member of the DDA, said.

So Skelton will now go back to the drawing board and look at the revenue potential in the shoulder and off seasons and compare that to the cost of development. The off season was pinpointed by Skelton as November through mid April.

Cost of development without that peak use time was also discussed.

Skelton said a facility between 8,000 and 10,000 square feet would be appropriate to accommodate over 300 people for larger social events and at a minimum, construction would cost $2 million.

DDA member John Taylor suggested saving money by down sizing the facility itself. Skelton said 56 percent of the meetings in Michigan include 40 to 100 attendees.

But Taylor said a facility that can accommodate 150 to 200 people would likely be a better fit for Charlevoix.

. "With a smaller facility there is less of a parking problem, no site limitation (the site is 10,000 square feet) and because it would be more affordable we would see a quicker return on our dollar without dipping into the July and August season," he said.

While Skelton was skeptical that the shoulder season would generate enough revenue to pay for the facility he said there may be some economic development grants available through the state to build it. The consulting group would help explore those options if the project progresses to that phase.

The convention study committee met with Skelton Jan. 7 to formulate a plan of attack as to how the study will now proceed. City Manager Mike Wiesner said the proposal should be ready for review by the chamber and city administrative bodies in a week.

The committee includes: Wiesner, DDA Chairman Hugh Mason, mayor Gabe Campbell, city planner Gerry Harsch, Steve Bennett and Tracy Sell, representing the visitors bureau, and Jacqueline Merta and John Campbell, representing the chamber.

The total cost of the study is $27,500. The DDA authorized use of $15,000 for the study and the remaining $14,500 was funded by the chamber and the visitor's bureau. So far the study has cost $16,000.

Frey grant to pool may not be in jeopardy

POOL

dous amount of interest in it. I thought, here's an opportunity for us to do something positive in the community from the get go," he said.

Biederman did not disagree with council's decision, but saw utility in a program like Dollar Nights, which offers discounted recreational swim time for families three nights a week.

"The read I got from city council was they weren't opposed to the pool or Dollar Nights. They had issues with using tax dollars to do something extra and they didn't feel it was the right thing for the city to do; that didn't mean they thought it was a bad program," he said.

In spite of council's opinion about whether or not the program is good or bad, its decision raised concerns about whether the pool would get its $25,000 challenge grant from the Frey Foundation which would put the Dollar Nights program in jeopardy. The grant requires the pool receive $25,000 from government entities including schools, townships and cities.

Biederman contacted Gooch in the week following the meeting and inquired about the possibility of a donation from the station qualifying for the Frey Foundation grant.

Gooch followed up with the foundation and found that the money would not qualify for the grant, but Biederman opted to write the check as a donation to the program anyway.

Biederman's donation and those of others were enough to secure Dollar Nights for 2003 and Gooch said things with the Frey Foundation are looking positive too.

"Things are looking better. In the long-run, I think we have a good chance of making the Frey Foundation grant," he said.

The pool board is currently working with the Grand Traverse Tribe of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians and the Emmet County Revenue Sharing Board to secure additional funds. Pool representatives have until Nov. 30, 2003 to acquire the full amount Charlevoix and Hayes townships have already signed on.

Basketball team remains undefeated

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

In their first game back after the holiday break, the Charlevoix Rayders (4-0 overall, 2-0 conference) trounced East Jordan, 81-47.

"I thought it was our best game of the year," coach Keith Haske said. "I was pleased with our intensity. We played harder than we had been and our press worked well. That's more the kind of basketball that we're looking to play."

Both teams started slowly with neither team scoring for the first two minutes of the game. After they traded hoops for a 2-2 tie, Charlevoix scored the last 11 points of the quarter for a 13-2 lead. Scott Friske scored five and Bryce Daly had four in the Rayders flurry.

The Rayders scored the first seven points of the second quarter to extend the lead to 20-4 on a Travis Smith three-pointer. The Red Devils were no closer than 14 points the rest of the game. Charlevoix led 36-16 at the half.

Friske scored the final Rayder four points of the first half and the first nine of the second half as Charlevoix further extended the lead. Another Smith three-pointer pushed the lead over 30 points at 52-21 midway through the third stanza.

Following an East Jordan bucket, Ryan DeYoung scored six straight points for a 58-23 Charlevoix lead. The Rayders led 62-29 after three quarters before both teams emptied their benches and played a relatively even final period.

Friske led all scorers with 20 points and pulled down 14 rebounds. DeYoung finished with 14 points. Spencer Bryan and Todd Carey scored 10 and eight points respectively.

Daly dished out three assists and had three steals. Smith handed out five assists. David Shearer swiped four steals.

"DeYoung played well," Haske said. "We've been working with him on playing more offensively and he looked to shoot the ball more than he had been."

The junior varsity team also defeated East Jordan, 55-52 as Mitchell Klooster scored 16 points.

Charlevoix traveled to St. Ignace for a non-conference game on Jan. 7. Results were unavailable at press time. They return to Lake Michigan Conference action on Jan. 10 at Elk Rapids.

Volleyball team has good week in tournaments

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders volleyball team had a good week, winning two of three matches in a quad match and finishing fourth in the Petoskey Invitational.

Charlevoix lost to Kingsley, 2-15, 5-15; defeated Maple City Glen Lake 15-11, 12; and Traverse City Christian 18-16, 11-15, 15-11. At Petoskey, the Rayders won their pool, splitting with Cheboygan 15-7, 10-12 and with Petoskey 15-12, 12-15; and defeating St. Ignace 15-6, 15-11 and Grayling 15-7, 15-5.

In the semi-finals, Charlevoix lost to Gaylord 15-6, 15-7 and Petoskey beat the Rayders in the consolation match, 15-11, 15-17, 15-3.

"We played some very tough teams, including Kingsley who is 17-1 overall," coach Liz Grunch said. "But overall I think the girls are doing quite well. We've got a young team and they can play a little tentative at times, but they are really improving and will continue to get better all season long."

In the home matches, Kari Way led the attack with 18 kills. Theresa Martin and Natashia Kleiber had 10 each. According to Grunch, the defense was led by Kleiber and Shayna Drost. Jessica Pettis was the leading server with four aces.

In the Petoskey tourney, Kleiber led the Rayders with 25 kills. Way added 23. Becca Kanine passed out 74 assists and was named to the all-tournament team.

Martin was named the team MVP and had 12 blocks. Kleiber, Pettis and Drost keyed the defense.

Grunch praised the offensive play of Way.

"She's only a sophomore, but she's almost leading our team in kills and she did lead us last night (in the quad match)," Grunch said. "Theresa Martin and Andrea Ruhlman have also been playing real well for us at the net."

Defensively, the leader all season long has been Kleiber.

"She's just an amazing defensive player," Grunch said. "She takes away many sure points from the opponents."

The Rayders return to action Jan. 9 at home against Elk Rapids.

SCRAPBOOK

Writer shares memories of school in Charlevoix

Marilyn Boss

'Days gone by'

In 1937, I was 4-and-a-half years old, and ready for school. At that time, you could begin school at four, and so I and a few other 4-year-olds joined our classmates at the lovely little kindergarten classroom, equipped with a fish pond and play house.

Miss Bush was our teacher, and each class only had one teacher. The little play house had an ironing board and iron, broom and dustpan, stove, dishes and most things that our mothers used at home. Whoever designed it really created many happy memories for us lucky kids. The fish pond was beautifully made, with tiles around it. It was located in the middle of the south side of the room and a curved bench faced it, so we could all sit there and watch the ceramic fish in the middle of the fountain spurt out water all day as Miss Bush taught us.

In the pond were little turtles and goldfish and it was such fun to get on our knees and watch the action. Once or twice in the school year, someone would fall in and they had to change into dry clothes and wait for their wet ones to dry over the heater. The walls of the pond were built up about one foot off the floor and the pond lent itself to curious little ones.

Each child had to bring a blanket or carpet to lie on when it was time for a rest period. At Christmas, we had a program on the stage at the middle school. I remember telling my mother that I was supposed to be there. She didn't know it and quickly got me ready and we hurried to the school, where we climbed the steps of the stage and I made it in time to sing with the rest of the class.

In later years, my aunt, Dorothy McRae, became the kindergarten teacher, and today, my daughter, Diane Priess, fills that position.

The school was built very well, with many windows in each room, making the rooms bright and cheery. The doors and window trim were made of oak. Blackboards covered the west wall and our desks faced the teacher, who had her desk at the front of the room. The floors in the halls were made of terrazzo and a horrible sounding horn would buzz as we would get up and file out of our room to the playground. It was always quite an exciting time.

Miss Mapes was our teacher in first grade. We were learning to read and spell our names. We had recess outside on the playground, where there were swings. I remember the beechnut trees, which dropped their nuts in the fall. They were a delicious sweet tasting nut and we tried to get some before the squirrels did.

In second grade, Miss Milner taught us our subtraction and addition. At one time, my mother was sick and we kids went to East Jordan to spend some time with my grandmother, Jessie Hager, who was a third and fourth grade teacher there. I loved to be there, she would let me come in her class sometimes, with the older kids.

Mrs. Dick was our third grade teacher. She was very strict and we all minded what she told us. Miss Wiltse was our fourth grade teacher and she was really liked by the kids.

Miss Little taught us in fifth grade. She lived up to her name, as she was a small woman.

In sixth grade we had Miss Buettner for our teacher. The things I remember most about her was that she would read some exciting story each day to us, if we were good. She was a very pretty lady and loved by the class.

Then came the transition to the seventh grade. What a change it was for us to go from one class to the next and have male teachers too! Seventh and eighth grades made it much easier to then move into the big high school building, located next to the grade school and connected by a tunnel.

The high school building was three stories tall with the basement serving as a place for the shop, a lunchroom and bathrooms. There were many stairs to climb out of the basement and up to the main floor which housed four classrooms. Then you had to climb two stories of stairs to reach the study hall, which was a big room with desks. Off the front of the study hall were two classrooms and to the side was one where Mr. Novak taught. The principal Mr. Bingham had his office on the north side of the hall. He was very strict and we respected that. The only time girls could wear slacks to school was Friday when we had pep meetings for the game that night.

The gym was used for many purposes. We had our junior and senior plays on the stage where we also tried out for parts. I was in both and remember the excitement of performing there. The bands always practiced and performed on their stage. When performances were put on, janitors set out the double seated maple hardwood folding chairs on the gym floor. There was a pull down movie screen on the stage and a projector in the back of the gym on the second floor.

This 1927 building that housed the gym and grade school rooms was state-of-the-art for the time. Mr. Bennett was our superintendent of schools. Our teachers were: Clarence Odmark, Holly Johnson, Max Novak, Ray Kipke, Miss G. Petterson, Leonard Burns, Florence Milner, William Billings, Norman Gallagher, Larry Tuomela and Stewart Coleman.

My class of 1950 had 55 members and 16 of them now live in Charlevoix. Some were here all their lives and some have retired here. It was a grand 13 years in our school and we received a great education, thanks to our many dedicated teachers.

I am sure my classmates feel as I do, that we were provided with a small town school which excelled in personal contact with each other and those who taught us through those years, making wonderful memories.

Community leaders honored

'Citizen of the Year' awarded to Feindt

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix's Mary Feindt, 86, was honored Jan. 9 by the area business people at the chamber of commerce's annual meeting, where she was named "Citizen of the Year."

Mary Feindt

Mary's son, Larry, accepted the award on behalf of his mother to a standing ovation of attendees in the Grey Gables restaurant.

"I was shocked," Mary said she thought when she was told she was going to receive the honor. "It's a very high honor. I so enjoy my work, that I don't think about honors much. But, when I get one, it is nice."

John Campbell, the new president of the chamber board, announced the award at the meeting. He said in addition to being a business person, wife, mother and grandmother, she has been a mentor to many in the community.

Her touch can be seen throughout the surveying and title industry in Charlevoix, as many of those in practice learned from Mary.

Mary came to Charlevoix in 1938, at the age of 22. She had just graduated from the University of Michigan as the first woman to receive a degree from the engineering school.

But, because she was a woman, Mary was having difficulty finding a job that would allow her to meet her apprenticeship requirements. In fact, while in school, one dean encouraged her to quit and one professor flunked her, just because she was a female.

When she graduated, the prejudice she faced at the university overlapped into the business world. However, one of her professors was able to help her get an apprenticeship with Robert Sloan, who owned a surveying business in Charlevoix.

"Charlevoix was a fine community....it was a good town to be in," she said. Mary added the people of

Corley, Maltese awarded

At the 45th Annual Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce meeting Jan. 9 two Charlevoix men were recognized for their contributions to the community.

Jerry Corley, a key player in several volunteer endeavors, including the recent extension of the Charlevoix portion of the Little Traverse Wheelway, was named "Ambassador of the Year" by the chamber board of directors. And the late Joe Maltese, a visionary who saw the potential for Charlevoix to become a fishing destination, was chosen for the "Chairman's Award" by outgoing board chairman Roger Nesburg.

"They (Corley, Maltese and Mary Feindt, who was awarded citizen of the year) just do things because they have community spirit, there is no motive, they just want to make things better for everyone," John Campbell, the newly appointed chairman of the chamber of commerce board of directors, said.

According to Campbell and Nesburg, choices for this year were based on both Corley and Maltese's selfless

Citizens questioned on development

Half of Charlevoix County's registered voters will be sent an attitude survey, which will help county planners gauge attitudes toward land development.

Surveys will be sent out Jan. 24 to at least 10,500 county residents and results will help guide revisions of the countywide land use plan. The surveys are a follow-up to visioning sessions that took place at locations across the county over the summer.

"(Unlike the visioning sessions) Giving people the attitude survey will give them an opportunity to respond in the comfort of their homes," Charlevoix County Planner Larry Sullivan said. "I feel it will bring in a tremendous amount of input from the public about development — both what and to some extent where they want to see it happen in the county."

Sullivan said this input is important because for the land use plan to be successful it needs public backing.

He said some people want to see strict land use controls across the county while others want few restrictions.

"There is a wide diversity of attitudes in the county that we want to take into account as we develop plans. We want to make sure these opinions are reflected in what the people of the county want to see happen," he said.

The planning department chose who would be surveyed by sending a survey to every other name on the qualified voter's list. The Charlevoix County Personnel Committee will meet Jan. 15 to discuss whether or not to include an additional 2,000 surveys that would be sent to non-resident property owners.

Countywide results will not only be tabulated, but township and city results will also be tallied. While individual units of government will not

Parking lot to improve

Grant to pay for 90 percent of project

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Users of the Charlevoix Municipal Airport will soon experience a long awaited, smooth ride through the airport parking lot.

The city of Charlevoix recently received news that the Michigan Department of Transportation will likely fund 90 percent of the parking lot paving project in 2003. Funding sources for the remaining 10 percent have not been decided.

City Manager Mike Wiesner estimated the total project cost to fall between $900,000 and $950,000.

"It's over 400 parking spots, it's a big lot," he said.

He said the city is pleased with the commission's assistance. Typically airport projects receive funding in the 90 to 95 percent range.

Airport Manager Karyn Brooks said the project has been on the city's plate for years and will complete the airport updating package.

"It's something that the city has never put down; it's always been a project they would like to see come to fruition," she said. "It's the icing on the cake. With the new terminal building a couple of years ago, the new beautifully landscaped berm and now we can look at a paved parking lot with nice lighting and landscaping included in that design."

At the Jan. 6 organizational city council meeting Wiesner said the city hopes to start construction this fall, which means customers who have become accustomed to navigating pot holes and mud won't have to battle the parking lot much longer.

"If you go out there in wet weather, it's an obvious need," Wiesner said.

Brooks said over the years the airport has received numerous complaints about the parking lot and vehicles were often stuck in the mud.

Airport engineers Mead and Hunt of Lansing are expected to be in town next week to look at the layout. The Charlevoix Municipal Airport in located on US-31 South, near Harbor Industries.

This mudhole is just one of many that drivers must currently navigate around in the airport parking lot. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

Traffic problems discussed again

Planning for solutions to Charlevoix's summer traffic debacle will again be discussed at an upcoming meeting.

Charlevoix's City Council, Downtown Development Authority, Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors and the Convention and Visitors Bureau will meet with Richard Lyles, a traffic consultant with his firm Richard Lyles and Associates of Williamston.

At the meeting which is scheduled to take place at 5:30 p.m., Jan. 20 at Charlevoix's City Hall, Lyles and the groups will review the results of a traffic report conducted by his firm.

The aim of the city, chamber and the bureau, in pursuing the traffic study was to alleviate peak season congestion and make the summer Bridge Street commute faster.

The Lyles group made traffic observations in July and August and returned to tell city officials, pedestrians aren't the major contributor to traffic congestion. Instead, his group pointed the finger at the drawbridge and Bridge Street, a two-lane, two-way traffic road and said there isn't one magic solution.

"There is no overarching solution to the problems associated with pedestrian-vehicle interactions in the downtown area," Lyles states in his firm's findings. "Even without any left turns or pedestrians, Bridge Street traffic would still be heavy — the two-lane, two-way street is simply inadequate to carry the traffic and the bridge operation really

Support veterans' work on memorial

EDITORIAL

War is never romantic.

War is horror. It is death. It is destruction. It tears apart lives, communities and the world. It is something that should only be used by nations unless it is absolutely necessary.

There are those of us who understand this by reading the news, watching the television and listening to the stories of our elders. And, then, there are those of us who know these truths first-hand.

While it may be nations and governments that declare war, the human beings who live in those nations are the ones who fight and die during them. These soldiers are those who face unforeseen horrors for the love of their country.

Whether you approve or disapprove of a war does not diminish the bravery that those who fight in it show. For that they should all be recognized.

Locally, Charlevoix veterans are working to do just that. They are trying to raise money to build a memorial for Veteran's Park on Bridge Street that will contain the names of every Charlevoix resident killed in action during any war in our nation's history. See page 9 for more information.

It is a noble cause that should be supported heartily.

But to do this, these veterans need financial support and information.

The finances will be used to pay for the construction of the memorial. They need $13,000 to build this memorial. So far, they have raised $2,009. Those who wish to donate, can do so by sending a check to the Charlevoix Area Veteran's Memorial Fund at P.O. Box 534, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

As for the information, the veterans want to make sure every Charlevoix soldier killed in action is included, therefore they need names from residents and former residents. Please see the list of names that they have compiled so far on page 10, and contact Ralph Doan at 547-0376 or Charlie Butcher at 547-4724 if you have a name that is not on the list.

No soldier should be forgotten.

Are there any trees here that are older than Charlevoix?

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

It would be safe to say that for most of human history we have in some way or another revered age — not only in people, but in other living things and artifacts as well.

As a child, I was taught reverence for my elders, although I did not understand it. Having recently reached my biblically allotted three score and 10 years (Psalm 90), I now understand that everyone should revere and applaud advanced age. I believe it was Mark Twain who wrote that at age 14, he thought his parents were the dumbest folks on earth, but that when he reached 20 he was astonished to discover how much they had learned in only six short years.

Reverence for age is like that. At 20 we are unlikely to acknowledge the wisdom of age, but at 70, age and wisdom seem to fit perfectly with one another.

As humans in times long past looked around and tried to understand a complex and often baffling world, they saw few living things that lasted longer than they did. Consulting the Guinness book of records, only elephants and tortoises come close to rivaling us in age.

But through all of that history we were surrounded by living things that outlasted us by centuries. It should come as no surprise that ancient trees are at the heart of many early human myths and that worship of trees in some form was a common human activity. A long-lived tree could look nearly the same to a human child, an adult and in old age. Until a couple of centuries ago no one knew exactly how long trees could live; all we knew was that they lasted much longer than we did.

In the more recent past, understanding of tree growth has made it possible to know the age of a specific tree with considerable precision. We are all pretty much familiar with the idea of counting the rings of growth in a cut tree trunk and learning how old the tree was. Trees live not just for centuries, but sometimes for millennia. The oldest know Bristlecone Pine sports more than 4,900 growth rings, one for each year of its life in the arid White Mountains of California. A clump of living Creosote bushes in the desert of our Southwest is somewhere beyond 12,000 years old and still going strong.

Surrounded as we are in Charlevoix with forest and trees, it would be most interesting to know if any of our local trees are older than the community of Charlevoix. To a growing Maple or Cedar or Oak, the 150 years or so of Charlevoix history would be much less than its potential lifetime.

The early views of Charlevoix from the Historical Society aren't very promising. Wood was so valuable that the whole town site appears to have been cleared before 1880.

Almost all the trees shown in early photos or lithographs seem to be those that the city founders planted along each of the developing streets. Many of those early Sugar Maple trees still line our streets, but none of them pre-date the city.

If you have a candidate for a tree older than the city of Charlevoix, please contact me and I will come and sample the tree to determine its age. The process makes it possible to see how many rings there are without damaging the tree.

Maybe we can find a tree worthy of reverence and well worth an historical plaque.

No need for convention center

Editor:

Well, they are at it again. The Downtown Development Authority (DDA) and its minions, like a dog with a bone, refuse to give up on this notion of a convention center for Charlevoix. Having received the written report from its consultant last fall, and with no one apparently able or willing to read the written word, the consultant was called to Charlevoix to "explain" the report.

I can't say that nothing new came out of the recent meeting with the consultant. Little did I know that I was living in a town that can boast of six seasons, as opposed to the usual four. Yes, my fellow citizens, Charlevoix is not only blessed with spring, summer, fall, and winter, but we also have the "shoulder" seasons as well.

Apparently, there is a season that appears after fall, but before winter and a similar "shoulder" season that appears after winter but before spring. God forbid and we should be politically incorrect and call it what is really is — the "off season." Now having two shoulder seasons will probably be a bit confusing, so my humble suggestion is that we rename one of the shoulder seasons to the "rump roast" season, since it's going to be the butt of this joke for a long time to come.

Now the consultant has not only played spin doctor by coming up with this "shoulder" season silliness, but he also now tells the DDA and others that Charlevoix has a "mystique." Oh please! I would like Mr.

Skelton to come up in the dead of winter and spend a couple of weeks. His notion of Charlevoix's "mystique," at least in those months that contain the letter "r," would substantially change.

Shame on Mr. Skelton for leading us on. In the written report he tells us that the convention center idea is not viable, yet knowing there is additional consultant fees to be made he is now willing to explore the idea further.

The DDA fascination with the convention center as its salvation of Charlevoix in the "shoulder" seasons can only be explained by the fact that someone in that group has watched the movie, "Field of Dreams" too often. For, "If we build it, they will come." For the sake of argument, let's say it gets built. If they come, what are they going to see and do?

They can look at the boats in Round Lake. No, forget that, they are all put away for the "shoulder" season. They could go skiing at Mt. McSauba (hope they're good with rope tows). They could go golfing — oh, sorry, closed for the "shoulder season." Go shopping at our local Kmart (let's hope it is still there). Walk downtown and shop, a possibility — pardon our empty store fronts. Watch Round Lake freeze over. Go ice skating at the city rink — oh, sorry again, that isn't up and running either.

The editorial in the Courier for Jan. 8 has the right idea. We don't need a convention center, we need winter events to draw people to the area. We need to give people a reason to come to Charlevoix in the winter, as opposed to going to Petoskey, Traverse City or Boyne Mountain.

The answer lies not in a building, but in ideas to promote tourism in the OFF SEASON. Let's stop spending money foolishly on consultants and start showing a little creative thinking.

Thank you

Editor:

On the night of Dec. 19, we lost our house to a fire. But also on that night, we have gained a new understanding of a very caring community.

We would like to thank all that gave their time and energy, to those who have contributed money, clothes, everyday necessities and toys for Billy. Thank you for your hugs, your prayers, your caring words. I will never forget each and every one of you. Without these things, we would not have the strength to get through this.

We feel so fortunate and blessed to live in such a giving and caring community.

May God bless you all.

Young singers

Go! Multimedia has selected two local singers to begin its artist development program. Tiffany Potter, 16, (left) and Lisa Russell, 11, (right) both from Charlevoix will have vocal instruction, dance lessons and other help in developing their talents. Potter sang one song on the NWA Band compilation CD that will be released on Jan. 10. Russell has been singing since she was 4 and is already writing songs as well as studying voice with Fran Tollas. Both girls have participated in local recitals. Go! Multimedia has provided support to other student artists in the past, but this marks the first formal commitment by the Charlevoix based non profit media company that hopes one day to release CD's by these talented young singers. Library plans being created

The building committee of the Charlevoix Public Library is continuing its work towards finalizing a site for a new facility.

Currently the committee is comparing appraisals of the current library at 109 Clinton to the school property where the old middle school currently sits. It is also continuing the work of the Phase I environmental study to determine if any site clean up is necessary.

In partnership with the Downtown Development Authority, the library is conducting a feasibility study of the old middle school site for possible use as a library or community center.

The preliminary dates for the study are as follows: Architectural drawings complete by Jan. 13, design studies begin the week of Jan. 13, architectural assessment complete by Jan. 17, complete structural assessment Jan. 24, preliminary presentation the week of Feb. 24, final presentation the week of March 10.

New chairman picked for county commission

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix County Commission has a new chairman, W. Randolf Frykberg, following a secret 4-2 vote by the commission on Jan. 8 at its organizational meeting.

W. Randolf Frykberg

"This will be a team effort with input from everyone," Frykberg said about the new commission. Frykberg is a former city manager of Boyne City.

This was the first session of the year for the commission, many of whom have just been elected. New to the commission were Frykherg, Valerie Snyder, Ronald Reinhardt and Dennis Jason. Veteran commissioners are Vic Patrick and Shirley Roloff.

Patrick was elected vice chairman by a unanimous vote.

In addition to picking leaders for the commission, members also voted to change the meeting times to 3 p.m., on the second Wednesday of the month, and at 7 p.m., on the fourth Wednesday of the month.

Commissioners also voted to have a synopsis printed in five area newspapers, including the Charlevoix Courier, of each meeting on a six month trial basis. Charlevoix County Clerk Jane Brannon said this endeavor will cost the county considerably more money, hence the trial basis.

Committees for the new commission were also set up. They include:

- Audit committee — Patrick, Roloff and Reinhardt.
- Personnel/Internal Government committee — Frykberg, Roloff and Snyder.
- Public Safety/Judicial/Building and Ground committee — Reinhardt, Jason and Patrick.

Liaisons for county boards area include:

- Road Commission — Roloff, with Reinhardt as an alternate.
- Family Independence Agency — Roloff.
- County Township Association — Reinhardt.
- Veteran's Affairs — Patrick.
- Commission on Aging — Roloff.
- Humane Society Board — Snyder.
- Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa and Chippewa — Patrick.
- District Health — Patrick and Snyder.

Obituaries

Robert H. Close: June 29, 1914 - Jan. 7, 2003

Robert H. Close, Michigan businessman, died on Jan. 7, 2003, in Charlevoix at Boulder Park Terrace. The cause was complications of Parkinson's disease. He was 88.

His career as a businessman began in Auburn, Ind., where he developed the "flex spout" for Ricke Metal Produces, a company he was fond of saying that "made bung holes in barrels." That "flex spout" was made of the new material — plastic.

After a period as vice president of Gay Toys, he went on to form his own company, Mayfair Plastics, with offices in Birmingham and later production facilities in Gaylord.

Mayfair was one of the pioneers in injection molding and made high tolerance automobile parts, canoe paddles, lightweight shovels, gear shift shafts for the Army Jeeps and the Mustang hood ornament for Ford, among many other products. He was particularly proud of his work for Bear Archery.

Bob was born in Marion, Ind., on June 29, 1914, graduated from high school in Auburn, Ind. He took correspondence courses for college credit, but never received a college degree.

He married Alice Willennar in 1933 and they had four children.

After World War II, Bob formed an aerial photograph company. Bill Fitzsimmons piloted the single engine plane and Bob climbed out on the wing and photographed local businesses, farms and homes as Bill held onto Bob's belt to keep him from falling off. Bob then developed and printed the pictures in his basement darkroom.

He was a director of the Auburn State Bank, a member of the Auburn School Board, and a member of the Auburn Country Club, Forest Lake Country Club, Crystal Downs Country Club and Petoskey-Bay View Country Club.

In the 1950s, he was an avid trap shooter, traveling to weekend meets throughout the Midwest.

He also enjoyed his several "fly-in" trips into the Ontario wild for hunting and fishing.

In 1973, he married Edith Olach and they enjoyed 30 years of married life. Bob and Edith enjoyed Bob's retirement years at the cottage on Plat Lake and in their Charlevoix home.

He is survived by his wife, Edith Close; one sister, Francis Armstrong, of Columbus, Ind.; one brother, LeRoy Close, of New Port Richey, Fla; three daughters, Marcia Korwin of Onekama, Beverly Forslund of Honor and Sanibel, Fla., and Margaret Dye of Empire; a son, William of Rochester Hills and nine grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Services were given Jan. 10, at St. Mary's Church in Charlevoix.

Memorials can be sent to Boulder Park Terrace or to St. Mary's Building Fund.

Burial was at St. Mary's Cemetery.

Anthony J. Kleiber: Jan. 24, 1928 - Jan. 7, 2003

Anthony J. Kleiber, 74, of Charlevoix, died Tuesday, Jan. 7, 2003, at his home in Charlevoix.

He was born Jan. 24, 1928 to the late Anton Kleiber and Mary (Zipperer) Kleiber in Manitowoc, Wis. Tony attended school in Manitowoc and graduated from Lincoln High in 1946. He later attended Manitowoc Vocational School where he studied blueprint reading, machinist and welding.

He served in the Korean War in the honor guard of the 45th Infantry. There he received three Battle Stars and a good conduct medal. He also served with the Occupational Forces in Japan.

By trade he was a farmer, an electrician, production foreman and real estate salesman. He moved to Charlevoix in 1967 as an electrician.

He was a member of the Holy Name Association, Manitowoc, Wis. and Knights of Columbus in Charlevoix.

Tony enjoyed his grandchildren, fishing, gardening, photographing wildlife and watching his grandchildren play sports.

On April 11, 1953, Tony married Merle A. Doucett in Silver Lake, WI at Holy Family Church.

Tony is survived by his wife, Merle; children, Cindy (Jack) Gabbard of Jonesville, Anthony (Laurie) Kleiber III of Charlevoix, Liz McClellan (Bill Brooks) of Manistee, Audrey (Robert) Roloff, Judy (Gary Smith) Johnson-Smith, George (Lisa) Kleiber, Leo (Tammy) Kleiber, Lyle Kleiber all of Charlevoix; grandchildren, Jesse and Luke Gabbard, Josh Love and Lauren Moore, Stephanie, Stacie and Bradley McClellan, Jamie and Robert Roloff, Jr., Kristine and Jarad Johnson, Nick, Jason and Kim Smith, Natashia and Alexander Kleiber, Kyle Sommers, Casaundra, Jessica, Shantel, Austin and Kendra Kleiber; great-grandchildren, Mnajaawin McClellan, Cameron Roloff and Lilymarie Johnson; siblings Bernard (Carol) Kleiber of Plymouth, Wis., (Harriet Kleiber) and Dolores (Donald) Holschbach of Manitowoc, Wis., Dorothy Peterson of Valders, Wis., Marion (Andrew) Holschbach of Two Rivers, Wis., Rose Marie (Theodore) Jarosh of Neenah, Wis., Monica (Gene) Ahrens of Sheboygan, Wis., Helen (Fred) Crocker of Trenton, N.J., Benedict (Patricia) Kleiber of Milton, Mass. Jerome Kleiber of Los Angeles, Calif. and many nieces and nephews.

Preceding him in death were grandchildren Heather Kleiber and Levi Gabbard; son-in-law Gilbert Johnson; siblings John Kleiber, Richard (Gloria) Kleiber, Rita Kleiber and (Patrick Peterson).

Memorial contributions may be contributed to Charlevoix Hospice, 601 Bridge St., East Jordan, MI 49727.

Private family services will be given at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

New officers

On Jan. 13 the Charlevoix Area Hospital Guild instated its officers for 2003. New monument to honor veterans

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

After two years of planning, local veterans are working to raise funds to pay for a new memorial to be located in Veterans Park.

The current memorial is a large boulder that sits in the center of the park and is dedicated to eight men from the Charlevoix area that were killed in World War I.

"Of course at the time the memorial was established (1932) World War II didn't even exist," Charlie Butcher, post commander of the American Legion, said.

Two years ago, local veteran Sherman Collins approached the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) groups with a list of veterans killed in World War II, the Korean War and Vietnam. He asked if there was something that could be done as a memorial to the original eight World War I veterans and the others.

After some discussion the groups decided to create a memorial for veterans that lived in the Charlevoix School District and were killed during wartime or while on active duty during peace time, dating back to the Civil War.

The groups have already Memorial in need of funding, names

VETERANS

compiled 34 names to be included on the new plaque.

A committee was formed to design a memorial that can be easily updated.

The committee includes: Butcher; Lou Orlowski, project architect and a member of the American Legion; Joseph Seidel, junior vice commander of the American Legion; Ralph Doan, senior finance officer of the American Legion; Quinton Walker Sr., a member of the American Legion; Russell Scram, a member of the VFW and David Goldstick, financial officer of the VFW.

The new memorial will replace the boulder, which will be given away as a gift.

The new memorial will stand 6 feet, 4 inches, and will be constructed of Michigan field stone in the center of the park, surrounded by a garden area. No other physical changes are planned for the park.

The groups received formal approval to move forward with the project from Charlevoix's City Council at its Jan. 6 meeting.

If the fund-raising effort which is now underway is successful in raising $13,000 — which is what the project is expected to cost — the groups hope to start construction this spring. So far, the men have raised $2,009.

A model of the memorial which was made by Orlowski is on display at Charlevoix State Bank located at 111 State Street in Charlevoix. Those who wish to donate can do so at the bank by writing a check to the Charlevoix Area Veteran's Memorial Fund or by sending checks payable to that fund to Butcher or Doan at P.O. Box 534, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Those with information about Charlevoix School District residents who died while on active duty can contact Doan at 547-0376 or Butcher at 547-4724.

The following is a list compiled so far of 34 Charlevoix servicemen who will be included on the new memorial to be constructed this spring in Veteran's Park.

- From the Civil War period: Walter Clifford who died as a result of the Indian Campaigns in the Western United States, will be included.
- From World War I, the eight men currently memorialized in the park will be recognized by the new memorial. They are: Leslie T. Shapton, Dean C. Scroggie, Harry Potter, Joseph Hollechek, Joseph E. Powers, Ray F. Solomon, George Crouter and William Burns.

Walker, L. Dale Warner, Edward Wojan and Hubert Olach.
- From Vietnam, these three Charlevoix men: Larry Elzinga, Richard Plumm and Dale Hall.

The memorial will have room for additional names of people in the armed forces, living in the Charlevoix School District, who died while on active duty during both war and peace times.

To have a name recognized contact Ralph Doan, senior finance officer of the American Legion, at 547-0376 or Charlie Butcher, post commander of the American Legion, at 547-4724.

Students help 'mush' at McSauba

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Two teams of sled dogs offered children and adults a rare chance to experience canine powered transportation at Charlevoix's Mount McSauba last weekend.

"It's fun, you're right in there with the dogs," said Charlevoix Middle School fifth grade teacher Tenille Dhaseleer, who coordinated the event.

Tasha and Ed Stielstra, owners of Nature's Kennel in Newberry, brought 20 dogs to Charlevoix Jan. 11 to raise money for the fifth grade class at Charlevoix Middle School.

Tasha Stielstra is Dhaseleer's sister, who moved to the Upper Peninsula this summer with her husband Ed from Duluth, Minn. to pursue the couple's passion for mushing full-time.

The kennel includes 60 dogs and each team consists of between six and eight dogs. Tasha and Ed steered the teams at McSauba and each sled accommodated two to three children or one adult and one child.

Dhaseleer said the Charlevoix visit was a rare opportunity for people in and around the area to discover the unique sport firsthand and also provided her students a "real life" learning experience.

Promotion of the event was tied in with students' language arts classes. Students were in charge of creating posters to be hung in area businesses and in notifying newspapers.

"They are applying writing and speaking communication skills to real life. It shows them how what they are learning can be applied to real life," she said.

For those students helping with the event this was their first time interacting and riding with sled dogs.

The Stielstras offered two minute dog powered rides from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., Saturday that wove riders up and around a small course on McSauba's bunny hill.

The cost was $5 per person and $20 per family. The $579 the event raised benefits the entire fifth grade class at Charlevoix Middle School.

The money will be used to supplement enrichment trips and for the school's advanced education program that stresses the value of learning through games and activities.

"It's about team building and working together to promote getting along skills and social skills," Dhaseleer said.

This February, Dhaseleer and fellow fifth grade teacher, Steve Seelye, will bring a group of students to the Au Sable Institute near Mancelona. There, they'll learn winter survival skills including: how to build a fire, use a compass and avoid hypothermia.

For further information about the Stielstras sled dog operation visit their web site at www.natureskennel.com.

Program in need of sponsors, funding

Junior Achievement (JA) volunteers are still raising money for the Charlevoix Schools seventh grade program entitled "International Marketplace."

Junior Achievement has partnered with Charlevoix schools over the past several years to provide business and economics programs in conjunction with the schools' social studies curriculum. Charlevoix Middle School has requested that the organization introduce "International Marketplace" for the first time this year.

The addition of seventh grade to the local Junior Achievment/Charlevoix Schools effort has increased the financial support required. Many businesses and individuals have contributed generously over the years, but when seventh grade is added, the costs go up by about $2700.

The Charlevoix Junior Achievement Advisory Board has raised about $3300 of the $5300 required to offer the programs to all three grades this year. Junior Achievement teaching consultants are local volunteer business people so costs are limited to the materials required for the actual classes.

The programs cover business and economics principles from a national and global perspective. Fifth graders study how businesses operate in the United States, including types of business organizations, resource requirements, manufacturing processes, and marketing and advertising approaches.

Sixth graders study imports and exports, the role of foreign exchange and how countries are interdependent. In studying the "International Marketplace," seventh graders learn how people and cultures throughout the world are connected through trade.

Junior Achievement is a non-profit organization serving the schools, businesses and community. Support from businesses, foundations, service clubs and individuals in Charlevoix has been excellent because these people understand the need for a well-educated workforce and appreciate the value in their investments.

Junior Achievement volunteers are continuing to make calls for additional funds.

If you wish to sponsor a class or make a contribution of any amount to the Charlevoix Schools Junior Achievement program, please contact any of the Charlevoix advisory board members: Derek Chowen, Cheri Hoffman, Becky Scheelk or Margo Johnson.

Hospital has nothing to do with Canadian telemarketer

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix Area Hospital does not endorse the efforts of a Canadian company claiming to be steering a children's book program for sick and injured children.

Healing Hands Busy Book is a telemarketing company based in Edmonton, Alberta that has contacted local businesses and requested that they sponsor activity books for sick children at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

The company solicits for a $5 donation to pay for the book and claims it will then donate them to the hospital.

But, since it has started working to get the program up and running, the hospital has received calls from businesses, including the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, wondering if the Busy Book business is sanctioned by the hospital or a telemarketing scam.

Kathy Johnson the hospital's director of development said the hospital in no way has asked them to work on the book project. And Roger Sievertson, vice president of support services at the hospital, has requested that the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department inquire about the company.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater said he received a fax from the company outlining the project, but has not yet spoken with company president David Sumner.

Sumner responded to inquiries from the Charlevoix Courier about the company, in writing.

"Hospitals are a public entity and it is our legal right to do this," he stated.

He said the Healing Hands Busy Book works independently with local businesses in several areas across the country supplying between 200 and 300 books per hospital to approximately 500 health care facilities.

"It is beyond reason why a hospital would have reservations in distributing these books to children in their care. It is our belief that anything extra that can be done to make a child's stay more comfortable, should be done," Sumner states.

Johnson said she doesn't think the sheriff's department's research will find the project is a scam, but the hospital isn't interested in being a part of the book project.

"My guess is the company is above board and down the road we will receive books, but we don't need them," she said.

Sumner thinks the hospital's position is disheartening.

Art center to show film on the ship Endurance

Rand Shackleton and Elizabeth Bakewell will speak at a special showing of a new feature documentary film about Ernest Shackleton and The Endurance.

This story is told in a 90-minute film documentary by George Butler. The film will be shown at the Petoskey Middle School Auditorium at 7 p.m., Friday and Saturday, Jan. 24 and 25 and a Family Matinee at 1 p.m. on Saturday, Jan. 25.

This film showing is a collaboration of the Crooked Tree Arts Center and Cross Village resident, Rand Shackleton.

In 1914, off the coast of Antarctica, the ship Endurance was crushed by the sea ice, leaving the crew stranded in one of the harshest regions on the planet, without communication and with only three small open lifeboats to carry them to safety.

Their leader, Ernest Shackleton, with a crew of four, set sail in one of the lifeboats for South Georgia Island, over 800 miles away. After 22 days and nights, they landed their boat on the southwest coast of South Georgia Island.

Shackleton and two of the men began a 24-mile crossing of the uncharted mountains and glaciers that lay between them and the safety of the whaling station on the other side of the island. The men reached the whaling station 36 hours later.

Three-and-a-half months later, Shackleton was able to return to Elephant Island and rescue all of his men, without losing a single person.

Photographs and film were taken during the expedition by photographer Frank Hurley, bringing the story to the world in vivid detail. These images are incorporated into Butler's film.

Both Rand Shackleton and Elizabeth Bakewell will speak at the showing of the film. Bakewell will tell about her intrepid father, who lived a large portion of his life in Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

Rand, a documentary videographer and a cousin of Ernest Shackleton, will speak about the expedition photographer and filmmaker Frank Hurley.

A short video by Jacob Warstler will also be shown. Warstler, a Boyne City High School student created a video using a newscast to share Sir Ernest Shackleton's adventure.

A reception following the presentation will feature Elizabeth Bakewell's collection of her father's artifacts.

Tickets are $10 adults and $5 for students under 18 (Saturday matince $5 all seats). Proceeds will benefit Crooked Tree Arts Center. Tickets may be purchased by calling the arts center at (231) 347-4337 or on-line at www.crookedtree.org. For more information about the film and Shackleton's adventure, visit www.endurancethemovie.com.

Ski teams open up new season nicely

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix/East Jordan high school varsity ski teams opened up the season Jan. 7 at Boyne Highlands.

The boys' team finished sixth and the girls' team finished twelfth.

"I was very surprised after the morning event, coming out in giant slalom in fourth and ending up in sixth overall considering most of the schools are class A," coach Sue Miller said about the boys' team.

As for the girls' team, Miller said, "I was happy with the girls' results. We can only get better from here on out."

She added this was the first high school meet for many of the girls and now they can get any nervous jitters out of the way.

Individual results for the boys in the giant slalom were: Taylor Fisher in eleventh with a total time of 1 minute, 2 seconds; York Smith in thirteenth with a total time of 1 minute, 3 seconds; Mike Dupuis in twenty-ninth with a total time of 1 minute, 5 seconds; Patrick Teske in fortieth, with a total time of 1 minute, 6 seconds; Andrew Mallory in forty-ninth, with a total time of 1 minute, 7 seconds and Matthew Malpass in seventy-first, with a total time of 1 minute, 14 seconds.

All members of wrestling team take home medals

All 11 members of the Charlevoix High School wrestling team took home medals Saturday from the Alpena junior varsity tournament.

Elk Rapids ends Rayders' streak

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

There has been a lot of history made in the last five years of Charlevoix boys basketball.

Two trips to the Breslin Center for the state tournament and a 20-0 regular season have all been part of Rayder basketball lore.

Charlevoix also achieved perfect 12-0 records in the Lake Michigan Conference in the 2000-01 and 2001-02 seasons. History in that regard won't repeat itself this year as the Rayders lost to Elk Rapids, 64-57 last Friday night.

"It was a league game on the road against a very good team," coach Keith Haske said. "Usually you're just happy to get out of those with a win and this time we didn't get it done."

The loss broke winning streaks of 38 regular season games and 27 conference contests.

Elk Rapids led throughout, including leads of 17-8 at the end of the first quarter, 28-27 at the half and 44-35 after three periods. The closest the Rayders came in the fourth quarter was three points.

"I was disappointed in our defensive pressure," Haske said. "Too many times after they made one pass, we just ran down to the other end. That's not Rayder basketball."

Scott Friske led the Rayders with 19 points and 12 rebounds. Bryce Daly dished out five assists while Ben Bergmann and Nate Teuscher each added eight points.

Haske said that shooting and intensity were the keys.

"We only shot 20 percent in the first half and although we improved a bit in the second half, then we couldn't make any free throws," Haske said.

"Elk Rapids played very well," he said. "They played with more intensity and shot the ball well."

Earlier in the week, Charlevoix traveled to St. Ignace and defeated the Saints, 65-53.

Friske led the team with 19 points, 18 rebounds, four assists and eight blocks in nearly a triple-double performance. Spencer Bryan and Bergmann each scored 10 while sophomore Cody Crain added nine.

Charlevoix (5-1 overall, 2-1 conference) hosted Petoskey in a non-conference tilt Jan. 13, but results were unavailable at press time. The Rayders return to Lake Michigan Conference play on Jan. 16 as they host Boyne City.

Elk Rapids stands alone at the top of the league now with a 2-0 mark, but their hold may be precarious in a competitive season in the Lake Michigan Conference.

"Before the season, I thought two or three losses might win the league," Haske said. "But maybe Elk Rapids has stepped above that. With the teams out there, looking ahead there should be a tremendous district this year."

Volleyball team shining on the court

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders volleyball team continued their winning ways with conference victories over Elk Rapids, 10-15, 15-12, 15-9 and East Jordan, 15-7, 15-7.

The Rayders are in second place in the Lake Michigan Conference with a 2-1 mark, their only loss coming to first place Harbor Springs.

"The girls are really starting to pull together," coach Liz Grunch said. "They are maturing as a team."

Against the Red Devils, Theresa Martin led the attack with five kills and three aces. Kari Way had three kills while Erin Burns served five aces.

Defensively, Charlevoix was led by Way, Becca Kanine and Shayna Drost, according to Grunch.

"It was a nice game for us where everyone got to play," Grunch said. "Everyone played well for us. We had a lot of very good points."

Kari Way led the Rayders against Elk Rapids with 15 kills. Martin and Andrea Ruhlman had six kills apiece. Martin had three blocks as well.

Kanine and Way led the servers with two aces apiece. Grunch praised the play of Natashia Kleiber and Drost on defense.

"Kari Way and Andrea Ruhlman had their best games ever without a doubt," Grunch said. "They both just killed the ball."

Charlevoix (10-8-3 overall) travels to Boyne City Thurs., Jan. 16 in Lake Michigan Conference action.

Chairman's award, Ambassador named at meeting

AWARDS

donations of time and energy to Charlevoix and its business community.

The chairman's award recognizes someone who has volunteered their time and/or resources to help the chamber.

Nesburg said he chose Maltese as the recipient because of his relentless pursuit to spur commerce in Charlevoix by establishing a strong fishery.

"His inspiration and enthusiasm enlightened a lot of people," he said. "Joe had a quest, a theory and he pursued it. He was very active in that and keeping people aware, he was relentless."

Maltese, an avid angler, spearheaded his effort to beef up Charlevoix's fishery by meeting and discussing issues with the Department of Natural Resources and working on Charlevoix fish planting projects.

Not only did he work with local entities to develop his vision, but he also put pressure on political bodies in Lansing that control the cash flow to fish hatching projects.

Maltese passed away this summer, but his work as a member of the chamber board of directors and with the Charlevoix Area Trout Tournament and his vision for Charlevoix are alive and well.

While Maltese was a major player in the quest to create a fishing tradition in Charlevoix, Corley has worked to create land based recreation possibilities.

Campbell said Corley exemplifies the spirit of the ambassador's award which is given to a person whose actions reflect the spirit of Charlevoix and of the chamber.

As vice president of the Top of Michigan Trails Council, Corley, 59, played an integral role in construction of the non-motorized path called the Little Traverse Wheelway that will one day connect Charlevoix to Harbor Springs. The Charlevoix stretch of the trail which was dedicated in the fall of 2002 spans 7.5 miles.

Even though he and his wife Judy are not members of the chamber board, they can often be found at chamber and other community functions, volunteering their time.

"We are retired and have the time, but it's also important to contribute to the community. In Charlevoix a lot of people give to the community, we are just glad to do it," he said.

The couple moved to Charlevoix in 1993 when Jerry was stationed here by Consumer's Power to do nuclear performance assessment work at Big Rock Point. He later joined the Big Rock decommissioning planning team.

THREE WAYS TO "HEAT CHEAP" THIS WINTER!

1. Move to Florida.
2. Leave your furnace off until March.
3. Get a Geothermal Add-On System.

A new geothermal add-on system is super efficient...it pulls about 70% of its heat from the earth.

If you heat with propane or oil, the new geothermal heating and cooling system from ClimateMaster can save you hundreds of dollars on your energy bills.

Enough to pay for itself!

backs things up."

He did offer approaches to mitigating the problems, none of which he said will eliminate congestion or reduce travel time through Charlevoix in any significant way.

John Campbell, chairman of the chamber board, said different approaches suggested by Lyles will be discussed at next week's meeting.

These include: increasing enforcement, use of cross walk attendants, changes to the traffic signal, changes in pedestrian flow patterns and improving the marking at crosswalks using signs.

"The general recommendation is to develop more clearly defined (through marking and signs) pedestrian routes along the Bridge Street corridor and supplement these with additional signs regarding prohibitions on blocking the Clinton/Bridge streets intersection," Lyles said.

The study suggests that permanent signs for motorists printed in fluorescent yellow-green state, "yield to pedestrian in crosswalk," and during events placement of additional mobile signs with the same warning.

While these ideas could move traffic faster along Bridge Street the groups will have to weigh the benefit against what Lyles said may compromise the safety of the pedestrian environment.

Any changes to Bridge Street pedestrian and vehicular traffic controls have to be cleared by the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT), owner of Bridge Street.

City Police Chief Dennis Halverson, a member of the pedestrian traffic committee, said the city mailed a copy of the study to MDOT to see how Lyles' suggestions relate to its guidelines for signs and pavement markings. As of Jan. 13 MDOT had not responded.

Residents to get surveys

know who the information came from, they will be able to use the survey information for planning.

"A good, strong response will help elected and appointed officials say 'yes, there is some backing out there.' But if people are 100 percent against it, let's not waste our time," he said.

There are 35 questions included in the survey.

The first set of 12 questions is based on the respondent's visual preferences. Photos depicting residential, commercial and traffic related scenes will appear on the survey and people will be asked to rate their opinion of that photo.

Sullivan said these photos are a valuable asset that allow people to respond with greater certainty.

"When you ask people the definition of ugly, you'll get 10 different answers, but when they see it, they know it," he said.

The second set of questions will look at future development preferences. It will ask those being surveyed to look at three pictures, the first will depict what the land is currently used for and the second and third will show the property being developed in two different ways. Respondents will be asked to choose the best use for the property.

The third section will depict three sets of diagrams with questions about attitudes toward new policies and regulations being implemented in townships, cities or villages listed below.

One of the regulation questions will ask whether residents surveyed would support a millage increase for the preservation of open space.

"These types of questions will give us an idea whether we should be pursuing this as one of the many tools in the toolbox that the community can use in regulating growth and development," Sullivan said.

The last few questions will ask some demographic information like the sex of the respondent.

To formulate questions, Sullivan worked with Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Director Rod Cortright based in Boyne City, the staff at Michigan State University in East Lansing and the Planning and Zoning Center Inc., in Lansing.

The survey will be mailed from the Boyne City extension office and the return address on the business envelope is for that Boyne City office.

A business reply envelope will be included with the survey so respondents won't be charged postage.

Land use plan revision costs, including the survey, are being paid for through a $17,500 grant awarded by the federal government in conjunction with the Coastal Zone Management Program, $11,500 in kind match that accounts for time spent by county personnel and a $6,400 contribution from the county. Each survey costs the county between $1 and $1.50 to print, mail and tabulate the results.

So far the land use revision research process has cost the county $19,400 of the $35,800 it has to spend.

Mary Feindt honored by Charlevoix chamber

Charlevoix did not hold her back because she was a woman in the surveying and engineering business.

After her four year apprenticeship, Mary was asked to stay on at Sloan's business, which she did. In 1944, she bought the business from him, which she owns to this day under the name Advanced Geomatics, with offices in Charlevoix and Novi.

In 1942, Mary married J. Lawrence Feindt. She said he had a bet with a friend of his that he would get a date with her. He won and their first date was over coffee and pie.

Career and marriage came to a crossroad the day before Mary's wedding to Lawrence. It was then that she received a telegram from the Tennessee Valley Authority asking her to come work for the project.

Mary had been working for this type of opportunity for nine years. However, she decided to get married and stay in Charlevoix, something she does not regret.

"My career turned out pretty good," she said.

For 35 years, Mary was the only female surveyor in Michigan.

Mary has been instrumental in Charlevoix and you can find her name associated with many properties, master plans and projects in the county. In addition to being active in many associations, and receiving many awards, Feindt was elected county surveyor in 1944 — a position she still serves.

Mary has also been the liaison between the American Congress on Surveying and Mapping and the American Land Title Association, a member of the Downtown Development Authority, past president of the Charlevoix Chapter of Zonta, an honorary member of the American Congress on Surveying and Mapping, received a master's degree from the University of Michigan, was past president of the Michigan Land Title Association and was selected at Michigan's Outstanding Older Worker in 1998.

She is also a member of FIG, an international surveying association, that has given her the opportunity to share her knowledge with many other countries, such as Finland, Spain, Australia, Argentina, the former East Germany, South America, South Africa, the Netherlands, Czech Republic and South Korea.

In the midst of all these honors and activities, Mary still found time to have a son, Larry, who literally grew up around surveying. He now works in the Novi office with his wife, Faye, who used to work with Mary in the Charlevoix office. Mary's husband, Lawrence, passed away in 1988.

While Mary's son, Larry, is following in his mother's footsteps, her passion also passed to the next generation of Feindts — her granddaughter Amy. Amy will become a licensed surveyor this summer and graduated from Ferris State University. She currently works in the Feindts' Novi office.

Mary was unable to attend the chamber awards ceremony as she is at Boulder Park Terrace, facing the last stages of cancer.

But, even cancer does not stop Mary from working. She was in the Charlevoix office around Christmas and has her family regularly bring paperwork up to Boulder Park for her to sign.

When asked what draws her to this career, Mary said she simply loves what she does.

"It's like a puzzle. It is so fascinating to put all this work together," Mary said.

In her work, she takes property recordings that have been created throughout the years and translates them into real boundaries. This sometimes means trying to determine how long-gone surveyors performed their work and if they were accurate.

For example, Mary said she has discovered a 600 foot discrepancy between the boundary of Emit County and Charlevoix County, due to a mistake made by a government surveyor.

"We still don't know where the county line is," she said.

She added there is also a quarter of a mile missing in the city of Charlevoix.

"It is like a mystery. You get different opinions from different surveyors," Mary said.

DEDICATION PROGRAM WAS MONDAY

FINE TURNOUT FOR CEREMONY AT CITY HALL

Mayor Robert Bridge, City Supt. Don Herrick, W.B. Hodges, PWA Engineer, Speakers

At a brief but impressive ceremony Monday afternoon, Charlevoix's recently completed city hall, its electric system extension program and sewage treatment plant were dedicated.

The combined projects, financed with municipal and Public Works Administration funds represented an investment of approximately $290,000 in municipally-owned properties.

Mayor Robert Bridge opened the program before an assemblage which filled the community room in capacity. He reviewed briefly the accomplishments of his own and previous city administrations in providing the three projects. He stated Charlevoix held an enviable position in view of its municipally-owned public works and expressed the opinion Charlevoix citizens, who as taxpayers owned these utilities, should be justly proud.

Don Herrick, city superintendent, lauded by Mayor Bridge for his part in making he projects a reality, spoke briefly and introduced W.B. Hodges PWA engineer, who complimented Charlevoix on its accomplishments.

Rev. G. R. Parker opened the ceremony with the invocation. Charles Hamlin led the assemblage in singing "God Bless America." Mrs. A.J. Stelter played piano accompaniment. Benediction by Rev. Parker closed the program.

A large number of citizens took advantage of the "open house" provided as an opportunity to inspect the city hall, visit the sewage treatment plant and Ferry Avenue electric light plant.

A 12 page folder, outlining accomplishments of the city administration for the period of March 1, 1938 to Feb. 29, 1940, was distributed to those visiting city hall. Citizens who did not obtain a copy of this report will be given one upon request. The information contained in the report is interesting and instructive as a means of showing where and how the tax dollar has been spent and accomplishments resulting.

A DOZEN GAMES ARE SCHEDULED

FIVE OF THEM WILL BE PLAYED AT HOOKER'S

Home Court Will Be Thoroughly Warmed and Deodorized for Spectators

An interesting basketball schedule has been arranged for the winter season. The following schedule is the original arrangement:

Central Lake, Jan. 9 — there
Mancelona, Jan. 16 — here
Pellston, Jan. 23 — there
Petoskey Jan. 20 — here
Harbor Springs, Feb. 6 — there
Sault Saint Marie, Feb. 13 — here
Petoskey, Feb. 17 — there
Traverse City, Feb. 20 — there
East Jordan, Feb. 27 — here
East Jordan, March 6 — there
Harbor Springs, March 13 — here
Tournament, March 19 — Petoskey

In making a schedule we cannot always have the dates we desire to play certain games because they are not satisfactory with the other teams concerned.

On account of the third and fifth numbers of the high school lecture course being given on Jan. 16 and March 13 respectively, it was necessary to make some alterations in the above schedule. Due to these conflicting dates, it became necessary for us to play the Mancelona game Saturday night, Jan. 17 and the home game with Harbor Springs will be played on Feb. 6. This of course changes the alternating scheme we had devised.

We are late in opening our season this year, because of the dismantling of the old roller rink, the place where we have formerly played. We have a fine new building in which to engaged in interscholastic athletic contests this year. It is well heated and about 250 people can be very comfortably seated on our new bleachers in addition to the large number of spectators who can observe the game from around the sides of the court.

All communications leading to the horse barn have been sealed and the best deodorizing agent on the market has been procured and used in the new building. We can assure the public that there will be no offensive odors and that you will be comfortably warmed at the games.

Our game Saturday night is announced as being fast and hard, both teams being evenly matched. Many people are looking forward with great anxiety to the game. The local tossers are now in the pink of condition and they invite a large crowd to which they wish to demonstrate their ability to play basketball. Former support is appreciated and a continuation of the old spirit and attitude towards our school sports will greatly stimulate the action of our players and thus we are the more enabled to do what you wish.

FOR A NEW POST OFFICE

The New Van Pelt Building For Government Occupation — Levinson & Co. to Occupy All of the Old Building

It has just leaked out and is well authenticated that the new block that Van Pelt is to erect on the Bridge Street lot recently purchased of Dr. Crouter, is for the post office.

The present quarter of the post office, while well equipped in fixtures, is entirely inadequate outside the boxes. Much complaint has been made by businessmen of this delinquency and the remedy seems to be close at hand.

The new building will afford quarters one-third wider and nearly one-third deeper, than the present quarters. This will meet a very pressing public demand — especially in the summer months. This releases the old Van Pelt building, and this means the enlargement of a Charlevoix mercantile concern that is important.

M.A. Levinson & Co., who now occupy the south half of the building, will cut an archway through the wall and make a double store. This is another result of increasing trade and mercantile prosperity.

It is expected that by July 1 both the post office and the Levinson's will be in their new quarters.

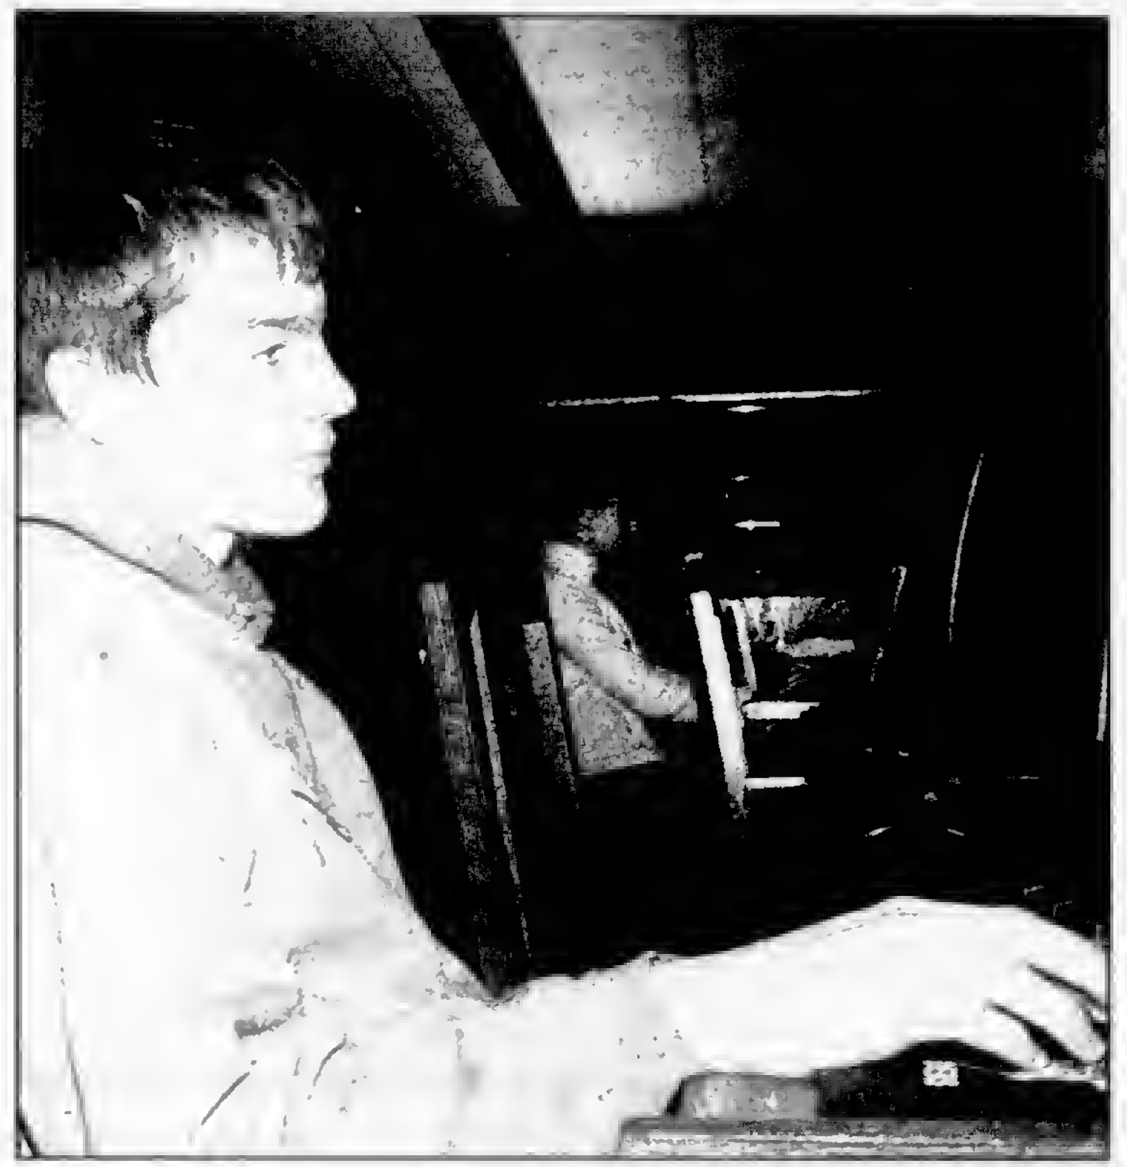
School funding in jeopardy



Nick Kerr, 15, takes an opportunity just before his lunch hour to work on a paper in the Charlevoix High School library. Proposed state budget cuts could put a serious dent in the school's budget, along with Northwest Academy's. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

A state education budget cut warning that came last week could spell disaster for some Michigan schools, but for now, Charlevoix Pubic Schools and Northwest Academy are in the clear.

The education spending cut plan was announced on Jan. 15 by Michigan Gov. Jennifer Granholm after state revenue forecasters announced taxes won't raise enough money to cover the $12.7 billion school aid budget.

To cover the $127 million difference Granholm's proposal could cost schools millions of dollars. Her plan includes 3.8 percent cuts in per pupil and categorical spending, which includes adult education and at-risk student funding.

Under her plan, payments to schools, including charter schools like Northwest Academy, would be reduced beginning in March.

The announcement came as a surprise to superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Dr. John Sturock, who said he hadn't anticipated cuts for this year.

"Everyone was saying we would be held harmless, no one anticipated a deficit in this fiscal year (July to June). But the state has to balance its budget and state revenues came in lower than what the budget was based on and now they have to make adjustments," he said.

Northwest Academy administrator Scott Cochran was also taken off guard by Granholm's announcement.

He said, "We thought we avoided the ax last month, but apparently we didn't. The challenge for us, like any school, is we set the budget over the summer and now they are telling us there is a plan to take almost 4 percent away."

Schools, like the state, will now have to re-balance their budgets to account for the cuts.

Charlevoix Public Schools currently receives $7,887 per student through the foundation education grant. While cuts are not yet locked in stone, Sturock said if Granholm's plan becomes policy the Charlevoix School District could lose 3.8 percent or between $70,000 and $80,000.

At Northwest Academy a loss of $17,822 would be realized if the 3.8 percent cut is adopted.

Even though local schools will likely not be "held harmless" both the district and the charter school will be able to cover the unex-

Estimates for marina, park being drawn up

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix Municipal Marina and East Park renovation planning has moved into the engineering phase.

Preliminary plans and studies for marina and park projects received final city approval and funding this week bringing the projects closer to meeting the April 2003 "deadline."

To be included in the state Waterways Commission's funding cycle for 2005, construction plans have to be in the hands of the commission by April. In the end Waterways could fund up to 75 percent of the marina project and marina related parts of the park renovation.

United Design Associates of Cheboygan and Pollack Design Associates of Ann Arbor will develop preliminary plans and cost estimates for both the water and shore renovations. United Design and Pollack will work together and create a total site plan, but United Design will be primarily in charge of marina engineering and Pollack will steer park engineering. The combined cost to complete the process is $98,856.

The Waterways Commission reviewed the contracts before they were approved by city council at its meeting Jan. 20 and agreed to fund 50 percent of the cost of both studies.

Charlevoix's Downtown Development Authority unanimously approved funding the remaining 50 percent at its meeting Jan. 20. In its motion to approve the contracts it added that it would like both firms to use as many local subcontractors as possible.

Traffic ambassador costs being studied

By JULIE WITTHOEFT

Even though a presentation by a traffic expert made it clear that only major changes to traffic flow in Charlevoix would impact summer gridlock conditions, city council is looking into "tinkering with the margins."

City of Charlevoix administrators will look at the cost of employing traffic ambassadors "an enforcement-type" intervention to direct pedestrian and vehicular traffic during the busy weeks of summer even though a report showed a small benefit, if any, could result.

Council and the Downtown Development Authority (DDA), met with Rick Lyles, a traffic consultant with his firm Richard Lyles and Associates of Williamston and representatives of the chamber of commerce board of directors and the convention and visitors bureau Jan. 20.

At the meeting Lyles and the groups reviewed the results of a traffic report conducted by his firm. The presentation stressed that the major contributor to traffic congestion is the drawbridge and Bridge Street — a two-lane, two-way traffic road.

He said some potential ways to mitigate the problem include: increased enforcement, use of "Charlevoix Ambassadors," changes to traffic signal operating regime, changes in pedestrian flow patterns and changes in signing or other traf-

Stuck

This deer found itself stuck Wednesday on the ice on Lake Charlevoix about 150 yards from the Pine Lake Association beach off M-66. Undersheriff Don Schneider and a Department of Natural Resources officer went out on the ice to try to save the deer that afternoon, but called off the attempt when Schneider fell through the ice up to his knee. That day, crews from the United States Coast Guard station in Charlevoix were at Depot Beach on Lake Charlevoix doing ice rescue training. But, they could not come out to save the deer due to a policy that states they cannot go out after animals unless it is someone's pet. Station chief John McLean added, even without the policy, he did not want to put his crew's lives at risk for a deer. The deer died on the ice sometime that night. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

Prosecutor's employees make harassment claim

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Four support staff employees of the Charlevoix County Prosecutor's Office have claimed county prosecutor Mary Beth Kur has harassed them.

The employees — Jacquelyn Rozema, Carol Quinn, Sandra Ward and Wendy Viles — made the claim at a Charlevoix County Personnel Committee meeting Jan. 15 and in a written statement signed by them. Kur refutes these claims and provided several letters in support of herself to the committee.

"I think it is best for everyone (in the community) to hear this and to come to a conclusion. I think that conclusion will be that this has no merit. It is all smoke and no mirrors," Kur said. "I have absolutely nothing to hide."

At the conclusion of the meeting, the committee decided to have a special meeting on the matter at 5 p.m., today, Wednesday in the Charlevoix County Building. They gave all parties until 10 a.m., Monday to submit any more evidence. The committee is made up of Charlevoix County Commissioners Randy Frykberg, Valerie Snyder and Shirley Roloff.

As of the deadline, at least one more letter supporting Kur's claims was submitted.

The employees had not submitted anything else to the committee, other than the original letter they presented their claims in.

According to a letter the employees sent to the committee, they base their claim of harassment on four allegations.

Most of these allegations seem to relate to a lawsuit filed by former chief assistant prosecuting attorney John Jarema. Jarema was dismissed in March 2002 by Kur. He later filed suit against the county and Kur alleging a violation of the Whistleblower law, defamation and wrongful dismissal.

The problem behind traffic is the bridge

EDITORIAL

You would think that when a study says something won't work, the person conducting the study says it won't work, the head of the local police station says it won't work and the head of city management says it won't work that we shouldn't do it.

But, this is not the case in Charlevoix.

On Monday, city officials, Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce Officials and Charlevoix Area Convention and Visitor's Bureau officials revisited another old study that was done on issues in town. Recently, they rehashed a study on bringing a convention center to town, even though the study was pretty clear that it wouldn't work, and then Monday they rehashed a traffic study.

It seemed that the only reason to revisit this study was because some people wanted the city to create "traffic ambassadors," or crossing guards, to ease the traffic congestion in the summer. These people insist that our traffic problems are created by pedestrians trying to cross the street.

However, the study that was conducted just last summer said this wasn't the case. The study said the problems are the bridge and Bridge Street.

At the meeting Monday, traffic consultant Richard Lyles, who conducted the study, reiterated this point and said traffic ambassadors will not work. Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson and Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner agreed.

But, apparently, this was not what some people wanted Lyles to say and completely dismissed his findings and opinion, even though we paid for it. Now the city is going to try to figure out how much it will cost for a crossing guard during the summer.

Come on! This is getting silly. In one month, we have dismissed two studies. It is time for those in power, both in the city and in the business community, to quit wasting the citizens' time and money.

Let's sum up traffic for you: The problem is the bridge! There is no way to solve the bridge problem, other than welding it shut, so you are going to have to learn to live with it. Besides, it is only a problem for about three months.

It is hard for restaurants to fill busboy jobs today

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

If you have been wondering like I have, why the service in white tablecloth restaurants has become so painfully slow, please notice that there are no busboys around anymore to help waiters and waitresses — especially in the evenings!

Bussing used to be a great, first job for eager 14 and 15 year olds. My boys, along with my neighbor's children, were thrilled to work as busboys in popular restaurants and they earned good money, but that was 20 or more years ago!

Today, training a busboy can be a challenge. One restaurant manager tells how he tried to show a youngster the correct way of setting the table.

"Always turn the blade of the knife in toward the plate," he said. To which the trainee replied, with a yawn, "Big deal!"

According to Cynthia Kautz, membership director at the Charlevoix Country Club, busboys are needed past 9 p.m., not only to serve late diners and to clear all the tables, but also to set up tables for the next day.

The problem, according to both state and federal employment laws, is that youngsters between the ages of 14 and 16 may be employed in eating establishments only up to 7 p.m., except from June through Labor Day, when they may work until 9 p.m. Years ago these laws were not enforced, but in the last few years the state of Michigan has cracked down on these regulations. A monetary penalty of $10,000 for each employee could be assessed. You may notice when dining out that the only exception in an eating establishment is where youngsters are employed by their parents.

In addition to the crackdown by the Labor Department, Dean Smith, general manager of Stafford's Hospitality, finds there are other trends that make the current situation frustrating. He tells me that the big problem in hiring high school kids 16 and older is three fold: 1) Some kids don't want to work, 2) if they work they like to work in fast food places and 3) good athletes, who understand teamwork, are involved in numerous summer camp activities, such as soccer, football, basketball, while other desirable students travel, attend music or computer camps.

According to Smith, there is one deviation to the policies by the Labor Department, and that is to get written permission from both parents.

"What does a busboy earn these days?" I asked Smith.

During the summer, he tells us that a busboy is able to make $38 to $50 a day, and in the evening $50 to $100.

Not bad!

The "catch 22" solution for restaurant owners is that if they compensate for the lack of busboys and instead, hire more well-trained waiters or waitresses, then of course the price of the meal needs to go up! So now that we understand the reason for slow service or high prices, perhaps we will become less irritated and exercise more patience when dining out in a fine restaurant.

As the saying goes, "Patience is its own reward!"

Reimbursement is needed

Editor:

I have followed with some interest the recall effort on the part of some Eveline Township residents and the subsequent nullification of their recall petitions.

If I recall correctly the articles I have read, the clerk, Jane Brannon admitted a mistake and apologized for it.

That leads me to assume the mistake was hers, otherwise, she would not have needed to apologize for her actions.

In light of that, I feel it would be in the interest of fairness to reimburse the petition circulators for their time and gas.

After all, "time is money," I've heard said, and their hours of work represent a lot of time in which they could have been pursuing other interests.

They must be vitally interested in this recall to have given so much effort to it.

I don't know what the legalities are of such reimbursement, but I do know fairness and justice require paying these petitioners.

I do not live in Eveline Township, but I do live in Charlevoix County, and I believe officeholders have an obligation to know the laws and uphold them. Since the county clerk was wrong in this instance, I feel the county commission should vote to pay restitution.

If the worry is that this might set a precedent, then I would suggest that, in the future, officeholders make themselves aware of any laws they are required to enforce and inform citizens correctly. Then another such instance would not occur.

Build a viewing tower

Editor:

Let's build a viewing tower on the Bridge Street Inn property!

This dream has been in my mind for several years, as a great way to provide wonderful entertainment for those who pass through town, and also for us to enjoy. The view from the old water tower, according to the late Bob Miles, was so spectacular, it could take your breath away.

Before the old water tower was torn down, retired architect Lou Orlowski and I explored the possibility of converting it into a viewing tower. However, it didn't happen. Twenty one years ago, I had the crazy idea of planting five miles of petunias from one end of the town to the other. Many said it wouldn't work, but the flowers are ordered for the twenty-second year and it has been proven that people going through will stop and visit the town businesses and spend money here, because they like the atmosphere. I have had many people that I meet at the parades I attend tell me that this has made Charlevoix a destination in the summer. Let's do something that will make it a destination 365 days a year!

Automatically, many of you who read this letter will be against it, but take time to dream a little and see the possibilities. Rather than think about a convention center, which at best would be Mickey Mouse on the Bridge Street Inn property and benefit a few, let's do something that will stop cars and families coming through town. It will also be a great place for all of us to enjoy, and take our friends, when they come to visit.

We are fortunate to have a U.S. highway going through our town. This enables us to show people what we have. Once they view the most beautiful layout in the world from the tower, they will want to visit the places they see from above. In the ticket and waiting room below, and also on the screened in balcony on top, could be a layout map of the town and various attractions and businesses that people could go to. Let's be creative and help ourselves. My grandfather, who died at 97, in 1967, always told me the adage, which is true, "The Lord helps those who help themselves."

This quote originally came from the great American, Benjamin Franklin. It has proved to be true all through my life.

The property on the southwest corner across from the Lodge (US-31 and West Dixon), is perfect for this project. This will pay for itself and be a money maker for years to come.

I am a history buff on Charlevoix's past, and 100 years ago, after all the lumbermen had cut the trees down a tower stood on top of Mt. McSauba, which overlooked the entire area, and cost 25 cents to climb. This was when wages were a dollar a day. Let's look to the future and build the first floor into the ground that faces US- 31 which is adjacent to the Pointes North Inn. This will rent out for the highest rent per square foot in Charlevoix, due to the terrific exposure. At ground level, above this, a modest two story building could be built to house the chamber and visitors bureau. Then a very nicely designed 300 plus foot tower on top, with an exterior glass bubble elevator would be built, to allow passengers to view everything as they ride up.

A $5 fee, which is cheap in today's money, could be levied and those with cameras could take spectacular pictures from above, which would be a great drawing card. There also could be rent collected from small antennas on top, which would hardly be noticeable. There is nothing wrong with being a landlord.

Tear down the old house for some parking, and let the rest of the adjoining street be used as necessary like you would have to do if you were building a convention center. Consider the revenue coming in all year, plus the great enjoyment it would bring to everyone. Cedar Point's new roller coaster is over 400 feet high and they say the view is fantastic.

If you had told me 20 years ago, that out behind the mountain, in the middle of nowhere, you could get 2,000 people in our front yard to enjoy our Santa's Workshop on Christmas Eve, I would have been skeptical. Well, it has happened.

If we build it, they will come.

Dale Boss

Thank you

The spirit of giving is alive and well in the north! The Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan extends our sincere appreciation to all of you who so generously donated to the Safe Home Harvest Food and Supply Drive this holiday season.

In a typical year, the Safe Home provides temporary housing for approximately 200 individuals requiring emergency shelter for their safety due to domestic and sexual abuse. The community support received during the Harvest Food and Supply Drive allows the center to continue providing these critical services for families in crisis.

Thank you to all the service groups, churches, businesses, schools, clubs and individuals that made supporting families in their community a priority by donating food, supplies, gifts and financial support to the center. You have made a positive difference in the lives of many families in need.

A reason to live here

Editor:

My family's' reasons for wanting to move to this community were justified in yet another manner the other day.

I recently had to visit the Secretary of State in Charlevoix to replace a damaged license plate sticker. While explaining the situation to the clerk, there were a number of people patiently waiting their turn in line. The clerk filled out the appropriate paperwork, handed the sticker over to me and told me the replacement cost. I looked in my wallet embarrassed to find that I was a couple of dollars short.

Faced with leaving the office, traveling to the nearest ATM, and then getting back in line, a generous soul waiting in line gave me the couple of bucks I was short, with the simple condition that someday I return the favor and do something nice for someone else. Amazed, (in my previous community this would NEVER have happened) I thanked the woman and realized that here is proof positive of why my family and I are proud to be part of this type of community.

So to that generous soul, thank you and you can bet the next time I can offer a helping hand I will, as I too am now part of this community.

An even happier new resident,

Campbell leads chamber

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors is under the new leadership of chairman John Campbell.

Campbell, 61, was officially instated by the chamber board at its annual awards meeting Jan. 9 when he replaced Roger Nesburg.

Nesburg was chairman of the board for 2001 and 2002 and served on the board of directors in 1999 and 2000.

In that time he was involved in numerous community projects. While the board was comfortable and confident in his strong leadership, Nesburg said Campbell is capable of taking over and the transition should he smooth.

"The new board members are ready to take off with projects for the Charlevoix area," he said.

Campbell's credentials to lead the chamber are backed by decades of involvement with Charlevoix and the chamber.

Campbell has supported the chamber as both a member since the 1970s and as a board member on and off since the 1980s. The chamber's role as a driving force behind enhancing Charlevoix's business community is complimented by Campbell's first hand experience as a local business man. He owns Site Planning Development, a design building and landscape architect firm located in Charlevoix Township.

After a 20 year hiatus from the chamber board, friends in the business community urged him to get back on board and he rejoined in 2000 with fresh ideas to stimulate economic growth in town.

His accomplishments in his 32 years as a Charlevoix resident with wife, Mary Lee, show his commitment to the community and are an indicator of his leadership skills.

In the mid 1970s Campbell was one of three people in town to initiate the City of Charlevoix Shade Tree Commission, he was also an original member of the combined city of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township Planning Commission and is currently a member of the city planning commission.

While he has extensive experience with planning, he has also been actively involved in several projects including the original conceptual design of Bridge Park.

During his chairmanship, Campbell is looking forward to finalizing and presenting to the community the chamber's strategic plan which is expected to be ready this spring.

John Campbell

He didn't divulge all the plan's dimensions, but did say one of its central components for success is cooperation between businesses and all units of government including the city, townships and the schools.

One of his goals with the plan is to create and encourage this community-wide cooperation to provide affordable housing. He explained that means employing "good land use" practices and agreeing to higher density housing close to resources "as opposed to this continuing sprawl."

He said many people who work in Charlevoix can't afford to live here, so they commute from more remote places and towns where they live and raise families which has a negative impact on the local economy.

Garden Club installs new officers

New officers of the Charlevoix Area Garden Club were recently installed.

Jacqueline Krutsch begins her second year as president of the club whose membership, attendance and participation has grown significantly. The club was organized in 1939 and now has 107 members.

In addition to Krutsch, officers include first vice president, Joan Nowak; second vice-president, Rhea Dow; recording secretary, Lois Ann Jesiek; corresponding secretary, Karen Campbell; and treasurer, Pati Aikin.

The club has had numerous accomplishments over the last several years in support of its mission statement: To beautify the home and city; to cultivate a love and knowledge of trees, plants and flowers; and to foster a true friendship among its members.

Each member is encouraged to play an active role in the club by serving on a committee, working in a civic garden and supporting special projects, workshops and events.

The Charlevoix Area Garden Club is responsible for caring for 12 civic gardens. Members plant flowers in the spring and maintain the gardens during the summer and fall. CAGC also conducts an annual spring plant sale in May; the Garden Walk in July; and a fall bulb sale in October.

Besides managing the many civic gardens, the club initiated a community project at the 1892 railroad station in the fall of 2002. The period designed garden is being executed in concert with the Charlevoix Historical Society and the Charlevoix Evening Club and will contain plants that were brought to Charlevoix by summer residents or grown locally around the turn of the century.

Last fall hundreds of shrubs were set out and the historic Colonial Club iron gates and fencing, circa 1920, were installed at the garden's entrance. Heritage perennials will be collected and planted this spring.

Four life memberships were also recently awarded to Edith Close, Alice Irving, Kathy Johnson and Sarah Sievertson for their considerable and ongoing efforts to support the club's ideals and purposes. Letters of recognition attested to each recipient's devotion, support and knowledge.

Presenting the awards was Susan Kuschell, Region V district director, from Traverse City.

The Charlevoix Area Garden Club meets usually at 1 p.m., the second Tuesday of each month. Following a business meeting, a speaker or workshop is presented and refreshments served.

The club publishes a monthly newsletter for its members. Annual dues are $10. The club is a member of the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan and National Garden Clubs, Inc.

Wind turbine controversy hasn't occurred in Marion

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Who: Marion Township Board
What It is: Discussion of a wind turbine ordinance.
When: 7:30 p.m., Jan. 27
Where: Marion Township Hall, on Marion Center Road.

Zoning ordinance changes in Marion Township that will govern construction of wind turbine generators have flared up less of a fight from residents than in neighboring Eveline Township.

Chairman of the Marion Township Planning Commission, Tim Matchett, is preparing for a public hearing that will focus on revisions to the township zoning ordinance that deal with wind turbines.

The hearing is scheduled to take place at 7:30 p.m., Jan. 27 at the Marion Township Hall, located off Marion Center Road.

He said the commission has been working on the changes for around three months and meetings leading up to the hearing have been quiet, with only a few interested residents attending. Matchett said there are no requests from wind turbine generator developers on file with the township at this time, but residents have been approached.

If the hearing follows the peaceful path the issue has traveled so far, the commission will pass along the revision to the Charlevoix County Planning Commission for review. If the county finds no problems with it, the township board will decide its fate.

The relatively peaceful zoning change in Marion Township is a stark contrast to the uproar in Eveline Township where a lawsuit, a recall effort and a year-long master plan and zoning ordinance revision process have resulted from the wind turbine debate.

Last week, the Eveline Township Board voted to release master plan changes for review by 12 surrounding municipalities. The plan allows for wind turbines in five farm and forest districts in the township. Review by the neighboring municipalities is required by state law to encourage community communication and cooperation.

The townships and cities have until Feb. 25 to review the plan and send any responses they have to the Charlevoix County Planning Commission for a second review which is due to be returned by April 1.

In the meantime, revisions to the Eveline Township zoning ordinance will be reviewed at a public hearing tentatively scheduled to take place Feb. 19. If there is a need, a second hearing will follow.

Once the planning commission is comfortable it will make a recommendation to the township board which has the final say as to whether the changes are enacted.

Eveline Township Supervisor Dan Skrzeczkoski said he is anticipating a controversial meeting when the board acts on the revised ordinance and is thinking about scheduling a special meeting so the changes will be the only focus of the board and residents. He said this meeting may take place in April.

Under the Marion Township zoning ordinance wind turbines are restricted to the agricultural district, are required to be 400 feet tall or less and have to be 1.5 times their height away from property lines and roadways.

"That factor alone will eliminate smaller parcels," Matchett said of the setback.

Under the Eveline Township zoning ordinance and master plan, wind turbines are restricted to five districts in the farm and forest zone, are restricted to a maximum tower height of 230 feet with a blade height of 300 feet and are required to meet a 2,600 foot setback.

"I think when all is said and done we will have the most restrictive ordinance out there dealing with wind towers," Skrzeczkoski said.

Both townships have noise restrictions of 50 decibels.

Snowmobiles forbidden on trail

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Snowmobiles could compromise the quality of Charlevoix's brand new portion of the non-motorized Little Traverse Wheelway and end up costing the county big money.

Larry Sullivan

"With little snow in town, they are running wherever they can," Charlevoix County Planner, Larry Sullivan said.

This unfortunately includes the brand new trail.

Sullivan said that since winter has arrived he has seen snowmobile tracks on the trail — a use that is strictly forbidden.

The pavement and boardwalk trail opened Oct. 24 after decades of planning and a battle for funding. It runs 7.3 miles from Waller Road in Charlevoix Township to Bay Shore.

The funds were ultimately granted only for development of a non-motorized trail.

"A snowmobile is by definition a motorized vehicle," Sullivan said.

Aside from violating the designated uses included in the funding agreement, a second problem, destruction of the trail by the machines, could cause major complications for the county.

Sullivan said from a practical standpoint snowmobiles are known to destroy asphalt and wood, the two materials that make up the trail. And some snowmobiles have carbine cleats in their tracks that wear down and break up pavement.

"The boardwalk would show wear and tear the quickest. Running across bare wood can turn that into a pile of wood chips in no time," he said.

This is a problem for the county because it agreed to be responsible for maintenance and liability of its portion of the trail.

That means the county coffers would pay to rebuild the trail because of wear and tear by snowmobiles or any other motorized vehicle.

Sullivan said the trail was built with a 20 year design life and snowmobiles operating on it will quickly reduce that.

But if the trail lasts the projected 20 years grant funds will again be available to "substantially rebuild the trail" including paving and replacing wood.

Currently there are "no motorized vehicles" and "no snowmobiles" signs in place along the trail and the county is working on getting more added.

It is also looking at methods to regulate the ability of snowmobiles to get on and off the boardwalk with concentration on an approach that can be implemented in the fall and removed in the spring.

Sullivan said if you see snowmobiles on the path, call 9-1-1 and report the location.

Students can ride snowmobiles to school

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix High School has a new pilot program that allows students to ride snowmobiles to school. This will be the area where they are permitted to park. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

A Charlevoix School Board approved pilot program that allows students to ride snowmobiles to and from the high school is being met with mixed reviews.

At its meeting Jan. 13, after little discussion, the board approved the request for snowmobile use on designated school grounds. The request made by members of the senior class came up at the Dec. 9 board meeting and after further investigation by principal Gary Grundman, he endorsed it.

"I would like to give it a try," he told the board. "Everything came together and I would like to recommend that we pilot it. The biggest concern was that snow machines are very powerful equipment, the same is true with motorcycles and we do allow motorcycles to be ridden to school."

But board trustee and city of Charlevoix police chief Dennis Halverson, who cast the only vote against the new policy, disagrees.

He said a motorcycle is akin to an automobile and a snowmobile is more a recreational or an off road vehicle like a dirt bike, which is not allowed at school and is regulated differently.

"It's just a different animal," he said.

When the high school was located in town, the city ordinance prohibited use of snowmobiles to get to and from school. But, he said now, just because there is a possible snowmobile route to the school, doesn't mean it's a good idea.

"It isn't a necessary component of the education process and I feel there is more of a downside than an upside to it," he said.

Halverson said he foresees issues with the school staff monitoring snowmobiles and possihle damage to sidewalks and asphalt.

"It will be difficult for the school staff to supervise and manage them," he said.

Outside of managing students, he said trespassing may also be easier.

But while Halverson is strongly opposed to the new pilot policy, Grundman said its rules give the school "real control" and the policy is more strict than the school's auto policy.

"It would just be another means of transportation," he said.

Grundman said he plans to monitor the site for any property damage that may result from the pilot program and if damage is detected the program will be terminated.

School board president Allen Telgenhof, who voted in favor of the new pilot program, said he agrees with Grundman and doesn't foresee a problem.

"I think it can be done safely. I think the majority of kids, like with cars, operate snowmobiles safely. And being a pilot program we can pull the plug any time," he said.

If any of the rules are violated the users' privilege will be revoked. The school administration, under the policy, is also authorized to confiscate snowmobiles, when necessary, for parents to pick up. Parental consent is also required for use.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater said the new program does raise safety concerns from his department. He highly recommends that the school stick to its guns and the privilege be terminated if one violation is noted by law enforcement, private property owners or school administrators.

Requirements for use include: operators having a valid driver's license, snow machines being legally registered, possession of a valid trail permit and adherence to rules like a 15 mph speed limit on school property.

School liaison officer deputy Robert Scholey with the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department will make a presentation of what is expected of students.

A snowmobile trail off Veenstra Road will connect with a path on school ground that leads to a parking coral. Students are working with the Charlevoix Snowmobile Club to rope off the area. A school issued parking permit will be required.

Grundman anticipates about 15 students participating.

. There are no restrictions at this time on the hours of operation nor are there restrictions at the county level.

If the pilot program is successful, Grundman will return in May to request it become official board policy.

Halverson hopes that in the meantime the pilot program doesn't result in problems.

"Time will tell, but it just struck me as a situation where the risks outweigh any benefit," he said.

EPA checking Hoskins site for pollution

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) has detected groundwater and soil contamination at Hoskins Manufacturing in Charlevoix.

In November, the MDEQ was given access to the outside of the property by the Bloomfield Hills based Armada Corporation, owners of the property and building, located in Marion Township off M-66.

"They indicated they didn't have the funds to take care of the environmental problems at any of the facilities," Elaine Pelc, an environmental analyst with the MDEQ said.

The MDEQ targeted areas to investigate based on six interviews it had this summer with former Hoskins employees. Pelc said information they provided shed light on disposal practices of hazardous materials at the site.

During the first two weeks in December, both ground water and soil samples were taken and tested for metals and other matter. Currently, a geologist with the MDEQ is working on compiling the data for further analysis.

She said based on their findings so far, groundwater flows from the site to the northeast and homeowners are not in danger.

"Based on what we found, there is no immediate threat to down gradient water well owners. It hasn't been demonstrated that it is moving off the property above health criteria," she said.

Pelc anticipates all the outdoor site information being ready for review by the middle of February.

"Then we will have a good idea of what's going on," she said.

After the outdoor investigation is complete, the MDEQ will work to gain access to the inside of the building. Interviews she had with those six former employees also raised concerns about places in the building where the MDEQ is interested in looking under the floor.

Last week, representatives of the Grosse Isle post of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) were inside the Hoskins building investigating waste and other products left inside the plant.

The EPA will use those samples to determine what is hazardous. Pelc said they will likely be back in February to take everything off site.

The work of the MDEQ was done by its staff using its equipment and materials. Pelc estimated that so far the cost to the state environmental agency has reached between $25,000 and $30,000.

"At some point, if we move forward with a cleanup and additional investigation, we will go to Armada and try and collect the taxpayers' money," she said.

In the meantime, the property which was closed in September of 2001 is for sale.

Other Hoskins Manufacturing facilities in the state — including those in Hamburg, Mio and Lewiston — were also closed by the Armada Corporation, which liquidated assets at the Hoskins facilities. The Hoskins sites specialized in production of wire used in conducting heat.

The MDEQ is concerned that a similar environmental situation as was found at Hoskins' Mio site may exist in Charlevoix. In Mio, tetrachloroethylene, commonly known as PCE, a degreasing solvent, has been detected in the groundwater.

Side effects of PCE contamination include: liver and kidney damage and chronic skin disorders.

The big concern with PCE in the groundwater is what it becomes — vinyl chloride, a known carcinogen.

A representative from Armada Corporation could not be reached for comment.

> "Based on what we found, there is no immediate threat to down gradient water well owners. It hasn't been demonstrated that it is moving off the property above health criteria."

HEALTH

Bad breath can ruin first impressions

John Merrill, D.D.S

'Your health'

Everyone knows that when meeting someone for the first time our first impressions take only seconds to formulate and can endure for years or even decades. For most of us, we are meeting and evaluating new acquaintances every day.

The Arm and Hammer Company completed a survey recently involving over a thousand men and women. When asked what were the biggest "turn-offs" the top five responses were as follows:

1) Body odor
2) Unpleasant personality
3) Bad breath
4) Yellow or discolored teeth
5) Too much perfume

As your dentist we may not be in a position to professionally advise you regarding pungent body odor or even a stinky personality, but we can offer many options on eliminating bad breath or the appearance of your smile. Bad breath in its most common forms can originate from food odors such as onions or garlic. But if it is an ongoing problem, it stems from compounds in dead and dying bacteria. These dead "bugs" give off sulfur compounds that are the same found in rotten eggs. They accumulate in large enough numbers to cause powerful odors in typically four situations:

1) Acute tooth decay or abscess
2) Gum disease or infection
3) Significant amounts of oral debris or plaque (bacteria)
4) Other oral or respiratory infections

If you have not seen a dentist for some time and suspect you have bad breath, it is best to have a complete dental examination, full mouth x-rays and a thorough periodontal (gum) evaluation to uncover the problem. If you are under a dentist's care and still lack confidence about having fresh breath, be aware that there are many effective breath treatment programs. Most avoid mouthwashes containing alcohol. Alcohol kills bacteria, but it is a potent drying agent that will promote the same sulfur compounds causing the odors.

Your tongue can be another culprit to bad breath. To bacteria, the human tongue is 1,000 miles of three-foot high shag carpeting. You can brush your tongue with your toothbrush, but that is like sweeping carpet with a broom. Nearly all effective breath care kits include some type of tongue scraper with a tongue gel or spray to loosen debris and deodorize the surface of the tongue.

Most over-the-counter mouthwashes and "breath mints" try to mask bad breath rather than eliminate the offending problem.

Professional products through your dentist compare in price to hair products you buy through your hairdresser. They include tongue sprays and gels, tongue scrapers in various designs and mouth rinses. Some product lines include mints or gum to eliminate odors on the run. They have a myriad of flavors and forms and ingredients to be effective, but nearly all of them contain no alcohol. We usually start patients with a "starter" kit that contains most of the product line. It is an inexpensive way to try many of the remedies and formulations and discover what works best for you.

Now that takes care of your bad breath with the first impression you make. Now about those teeth....

Dr. John Merrill can be contacted at (231) 547-9141. His office is located at 06483 M-66 North.

Despite study, ambassadors being pushed fic control devices.

Out of those options he said increased signing would most likely yield the greatest benefit. But council discussed this option and said because of the narrow roadway, signs at the center line would likely not be feasible.

However, other options that Lyles said would not make a significant impact on traffic flow were considered. These include: traffic ambassadors and prohibiting crossing on the north side of the Bridge and Clinton streets intersection.

Chamber board chairman John Campbell and board member Curt Haas, who are both members of the chamber's transportation committee, said the city should give the ambassadors a try.

"We've talked and talked about the traffic issue for 30 years; try it and see if it will work with a real person, not an automatic signal," Campbell said.

He asked council to calculate the cost of an ambassador working from 11 a.m. to 5 or 6 p.m. during the busiest six weeks of summer.

Council agreed to do the cost calculation, but the ambassador idea does not have the support of Lyles, city manager Mike Wiesner or city police chief Dennis Halverson.

Lyles said the ambassadors may decrease jaywalking and vehicle pedestrian interactions may decline. But he said there could be a negative impact by visitors being unable to differentiate between police officers and the ambassadors, effectiveness only when they are present, cost and potential liability issues.

Halverson said that based on Lyles' findings and his own research, the ambassador plan isn't a good idea.

"It appears the gains would be insignificant to designate resources which may be better used somewhere else," he said.

Wiesner further told council that aside from the cost, he also considers the possible liability issue associated with the ambassador idea to be problematic.

Another option seriously considered by council and supported by some of the group that attended was prohibiting pedestrian crossing at the north intersection of Bridge and Clinton streets to allow northbound traffic to fully utilize the green time at the traffic light.

"There is a lot of teeth gnashing that goes on at that intersection," chamber board member Reinhard Matye, said.

Lyles said in redirecting pedestrian flows the city will face enforcement problems.

"I don't think it would make an appreciable change in the number of cars going north," he said.

Another suggestion that Lyles said could make a difference was changing the bridge openings to once every hour instead of every half hour. He said traffic would flow more smoothly if the bridge was open less often and for less time.

Halverson said fewer bridge openings has been brought to the Coast Guard's attention in the past. But when a former council discussed it, the idea was met with serious opposition from the boating community.

In the end Lyles said the only change that would make a significant impact on traffic problems is initiating the recommendation made by the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) following its study in 1996.

According to Wiesner, the MDOT study proposed a "one way pair system," with State Street running one way south and Bridge Street running one way north.

But he said the city didn't pursue the pair system due to a lack of community support.

However, as traffic continues to wreak havoc on town, supporters of this pair system are coming out of the woodwork. A handful of those supporters including: Haas, Charlevoix merchant Linda Mason and Charlevoix resident and owner of Top Rank Disposal Tom Rankl spoke out at the meeting.

"There is a serious traffic problem and I'm not about tinkering with the margins. You have a bottleneck at the bridge and you can kid yourselves with signs and studies, but that won't work," Rankl said.

He urged council to consider moving toward the pair system.

Wiesner said while the pair system may make a major impact on traffic it isn't as easy as putting up signs redirecting traffic. He said there are turning radius issues at the Park and Bridge streets intersection to contend with and on the south end, there is a need for the creation of curves and a necessary property acquisition.

Council did not agree to further explore the pair system.

Any changes to Bridge Street pedestrian and vehicular traffic controls have to be cleared by MDOT, owner of Bridge Street.

Sheriff gives tips on avoiding home improvement scams

While there are many hard-working people in the field of home improvement, Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater warns to watch out for dishonest home repair firms.

The sheriff offers some tips on how you can avoid home improvement and repair frauds:

- Be suspicious if someone offers to do an expensive job for an unusually low price. Once you sign the contract and pay the fee, you learn why; they never deliver the service!
- Always get several estimates for a repair job, and compare prices and terms. Check to see if there is a charge for estimates before asking for one.
- Ask your friends, neighbors and co-workers for recommendations or ask the firm for references and check them out.
- Be wary of high pressure sales tactics.
- Pay by check, never with cash. Arrange to make payments in installments.
- When you find repair people you trust, stick with them and tell your friends.

"Sometimes you might not know you've been cheated until it's too late," Lasater said. "If you don't report the fraud, you're only helping the criminals, and that's what they want."

Lasater stresses that you should report all fraud of which you've been a victim.

Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office investigates two to four cases each year where senior citizens are taken advantage of.

Call the sheriff's office at 547-4461 or local police and give them as many details as possible. By following a few simple guidelines, home repair fraud can be avoided.

Kur fights support staff harassment charges

KUR

All of the defamation counts have been dismissed by Cheboygan County Circuit Court Judge Scott Pavlich, who is hearing the case. Motions to dismiss the rest of the counts have not been heard yet.

According to the Petoskey News-Review, Jarema was present at the committee meeting, but did not speak.

The four allegations the employees make that they say create harassment are:

- Being required to participate in closed door meetings with the prosecuting attorney's legal counsel to discuss pending testimony in deposition being conducted in the Jarema lawsuit.
- "Certain employees" being told that the attorney defending the county and Kur represents Kur, the county and some employees in the office, but does not represent other employees who have been deemed to be "uncooperative."
- "Certain employees" being subjected to lengthy post-deposition "interrogations" conducted behind closed doors by Kur and the legal counsel, where those employees were "verbally assaulted and told they were 'disloyal' for testifying truthfully at their depositions and that all other non-attorney employees were also disloyal."
- Being subjected to "mandatory and ambiguous policies" created by Kur, which state if the employees fail to adhere to them, it will result in "immediate disciplinary action up to and including possibly termination."

"As a result of the harassing actions occurring in the prosecuting attorney's office, we find ourselves caught in a hostile work environment, which unreasonably interferes with our ability to effectively fulfill our job duties," the employee's wrote. "In addition to finding our ability to work impaired by the hostile work environment, more than one of us have experienced significant emotional and physical distress because of the continuing harassment."

Letters in support of Kur tell a different story.

Sandra L. Jasinski, the attorney for Kur and the county, said in a letter to the committee she met with each employee, including the attorneys in the office, on Aug. 15, 2002 to introduce herself and find out what they knew about Jarema's allegations. She wrote that she told each one that she did not expect to call them as witnesses in the case, but expected Jarema's counsel to do so.

She added both Ward and Viles were upset about Jarema's dismissal and became emotional during her meeting with them several times.

Jasinski added Rozema refused to meet with Jasinski unless Jarema's attorney was present, and Quinn was not in the office on Aug. 15. She did get to speak with Quinn before Quinn gave a deposition on Dec. 19.

She said she spoke with Quinn quickly on that date.

She added she told everyone that they should "listen carefully to the questions and tell the truth."

Jasinski further said she had spoken with Ward after her deposition to inquire whether her transcript was sealed or unsealed. She said she told Ward that she would be arguing to have the depositions sealed.

Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Kerry B. Zahner also submitted a letter of support for Kur. In it she discussed the employees' point on policies, specifically an issue with a confidentiality policy.

Zahner said her, Ward and Kur met on Nov. 13 to discuss two telephone conversations Ward had with Jarema. Zahner said Jarema had called Ward to get information from a criminal file in a case handled by Zahner. According to Zahner's letter, Jarema said he was representing a victim in the case.

In the meeting on the matter, which was in Kur's office, Zahner said Kur was explaining to Ward that she should send these types of calls to one of the attorneys in the office in the future and she discussed the confidentiality policy.

Zahner said Ward expressed confusion over this policy and said Ward told her and Kur that she did not share much information with Jarema and "mostly listened."

Zahner added, "I participated in this meeting to address my concern that Mrs. Ward had violated the confidentiality policy as it related to the case that I handled. I did not harass or intimidate Mrs. Ward and cannot understand how she could possibly have been left with that impression."

"There appeared to be a tacit understanding that we all did not need to be friends, we just needed to be civil and do our jobs."

Michael J. Atchinson,
Former assistant prosecutor in a letter

On Monday, former assistant prosecuting attorney Michael J. Atchinson also filed an unsolicited letter supporting Kur.

Atchinson said he was employed in the prosecutor's office when Jarema was dismissed and it was apparent the support staff was unhappy about it. But, he said it seemed that work had returned to normal in the weeks following the termination.

"There appeared to be a tacit understanding that we all did not need to be friends, we just needed to be civil and to do our jobs," he said.

He added that on the day of Jarema's dismissal, Kur addressed the attorneys and staff, telling them that her office door was open if anyone wanted to discuss anything.

"I never witnessed, not was I ever made aware of, any incidences of hostile treatment. I have known (Kur) to be very careful in what she says and does while in a professional or adversarial setting," Atchinson said. "This is evidenced by her agility and discretion in the courtroom and in the presence of the media."

The employees also said in their letter they brought this matter to Kur before taking it to the personnel committee. Kur said they have never spoken with her about it.

Girl Scouts help out at Pine River

Girl Scout Troop 254 of Charlevoix's fifth grade went to Pine River senior apartments and played Bingo and enjoyed cookies and milk with residents. This girl scout troop has "adopted" Pine River as their service project for the year. They made fall pumpkin door hangers and Christmas door hangers for them. Several troops went Dec. 14 and sang Christmas carols. Troop Leaders are Kim Molter and Diana Speigl. Above Caroline Dupuis is holding the ball while Katie Young is spinning balls for Bingo. Rayders won two thrillers at home last week

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

It's been some time since the Charlevoix Rayders basketball teams have been involved in close games during the regular season.

Last season, no team came within 18 points of Charlevoix before the tournament.

The Rayders haven't forgotten how to win the close ones, however, as they won two dogfights at home last week, beating rivals Petoskey and Boyne City, 55-54 and 53-42, respectively.

Nate Teuscher's driving layup with two seconds left on the clock won the cliffhanger over the Northmen.

"It was just a great high school game," coach Keith Haske said. "It was classic Charlevoix-Petoskey. It was a lot of fun to be a part of it."

With a large throng looking on, the Rayders jumped out to a 5-0 lead with all five scored by Spencer Bryan. The Northmen clawed back, however, taking a 9-7 lead with 1:40 left in the first stanza.

Ben Bergmann and Scott Friske scored back-to-back hoops for a 11-9 Rayder lead. After a Petoskey basket, Bryce Daly closed the first quarter scoring with a jumper for a 13-11 Charlevoix lead.

The Rayders scored the first five points of the second quarter on a lay-in by Donovan Swanson and a three-pointer by David Shearer for an 18-11 Charlevoix lead. It looked like the home team might have the momentum to put the game away and Petoskey called a timeout.

Out of the timeout, though, the Northmen answered with back-to-back three-pointers by Anthony Wilhelm and Damon Huffman to trim the lead to one. Travis Smith answered with a three for the Rayders to bump the lead back to 21-17 with 5:15 left in the half.

Petoskey was no closer than four in the rest of the half and another Smith three-point bomb pushed the lead to 30-23 at the half.

The second half was more of the nip and tuck as the Rayders led by eight at 35-26 on a Bergmann basket, but six straight by the Northmen cut the lead to three at 35-32. Smith again answered with another jumper to extend the lead to 37-32 at the 3:40 mark.

Huffman countered for Petoskey and Smith buried another three for a 40-34 Rayder advantage. Petoskey countered with a basket and Smith did it again, nailing another three-point shot for a 43-36 Charlevoix lead.

Following a Petoskey timeout, the Northmen scored four straight to close to within three, but Teuscher hit a three-pointer at the third-quarter buzzer to make it 46-40, Charlevoix.

Huffman opened the fourth period with a three-pointer and the gap again closed to three. It remained between three and five for the first five minutes of the quarter. Petoskey hit a three-pointer with 3:05 remaining to cut the lead to one at 51-50 and less than a minute later, the Northmen scored on a put-back to take the lead at 52-51 with 2:18 remaining.

The Rayders missed their next shot, Petoskey rebounded and went into a slowdown. Huffman, who had been on fire all night and finished with 20 points, was fouled. With 1:02 remaining, he missed the front end of a one-and-one. The rebound was deflected out of bounds to Petoskey.

On the in-bounds play, Huffman was again fouled. He missed another one-and-one and Bryan rebounded for the Rayders with 50 seconds left on the clock.

Teuscher, playing in his first home game of the season due to a football injury, hit on a jumper for a 53-52 Charlevoix lead with 40 seconds remaining. Petoskey got the ball in Huffman's hands one more time, but Scott Friske rejected his shot. The ball again went out of bounds to Petoskey with 20 seconds left on the clock.

The Northmen again went to their star Huffman and he responded, scoring on a drive in traffic for a 54-53 advantage with 12.3 seconds left.

Following a Charlevoix timeout, the ball was inbounded to Teuscher who took the ball coast-to-coast and scored on a drive with two seconds on the clock. Petoskey's desperation shot at the buzzer was no good and the Rayders were victorious.

"Nate looked like his old self for us," Haske said. "He was more aggressive and it was great for him to do that in his first game back."

Haske also praised Smith, who led the Rayders with 14 points.

"All of his points came on huge shots for us," Haske explained. "This was a game of momentum and his shots swung it our way many times."

Teuscher finished with nine points, five rebounds and five assists. Friske, who was triple-teamed most of the night, added seven points, 11 rebounds and three blocks.

For Haske, the victory was number 100 for him as Charlevoix coach. The Rayders have a 101-32 record in his five-plus seasons.

Against Boyne City, the scrappy, physical Ramblers, played a deliberate game and hung close all night long.

"They wanted to play slow," Haske said. "They did a good job, being real deliberate and not turning the ball over much."

After a 2-0 Boyne lead, Charlevoix scored nine straight and held a 9-4 first quarter lead. The Ramblers closed within one at 14-13, but the Rayders scored the last eight points of the half for a 22-13 halftime edge.

In the third quarter, the Rayders pushed the lead to as much as 29-14 on a Smith three-pointer but the Ramblers battled back and trailed only 35-27 at the end of the period.

Boyne closed to within three at 43-40 with 3:08 remaining on back-to-back three-pointers. But the Ramblers didn't score for the next three minutes as Friske scored eight points to close out the victory.

"I liked the way we finished," Haske said. "They closed in on us, but we didn't panic and responded."

Friske led the Rayders with 16 points, eight rebounds, three steals and two assists. Daly added nine points and Cody Crain scored seven. Teuscher handed out six assists.

The Rayders (7-1 overall, 3-1 conference) traveled to Kalkaska Jan. 21, but results were unavailable at presstime. They host Traverse City St. Francis on Jan. 24.

Volleyball team wins one, loses one in play last week

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

It was an up-and-down week for the Rayder volleyball team as they opened with a good win over Boyne City, 13-15, 15-5, 15-11, but lost to Kalkaska 15-8, 8-15, 9-15 in an uninspired performance.

"The girls went from playing one of their best games of the year (against Boyne) to one of their worst (against Kalkaska)," coach Liz Grunch said. "I hadn't seen them play as bad as they did against Kalkaska."

In the victory over the Ramblers, Kari Way paced the offense with 12 kills. Natashia Kleiber added seven. Becca Kanine had 28 assists and was the leading server, according to Grunch.

Erin Burns, Way and Kleiber spearheaded the defensive effort.

Against the Blazers, Kleiber again led the attack with 12 kills. Theresa Martin and Andrea Ruhlman each had five.

Grunch tabbed Kleiber and Kanine as leading servers and Kleiber and Way as the defensive stalwarts. Kanine handed out 20 assists in the losing effort.

The Rayders (3-2 conference, 11-9-3 overall) return to action Thursday at Traverse City St. Francis.

Sheriff warns the ice not safe

Each year, there are recreational ice-related accidents and fatalities on ice-covered bodies of water — often the cause of poor judgment or poor decision-making based upon inadequate information.

No ice is safe. Anyone who decides to go out onto a frozen body of water must make a personal decision to do so, realizing that there is a degree of risk associated with this choice.

Ice seldom freezes at a uniform rate. What constitutes a safe depth of ice is difficult to apply in all cases. While three inches of ice on a farm pond may pose little danger, that same three inches on a moving stream or lake with springs, stumps and currents could be very dangerous.

On the Great Lakes, one step from 3 foot ice may lead to nothing more than skim ice on the next step.

For these reasons, the Department of Natural Resources does not advocate the use of relative ice thickness guides. It is crucial that anglers, and others considering recreating on the ice, take individual responsibility in evaluating the quality and soundness of the ice on the particular body of water in question.

While attempting to apply ice thickness guides to all ice-covered waters is not recommended, some of the following safety precautions may prove useful:

- Wear a personal flotation device and don't fish alone.
- Leave information about your plans with someone where you intend to fish and when you plan to return.
- Know Before You Go" — Know the condition of the ice before venturing out, taking into consideration recent possible effects changes in the weather have had on the ice.
- Children should always be supervised on the ice.
- Use an ice spud bar or an auger to test the ice ahead of you.
- Before venturing out onto the ice, check with local sources, such as bait and tackle shops, for the most up-to-date information.

Local grandma finishes 26.2 mile marathon

Local resident, and grandmother of seven, Louis Thompson had a dream, and a vision, and realized that dream on Jan. 12, 2003, when she ran and completed the Walt Disney World Marathon in Orlando.

The marathon is 26.2 miles.

Thompson began "occasional and sporadic jogging" when her teenagers joined the Charlevoix High School Cross Country team 20 years ago.

"If you want to see the kids run cross country, you have to run from place to place to cheer them on," she said.

Then, after the children graduated and left the nest, there were occasional "spurts of running" with them at events such as the Lilac Festival on Mackinac Island, the 8 mile run around the island after Labor Day and the Jeff Drenth Memorial Runs.

Her daughter-in-law, Ann, spotted an ad for the Disney Marathon in 1999 and, knowing Thompson's love of anything and everything Disney, suggested they try the half-marathon as a millennium goal. But, by then, entries had closed, and the idea was forgotten for a while.

Then, when Brian, Thompson's son, and Ann moved to Florida two years ago, the subject came up again. As a result, Ann and Thompson ran the half marathon on Jan. 6, 2002, both completing the run in time for finisher medals.

Thompson was bitten, and convinced Ann they could go for the full marathon "next year." They registered last March, and were off and running.

"I was told once that I was goal oriented and I guess that it is true. But, I don't see anything bad about having a goal and working toward it, whether it's in your personal life or your professional life," Thompson said. "Some people may call it a spirit of competitiveness, but I don't see it that way. If competition enters into it at all, it's competing only with yourself. It was a goal I had to work hard toward. If it does say anything about me, it's that I finish what I start."

The training was not without setbacks, including a badly sprained ankle in October, just as training was entering the higher mileage weekly long runs.

"It slowed me down a bit, but I continued to work toward the goal. The new bike trail is a terrific facility. I loved running it and meeting lots of people out on a Fall afternoon biking, walking, skateboarding and running. I hope lots more people will get out and at least walk parts of it. It's beautiful," she said.

The marathon started at 6 a.m., Jan. 12, with a chilly temperature at race time of 47 degrees. People were wrapped in anything they could use to keep warm, including trash bags.

The run started at Epcot, ran along World Drive to the Magic Kingdom, over to Animal Kingdom, to the Sports Center, through MGM Studios, back to the Boardwalk Resort, and returned with a run through Epcot to the finish in the Epcot parking lot.

The crowds never quit on the 26.2 mile course. Even at 7 hours the cast members and guests of the park were still out there, cheering and encouraging the runners. The course was broken up by intermittent character sightings, bands, encouraging quotes on billboards, singing groups, DJs broadcasting, big screen televisions (so you could watch yourself run), unusual animals at Animal Kingdom, as well as many water and stops, medical tents and even a wedding ceremony at the Magic Kingdom.

It took Thompson 8 minutes to reach the start line due to the number of runners starting the run (18,000 full-marathoners; 6,000 half-marathoners).

"I was amazed and thrilled," Thompson said of the finish. "It was an overwhelming feeling of accomplishment that brought me to tears!"

Of the 22,000 runners, 9,411 finished the course — 4572 men and 4839 women. Thompson finished 8,631 with a time of 6 hours, 39 minutes, 49 seconds in time to pick up the coveted finisher's "Mickey Medal." Ann finished in 5 hours, 35 minutes and 45 seconds for number 6,004.

Both women are contemplating future marathons.

Band shell debate not new to city

Today, the East Park and waterfront project is very much on the minds of Charlevoix's residents. A lot of thought and debate has gone into what would be the best total layout that will not compromise the integrity and beauty of the area.

Back in the 1950s, the need for a band shell and stage in East Park was very much in the air. Many ideas were brought up for debate. The bandstand of the time was a green wooden platform about four feet off the ground, open to the elements on all sides. Whenever a breeze came along, it lifted the music until the sound dissipated into thin air, largely unheard by the audience. The sheet music often soared away with it.

Photographer and historian Bob Miles, came up with this idea. He superimposed a Hollywood Bowl-type structure onto the walkway in the center of East Park.

The acoustics of these structures are renowned, and the concentrated sound that would have been produced here would have carried out into Lake Michigan. Except for blocking the view at this location, the idea had several supporters at the time.

Renovation plans for East Park, marina moving along

COSTS

United Design will now start its preliminary study that will include contracting with Charlevoix's Ferguson and Chamberlain Associates to do both topographic and hydrographic surveys. The surveys will include locating pipelines, electrical and telephone lines and sewers and to determine limitations to areas proposed for dredging.

United Design has also contracted with Soils and Structures, Inc. of Muskegon to do 13 soil borings and a report. The subcontract questioned by DDA member Dan Barron is with Sagasser & Associates, Inc. of Gaylord.

At this point Sagasser will be in charge of further sediment sampling to look at the proposed excavated area. It will assess potential contaminants in that area and determine how it will be required to be disposed of. But Barron said a local company could do the work.

United Design will also prepare complete preliminary cost estimates for the marina.

After this preliminary work is done, United Design will return and council will decide whether to instruct them to move forward and apply for permits and draft final construction drawings. United's fee for this second phase will be based on the total project cost.

The only question council has with the contract deals with insurance. City attorney Jim Young is exploring the issue with city treasurer Rick Brandi and the city's insurance carrier.

Pollack was contracted to prepare preliminary designs and complete preliminary cost estimates for the East Park project. Pollack's work will look at land based facilities including buildings like the combined harbor master's quarters and marina support facility, a performance facility and a visitor information pavilion. The land design will also include: lighting, promenades, parking, irrigation and grading.

Pollack said the preliminary study will be ready in three months.

If Pollack and United Design are contracted to move into the second design and construction phase, the two will work together in applying for permits to the United States Army Corps of Engineers, the Land and Water Management Division of the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality and the Michigan Department of Public Health. Currently neither have the contract for construction.

Local schools preparing for cuts in state funding pected expense without cutting programs or staff this year.

"The good part is we saved money in anticipation that this day may come and here it is. If we didn't have that cushion, as many school districts don't, we would have to look at programs and make cuts to get revenues equal to expenses," Sturock said.

Charlevoix Public Schools is anticipating a year-end fund balance of $2,125,740. The money to balance the budget will be deducted from that balance.

At Northwest, school administrators decided to build a fund balance this year for future needs with a goal of saving 4 percent.

"Well, guess what, that goes. The fund balance will get us through the year, but we won't have the opportunity to save," Cochran said.

While both are safe this year, planning for what next year may bring is already underway.

"It could get ugly," Sturock said.

He explained that no concrete information about next year has been handed down, but he has heard the state budget deficit may be between $1.5 and $2 billion with a shortfall of between $300 and $400 in the education fund.

"That will be significant," he said.

In February, Sturock, school administrators and district accountant Judy Boss will meet and put together scenarios of what next year will bring. Those scenarios will look at the outcome for the district in light of probable reductions in state aid and static enrollment numbers and factoring in increasing health care and retirement costs and wage increases.

Cochran and Sturock expect to know Granholm's definite plan for this year within the next month, but are sure a cut will be made.

"The cut isn't final, the state has 30 days to work the budget out, but I doubt they would have sent a letter to everyone if she wasn't planning on doing that," Cochran said.

Center study gets funding

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix's ability to attract meeting groups during its typically slow season is being explored.

Charles Skelton, president of Hospitality Advisors of Detroit and Minneapolis, Minn., was hired by Charlevoix's Downtown Development Authority (DDA) and the Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau.

The consulting group will look at the possibility of a convention facility thriving in Charlevoix without being used during the month of July and the first three weeks of August.

Skelton's consulting group already performed a market analysis and estimated utilization of a meeting facility on a year-round basis. The group found the meeting facility would see greatest use during Charlevoix's peak tourist and resort season.

But members of city council, the DDA, the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce and the visitors bureau agreed that summer isn't a time when business needs to be generated.

While some feel there is a chance of a meeting facility sparking the off season economy others worry there is no way it will bring in enough money to support itself.

"I would be very surprised if that thing (a Charlevoix meeting facility) can stand on its own 10 months out of the year," DDA Chairman Hugh Mason said.

In spite of Mason's uncertainty, at the Jan. 20 meeting the DDA unanimously approved spending $6,500 to study its 10 month capabilities.

Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner said the point of the study is to make sure the city doesn't make a mistake.

"I don't know if the facility is a good idea or not. We'll study projected revenue and cost and see if it makes sense. It makes

Lawsuit against Kur to go to trial

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

A whistleblower lawsuit against Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur and the county appears to be headed for a May trial.

In a ruling Friday, Cheboygan Circuit Court Judge Scott Pavlich — who is hearing the case in Charlevoix — ruled that the case can head to trial, which was one of a three part ruling. The lawsuit was filed by former chief assistant prosecutor John Jarema over his termination in February 2002.

Pavlich also dismissed an invasion of privacy claim filed by Jarema and unsealed depositions in the case — which Kur's attorneys were fighting against. In December, Pavlich dismissed defamation claims against Kur.

Jarema sued Kur and the county for invasion of privacy, defamation and violations of the Whistleblower's Act. He claims he was about to inform the county of mismanagement in the prosecutor's office when he was fired by Kur.

Jarema also claimed Kur defamed him at a Charlevoix

A 21-year-old Sylvania, Ohio man was injured around 4 p.m., Jan. 18 in a snowmobile crash that occurred at the former Thunder Mountain Ski Area on Slashing Road in Hudson Township.

According to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, Patrick James Enright, of Sylvania, Ohio, suffered a fracture of his right leg when the 1996 Polaris Snowmobile he was riding struck a base of former chairlift tower. Enright was thrown over the handlebars.

Enright was transported to Northern Michigan Hospital by the Boyne City Ambulance Service. The sheriff's office was assisted at the scene by the Hudson Township First Responders.

This crash was caused by the rider not being familiar with the area and riding in an area where snowmobiles have not been allowed. The office wishes to warn snowmobilers not to trespass and to use extreme caution when riding in an unfamiliar area where objects can be hidden under fresh snow.

Northwest music students produce CD

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Northwest Academy students recently released a 22 song CD, "The Northwest Academy Band Compilation." Proceeds from the sale will benefit the school's music program and the non-profit production company Go!Multimedia. Here the school's advanced band practices under the direction of Gary Stutzman. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

A group of 24 talented Northwest Academy students have taken the next step in their music careers.

The group, under the direction of Northwest music coordinator Gary Stutzman, recently released a professional recording. The CD, "The Northwest Academy Band Compilation," produced by Go!Multimedia, includes 22 selections performed by the school's 13 person Jazz Ensemble, 23 person Advanced Band and nine member Jazz Combo.

"It was a neat opportunity to co-produce an excellent band directed by my high school music teacher and mentor," Ken Paul, president of Go!Multimedia, said.

Paul graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1976 and has since moved to a suburb outside of Chicago, Ill. But his roots are still strong in Charlevoix.

His attachment to the community prompted him to establish Go!Mulitmedia, a non-profit group, in 1998. He said the company strives to provide students an opportunity to pursue a career in music and to establish a musical heritage in Charlevoix.

The Northwest CD is part of that legacy.

Last winter the jazz ensemble and advanced band recorded at Charlevoix Middle School. Then, in May of 2002, the Jazz Combo had the unique opportunity to record in a professional studio in Chicago, Ill.

The group went to the windy city in May of 2002 for a two day recording session at a studio Paul helped design.

Stutzman said the experience was both educational and exciting for the students.

"The amount of time that goes into a recording session makes everyone bring their level of play up a notch," he said. "After they got over the initial tension of the microphones and what was going on, they relaxed and had an incredible session."

Students were pleased to find that when recording, unlike with live performances, they had second, third and even fourth chances to get it right.

The CDs are $20 and are available in Charlevoix at the school located at 115 West Hurlbut and at the Bridge Street Book Shop located at 405 Bridge Street.

Proceeds will be split between Go!Mulitmedia and the school. The non-profit production company plans to use the money to further enhance recording studios at Charlevoix Middle School and at Northwest Academy and to provide scholarships to students.

The school's portion will go toward the purchase of new music and equipment.

Committee rules against Kur harassment claims

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Members of Charlevoix County's personnel committee ruled harassment charges against county prosecutor Mary Beth Kur were not discriminatory as defined by the county policy Wednesday.

The commissioners also stated, if the committee did find harassment, as a matter of state statue there is nothing it could actually do about it. The personnel committee is composed of Commissioners Valerie Snyder, Shirley Roloff and Randy Frykberg.

"I just don't think we can do anything," Snyder said.

Kur was accused of harassment by four staff members in her office — Jackie Rozema, Wendy Viles, Carol Quinn and Sandy Ward — mostly in relation to a lawsuit filed by former assistant chief prosecutor John Jarema over his dismissal.

The employees said they were required to attend closed door meetings with Kur's attorney to discuss pending litigation in the case, some employees were told Kur's attorney does not represent them because they are "uncooperative" and some employees were being subjected to lengthy post deposition "interrogations" and being told they were "disloyal" and being subjected to "mandatory and ambiguous policies."

However, Kur denies this and gave the committee a stack of letters from lawyers in her office and outside of it to support her.

"Really what they are complaining about is a difficult working environment. I think our employees have the same recourse as any other employee has," Snyder said. "Your recourse is to go talk to your boss. If you can't talk to your boss, somehow you have to make it better or leave."

All three of the commissioners agreed there was a problem in the prosecuting attorney's office, but that there was no "protected class" harass-

Have a plan to avoid the winter blues

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

Cabin fever came early this year in the McBain household.

Usually this yearly sickness starts showing signs of infection around mid-March, with wild eyes and short tempers, which leads to a two-week vegging-out period. This is the period when no one leaves the house, or the couch, and potato chips become the food of choice for all meals.

I know, some of you health conscious ones out there will admonish me for this behavior, but it is only temporary. For the rest of the year I hit the gym four times a week and try to watch what I eat.

But, something happens during cabin fever period. Maybe I am giving in to the cold, dark weather around me, if only for a brief period.

This year it has come early. I am already staring at my couch with these desires to stay put for days at a time. I am already feeling the temptation to visit the potato chip aisle at the grocery store. And, sadly for those who live with me, I already have noticed I am doing strange things.

In fact, for some reason I shaved off my beard on the coldest day of the winter last week. Now I am debating whether or not to grow it back, even though I look like a 19-year-old boy with graying hair and a double chin. I reasoned that James Bond, Indiana Jones and all the other Hollywood hunks don't have beards, so I shouldn't.

Strange rationale is a sign of the winter sickness.

However, this year I have pledged to destroy these winter blahs through well-planned activities that would be good for my mind and body.

Perhaps the fever knew that this year I was trying to hatch a plan to beat it and it figured if it struck early, it would catch me off-guard. It was right. This just means I have to get my plans enacted sooner.

Since I know that I am not alone in this fight, I thought I would share some of my plans with my readers. I hope they will help you figure out a way to overcome this fever before you do something drastic — like dance naked in your yard, attempt to target practice with snowmobilers from your porch or push a convention center or traffic ambassador idea on the community.

1) Practice my bagpipe playing more. A good bagpiper is a musician. A bad bagpiper sounds like he is killing a cat. This goes for any musical instrument.

2) Keep going to the gym four times a week to get rid of the double chin. I have been trying to get in shape for about two years now and have so far managed to lift a lot of weight, but still keep the gut and chin. I learned recently that you also have to eat right and do aerobic activities, like running, to actually lose weight. I guess I will try that....if I have to.

3) Get outside more. I am planning on going for walks in the woods and maybe doing more small game hunting. Hunting small furry creatures is a great way to ease your tension. I should note that I am a horrible shot and have missed pretty much any animal that stumbles into my line of fire.

4) Talk to old friends more. I have about a dozen names in my address book of friends who I have been wanting to catch up with for about two years. I think it is time to do so. I hope they still remember who I am.

5) Learn a new skill. I am a big fan of the Discovery channel's "Monster Garage," where a group of engineers and mechanics join forces to turn a car into something wild. One week they turned a Ford Mustang into a really fast lawnmower — it was very cool. However, my wife refuses to let me try anything "cool" with her new Mercury Cougar. I was thinking something along the lines of a Cougar/snowmobile, with skis that pop down from the front.

6) Travel, preferably to somewhere warm. If you can't beat the cold weather, take a break from it. I figure anyplace that serves icy drinks and has warm beaches will work.

7) Finish one of the books that I am writing. This will be a hard one because every time I start a book, I come up with a different story line and start another one. So far I have seven different books that are half-written on the computer at home.

8) Come up with more ideas. My goal is 10, but when you have the winter blahs, I figure it is a victory to come up with seven.

I hope this helps everyone out there who desires to end these winter blues. If they don't work, perhaps you will see me with a half shaven face, dancing in my front yard. Let's pray they work.

Little understood scientists discover parasite solution

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

One of the small comforts of living in the Great White North above the forty-fifth parallel is the relative absence of the more grotesque kinds of human parasites.

The tropics may be climatically comfortable, but they are biologically troublesome. Most kinds of human parasites prefer the warmer sorts of year-round climate that we also seem to favor, where "the livin' is easy," especially for parasites.

In those warmer parts of the world, where parasites flourish, they do cause a considerable amount of pain and suffering — an amount of suffering that may be at the point of ending for hundreds of millions of our fellow humans.

A group of small to medium sized (generally less than an inch long) worms called Filarial Nematodes infect more than 120 million people, most commonly in Africa, Southern Asia and South and Central America. They are spread from person to person by the bite of insects, mostly mosquitoes, black flies and deer flies. They blind and maim millions every year. Our nearest temperate zone contact with the whole group of parasites is the potential for Heartworm infection in our domestic dogs, which is caused by the same sort of mosquito-carried worms.

While we have been very successful in treating a majority of infectious human diseases, parasites like the filarial worms present particularly troublesome situations. Most of the medications available up to now have more or less serious side effects often more problematic than the parasite and are too costly for routine use.

In what can only be described as stunning new information we can see the potential eradication of these horrible parasites.

Letter to the editor

Put police on the street

Editor:

The annual grouching about summer traffic is quite interesting; I compared it mentally with Dale Boss's charming and upbeat idea for a tower. Really, quite an excellent idea, but that's another letter.

Aside from the fact that the other complaint exists concerning winter traffic (too little), there really is very little to be done concerning summer traffic. One hour bridge openings might help a bit, however, accumulating boats for an hour instead of half an hour....well.

How about something so devastatingly simple that it seems to elude the thinking of the local bureaucracy. A policeman on the sidewalk. A person who could step into traffic with the kind of authority I used to see in Charlevoix in the person of chief of police Jack Moll.

Not a large man physically, Jack had great presence and was always perfect and precise in dress and bearing. I, driving very cautiously through town one summer day a number of years ago, watched, incredulous, as a young pregnant woman carrying a baby and trailed by a 3-year-old wandered into traffic near the Park Street corner as though looking for someone and rather oblivious to the child somewhere behind her among the vehicles of all sizes.

As I was about to put on the blinkers in my van and step out to retrieve the child, Jack materialized from, well, somewhere, neat, erect, precise and courtly. He stopped traffic, directed the lady to the curb, she seemed not to understand, at the same time he somehow made the drivers all aware of the child, less that 36 inches tall in among the cars. Then getting the lady's attention, he directed her and the baby to the sidewalk and retrieved the frightened and, by now, crying child from the middle of the street.

No fuss, no muss, he disappeared into the crowd after directing traffic to continue. Time elapsed? Probably not more than a minute or two.

OK, given, police chiefs are, by definition, authoritative folks, so what's wrong with our present chief taking his turn on the sidewalks in the summer directing folks, doing some PR, seeing that traffic moves as well as it is able, doing the things that cops do on the street?

In fact, what's wrong with all of the local policemen and women taking their turn on the sidewalks so that there is one walking down town at all times everyday during July and August? Then, no further money needs to be spent on salaries, local and visiting folks will meet our force and know that things go well and smoothly in Charlevoix and why.

Even strange science can help the general public

The world has only a relative handful of parasitologists; the people who study these peculiar and fascinating worms. Most of what they find out is of little interest to nearly everyone. Most of them are not studying diseases, but are looking at just how these worms manage to survive and thrive in a complex world.

Information available for only the last few years has revealed that worms are themselves infested with a particular sort of bacteria, that is necessary for the worm's survival. Why would such a discovery be of any interest to the non-parasitologists of the world? Like many little, esoteric biological facts, this one has immense implications for all of us.

An ordinary, commonly available, cheap broad spectrum antibiotic (tetracycline) will kill all the bacteria in the worms and shortly thereafter the parasitic worms die. There are essentially no side effects of the treatment.

Parasitic disease that had been a monstrous human health problem potentially affecting one billion of the world's people can now be effectively and cheaply eliminated. No more River Blindness, no more Elephantiasis, no more of the debillitating parasite infestations that are almost universal in much of the tropics and incidentally no more heartworm problem for your dog.

Next time someone suggests that "our" tax money should not be spent on frivolous, self-serving projects like some parasitologist studying whether bacteria live in nematode worms, remember this story. Tell this story to your children and make sure it gets told in your local school.

We clearly benefit from all kinds of science, not just the kind that we can easily understand.

Holly Daze 2002 figures in

Tracking down unique and irresistible auction donations spelled success for Holly Daze 2002.

The annual fundraiser for the Charlevoix Area Hospital grossed $116,247. Patti Aikin and Sharon Blossom, co-chairpersons of the event, announced final figures this week and gratefully thanked sponsors and donors for their generous support.

"The outcome surpassed my wildest dreams," Bill Jackson, hospital president, said. He added the original goal was $71,000.

The money raised will furnish and equip two new birthing rooms plus buy a fetal monitor and other equipment for the hospital.

"Identifying a particular purpose for the proceeds right from the start was advantageous," Patti Aikin said. "Early on supporters knew the money was designated for something special not simply a general fund, for example. That made the job of publicity and soliciting much easier and obviously more profitable."

Not only was the event successful monetarily, but looking back to the initial planning stage the co-chairpersons pointed to the fact that their goal of capturing the magic and talent that abounds in the north was also achieved.

Both the live and silent auctions offered unusual and tempting creations appealing to all ages and both sexes.

The "Prestige Packages" offered during the live auction in particular raised a considerable amount of money. Whether it was the exclusivity of a tour of exceptional boathouses and motor manors, the draw of attending a nationally acclaimed flower show or an opportunity to cruise Lake Charlevoix in an authentic lobster boat, bidding was fierce.

Items donated by local artists were a source of great pleasure and revenue too.

Working on the assumption that quality and uniqueness would attract bidders, organizers scoured the area for "Favorite Finds" to include in both the live and silent auctions. Many of the artists indicated they would like to have advance notice so that they can create something special for 2003.

Of course who can forget the rare 1934 English built Singer Roadster generously donated by Lowell and Sharon Blossom. Ticket sales raised nearly $25,000 and generated endless enthusiasm for Holly Daze. The winning ticket was held by Jane Brauburger of Bellaire.

A couple of new features to the tenth annual event were particularly noteworthy.

Preview Night kicked off festivities with dinner at the Charlevoix Country Club. Guests had the pleasure of viewing all the auction items and submitting sealed bids nearly a week before the main event. The Angel Shoppe sold a wide assortment of affordable gifts. The 40 children who attended Elf School, while their parents shopped made special treats for Santa's reindeer, decorated cookies and had their picture taken with Santa.

Speaking about their success Patti Aikin said, "The appeal during Holly Daze 2002 was more personal and better organized. We relied on representatives from the surrounding communities to reach out to their neighbors. As a result, response and support from Boyne City, East Jordan and Elk Rapids was terrific. Participation increased tenfold.

Renovations to Brookside Chapel studied

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

An architect has been selected to look at renovation possibilities at the Brookside Chapel in Charlevoix's Brookside Cemetery.

Patrick Birtles, an architect with Birtles, Hagerman and DeKryger Architects of Cadillac, was hired by the city of Charlevoix to look at potential uses for the chapel.

The building was proposed for demolition last year, but members of the community quickly stepped forward and said the building has historical value and should be saved.

Charlevoix's city council agreed to look into a possible renovation of the building. Now the challenge for Birtles and a chapel committee, made up of city administrators and community members, is to find a use for the building.

"We need a use to justify keeping it because of the cost (of renovating it)," Bill Bellows, a second ward city councilman and a member of the chapel committee, said.

Its former use as a facility where bodies were stored in the winter for spring burial is no longer relevant, as the city now performs burials year-round and has a separate facility at the cemetery for storage when necessary.

One possible use that is being strongly considered is a site for post-cremation ash storage that also serves as a place to find cemetery plot information, a sanctuary and a historical reference point.

Birtles recently walked through the chapel with City Street Department Superintendent John Martin and told the committee at a recent meeting, "From what I've seen at this point, it probably can be saved."

He also commented on the building's unique construction and found that its block structure is something he hasn't seen used before.

The building's block is a cement and colored glass mix. He said block reproduction would be expensive and renovation plans will attempt to save what is there.

Birtles also talked with the committee about providing access to both levels of the building and the potential high cost for that part of the project. If the building is designated as a historical landmark, it may be exempt from the barrier free requirement.

Birtles will now look at layout to calculate the number of ash storage spaces that could be available, keeping in mind those other uses that may accompany it.

Martin is in the process of exploring the marketability of a cremation remains storage use.

With this information the city will have a better idea of renovation costs and what potential revenue the site could produce. This cost comparison will help the committee decide whether the project is financially feasible.

Currently, Birtles does not have any cost estimates.

First ward city councilman and chapel committee member Norm "Boogie" Carlson suggested that the city look into historical grant funds.

Birtles said this type of grant is limited and hard to get, but if renovations are pursued, the city should try for it. He added that there are possible tax credits for the city if it pursues the project.

Birtles' findings are expected to be ready for review by this spring.

Local police help out with large drug bust

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

A 39-year-old Bayshore woman was arrested shortly after midnight, Jan. 14 on US-31, near Burgess Road, on a warrant issued in Emmet County for delivery of cocaine.

During a search of the woman's car, police found 62 "bindles" of heroin, crack cocaine, marijuana and some prescription medications. A bindle is a small amount of heroin that sells for $15 to $20 in northern Michigan.

According to D/Lt. Kenneth Mills of the narcotics team, the woman had less than a gram of the crack cocaine, a quarter ounce of marijuana and a "handful of prescription drugs."

The arrest was the culmination of a three month investigation by the Straits Area Narcotics Enforcement team on the distribution of heroin and cocaine in Emmet and Charlevoix counties. During this investigation, officers from the narcotics organization purchased heroin and cocaine from the woman.

Mills said the organization had information that the woman was returning from southern Michigan with drugs to make some "drops" to local customers and dealers.

"She was our biggest target in this area," Mills said.

The woman's vehicle was stopped by officers from the Charlevoix Police Department and Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office.

Dennis Halverson, Charlevoix city police chief, said he has never seen a drug bust this far north with this much heroin involved.

"I think it is safe to say we are seeing some of those substances we have never seen before in quantities we have never seen before," Halverson said. "These sort of highly addictive drugs will have an effect on criminal activity."

Mills said the investigation is ongoing and further charges will be sought.

The woman was released from jail Jan. 14 on bond. An arraignment has been set for 9 a.m., Feb. 5 in the Emmet County District Court.

County reminds residents to return surveys

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Who: Charlevoix County
What it is: A survey on local planning.
Due date: Feb. 28

Around 12,000 Charlevoix County residents and nonresident property owners recently received a survey that will guide future land use planning in the county.

At first glance the colorful survey looks like a brochure, but Charlevoix County Planner Larry Sullivan does not want those who receive it to mistake it for junk mail.

He said it is an important planning tool for future development.

He said the survey will take only a few minutes to fill out and will bring a wealth of information to those working on the county land use plan which is expected to be complete by the end of 2003.

Responses to 35 questions will be analyzed by the staff of the Michigan State University Cooperative Extension office in Boyne City to see where respondents' attitudes fall with respect to land use controls. That is, do they favor strict or lenient government control.

Responses to the survey are requested to be sent in by Feb. 28.

"But the sooner the better," Sullivan said.

He hopes to see a high response rate. A business reply envelope will be included with the survey so respondents won't be charged postage.

Survey result data entry will be done by employees of the county planning department and of the Michigan State University Cooperative Extension office. Sullivan said he is hoping to have the data compiled by the end of March.

The data will be used to fine tune policy statements the county has drafted following land use visioning sessions it hosted this summer.

There will be a number of opportunities for public input, review and discussion before the land use plan is adopted.

Coast Guard demonstrates ice safety

Ski team has good week on the slopes

Both the girls' and boys' Charlevoix/East Jordan High School ski teams took third place at the Nub's Nob League race Jan. 23.

"I am very pleased considering it has been a tough two weeks with both schools having exams," coach Sue Miller said. "We were rushed the day of this meet right from school to the start of the race. The athletes did not get a chance to really warm up, especially with the strong winds and cold temperatures."

The boys' team had a total of 103 points, putting it in third behind Harbor Springs, in first, and Boyne City, in second.

Basketball team finishes tough week

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

Charlevoix finished the first half of the Lake Michigan Conference boys' basketball schedule with a one game disadvantage in the standings, but a decided home court advantage in the schedule.

The Rayders are 4-2 in the conference and one game behind Harbor Springs and Elk Rapids, both 5-1, in the standings. Charlevoix will host both of their toughest competitors in the second half of the season.

"I think maybe people are starting to figure out that with our league this year, any road win is a big win," coach Keith Haske explained.

The Rayders split their two league games last week, falling at Kalkaska, 71-58, but bouncing back to beat Traverse City St. Francis at home, 70-60.

Traverse City St. Francis led most of the first half, including 15-13 at the end of the first quarter and 23-22 at the half. However, the Gladiators never led by more than four.

After St. Francis scored the first basket of the second half, a key personal foul followed by a technical foul was called on the Gladiators. Donovan Swanson made one of the two foul shots and Bryce Daly sunk both technical shots for a 25-25 tie at the 7:08 mark of the second half.

The Rayders would never trail again.

Charlevoix's seniors took over inside with Todd Carey scoring six points in one minute to give the Rayders a 33-27 advantage with 4:14 left in the third quarter. After the Gladiators clawed back for a 33-33 tie, Spencer Bryan scored the next six Rayder points, two on a dazzling behind-the-back pass from Nate Teuscher to give Charlevoix a 39-35 lead.

Carey then followed with yet another layup on a steal and assist from Daly. David Shearer stole another errant St. Francis pass and dished to Scott Friske who, after a foul and free throw, converted the three-point play. Friske hit two more free throws to close out the quarter and the Rayders' run led to a 46-35 advantage.

The Gladiators were no closer than six the rest of the way, closing it to 59-53. Again the Charlevoix running game broke the game open.

Carey scored on a feed from Travis Smith, breaking the St. Francis press. Friske then stole two consecutive passes and turned them into points for a 65-53 Rayder lead.

"Swanson, Carey and Bryan played outstanding games," Haske said. "Their effort was great. It wasn't just the points they were getting. They were diving, getting loose balls."

Friske led Charlevoix in scoring with 17 points. Carey added 14. Teuscher had 12 points, nine rebounds, six assists and five steals. Bryan scored 10.

"Overall, I thought it was one of our best defensive efforts," Haske said. "We played thirty-two minutes of good defense. The second half was probably our best half of basketball in the last few weeks."

At Kalkaska, it was a Jekyll and Hyde performance for the Rayders. Charlevoix trailed early, 16-15 at the end of one and 39-34 at the half.

In the third quarter, the Rayders led by as many as nine and outscored the Blazers, 18-9 for a 52-48 lead heading into the final quarter.

Charlevoix then drifted into a shooter's nightmare, missing its first 14 shots of the period and getting outscored 23-6 for the loss.

"One for 15 in the fourth quarter isn't something that I'd seen before," Haske said. "We had good shots, good looks, but nothing would go in."

In the scoring department, Teuscher scored 12. Friske had 11 and Daly added nine.

Haske credited Kalkaska's toughness for the victory.

"Their kids were a little tougher at crunch time," he said. "They stepped up and made the big plays. We didn't have anyone who did."

Charlevoix (8-2 overall) travels to Benzie Central on Friday, Jan. 31.

Charlevoix lost to Kingsley 24 to 57. Wins for Charlevoix were Novotny, Kiernan Sotuyo, and Travis Burke at 135 pounds. All with pins.

Charlevoix lost to Mancelona 24 to 60. Wins for Charlevoix were pins for Sotuyo and Lahr and decisions for Burke and Aepelbacher.

Marina building to get needed renovation

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Users of the Charlevoix Municipal Marina support facility that have found it to be in bad shape, will likely get some relief this summer.

Renovations to the city marina facility are part of the proposed 2003-2004 budget. While city council has not yet reviewed and approved the budget, city manager Mike Wiesner said the renovation plan is needed.

"This will get us through the next couple of years," he said.

At previous marina renovation planning meetings, Michigan Waterways Commissioner John Winn has commented that Charlevoix is often found at the bottom of the boaters list for best places to visit with top notch amenities.

The city is currently working on major renovations to the marina itself and East Park including the marina support facility, the harbor master's office and the performance area.

However, these changes aren't even expected to be begin until 2005 and condition of the current marina restroom and shower area is rapidly deteriorating.

"People know we are working on it; we are in rough shape," Wiesner said.

Wiesner said that other than general maintenance, he doesn't think the building has been renovated since it was built in the 1960s.

Plans for renovations are still being fine tuned and the budget has not been approved by city council, but preliminary estimates of cost are between $20,000 and $25,000. The money will be used to update the support facility and make it more usable.

"This will keep it halfway presentable, it's heavily used....it's tired," Wiesner said.

Plans include ventilation improvements, resetting of windows that are settling, patching tile, replacing partitions, sinks and mirrors and adding baby changing stations.

The budget review is late this year, it is usually before council at a work session by the end of January, but Wiesner said the review is expected to take place in mid-February.

Renovations to the bathroom facility are expected to come by May 1 when the city marina opens for the spring and summer season. Work is expected to be completed in April.

Charlevoix Area Hospital to offer CPR course

Would you know what to do in a cardiac emergency? During the month of February — American Heart Month — Charlevoix Area Hospital is teaching community members to know how to respond by offering free cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) classes.

The classes are being offered through a partnership with the American Heart Association.

The class will be offered at 6 p.m. on Feb. 12. and Feb. 19 at Charlevoix Area Hospital. Residents interested in participating can call Connie Roland at 547-8570 to register. Preregistration is required. Early registration is recommended due to limited space available.

Cardiovascular disease is the nation's number one killer and many deaths-about 250,000 per year occur suddenly and without warning due to sudden cardiac arrest.

A victim is likely to die within minutes if CPR and defibrillation do not occur. CPR can add critical minutes to a sudden cardiac arrest victim's life by pumping blood and oxygen to vital organs such as the heart, brain and lungs.

The signs of sudden cardiac arrest include an abrupt loss of consciousness, collapse and the loss of normal breathing. The majority of all sudden cardiac arrests occur at home and only about 5 percent of sudden cardiac arrest victims survive.

Instructors will train participants using the American Heart Association's Family and Friends course.

This is a community CPR course and does not meet CPR certification requirements of employment or required professional credentials. However, the state Good Samaritan law protects all persons trained in CPR.

The course lasts about 3-4 hours and is based on the American Heart Association's long-standing guidelines for cardiopulmonary resuscitation and emergency cardiovascular care.

In addition to training local residents, the American Heart Association's life support courses are used to train more that six million people each year.

The courses are provided through a network of 3,500 training centers and 250,000 instructors and are available year-round.

Log onto www.americanheart.org for more course information.

Commission rules against reimbursing recall group

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A request for reimbursement made by the Eveline Township Preservation Group was unanimously denied by members of the Charlevoix County Commission.

While the commission's decision was made at its meeting Jan. 22, it could revisit the issue if the group finds more evidence supporting its reimbursement claim.

"I was OK with the board's decision. It's not totally closed, but if we discover it is, we'll drop it," Nancy Ferguson, a recall petitioner with the Eveline Township Preservation Group, said.

The group requested that $1,287.50 it spent while mounting a recall campaign against county supervisor Dan Skrzeczkoski and clerk Don Hayden be paid for by the county.

On Nov. 25, 2002 Ferguson filed the two petitions with the clerk's office. Each petition had 167 signatures, 29 more than was required. But on Nov. 26, just when petitioners thought their leg work was over, Ferguson received a call from County Clerk Jane Brannon who said her office made a big mistake.

Brannon told them they had six months to collect 137 signatures, when in fact the petitions are valid for six months, but signatures expire after 90 days.

The petition they circulated to remove Hayden and Skrzeczkoski from office, was good until Feb. 12, but Brannon found 87 of the signatures on the petitions were from August and did not count toward the total.

Brannon has admitted her mistake in misinterpreting the state election law, but the group has since had to start its campaign back at square one. Ferguson has stressed that this time around, they have to collect signatures while facing winter conditions.

Ferguson suggested that the money which reflects costs associated with copies, gas and time come from the county's Errors and Omissions insurance or directly from Brannon's office.

But based on the advisement of Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney Mary Beth Kur the commission decided no money would leave the county in this matter.

Kur issued an opinion for the commissioners to review prior to the Jan. 22 meeting.

In her opinion she said county tax dollars are to be used for public purposes and this could constitute a donation to a political cause. Furthermore she said Ferguson was relying on the legal advice of an election official and governmental immunity insulates counties in such situations.

W. Randolph Frykberg, chairman of the County Commission and District Two representative said, "With that opinion before us, in my mind makes it difficult to proceed and consider any reimbursement."

Even though Sixth District Commissioner Shirley Roloff said she wanted to give the group the money, based on Kur's research she didn't see any way the commission could.

Fifth District Commissioner Dennis Jason agreed.

"It's a sorry situation, but sometimes there is nothing you can do about it," he said.

Regardless of the commission's decision, the group has forged ahead with its recall effort. Petition wording was approved Dec. 13, 2002 by the county election commission and the group has since gathered about half of the 168 signatures it needs.

Sheriff warns citizens to stay off Standard Lake

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater is warning fishermen and snowmobilers about thin ice on Standard Lake in Hudson Township.

A fisherman went through the ice on the morning of Jan. 25, but was able to pull himself to safety, according to Lasater.

The ice on Standard Lake is currently only 1-2 inches thick, with a large amount of snow on top therefore insulating the thin ice. Lasater warns all fishermen and snowmobilers about the unsafe conditions on Standard Lake in Charlevoix County and recommends everyone stay off the lake at this time.

Property on US-31 given to conservancy

A gain for the scenic preservation of the US-31 corridor was recently made with the protection of a total of 222 acres of land along more than one mile of highway frontage and a mile of frontage on Susan Creek.

"This area has been one of the top priorities of our US-31 program for many years," said Tom Bailey, executive director of the Little Traverse Conservancy. "Several key partners including the Conservancy, the sellers, several founders, and the Little Traverse Bay Bands of Odawa Indians came together to make its protection a reality. This is truly a win for everyone involved."

The property encompasses all of the US-31 frontage across from the LexaLite and Big Rock Point properties, with the exception of an intervening quarter-mile stretch retained by Consumers Energy as a utility corridor. The land drains to Susan Creek which flows into Lake Michigan.

The opportunity to purchase the tract, which encompassed two separate ownership parcels, was facilitated by Richard Lobenherz of Vacation Properties Network in Charlevoix. Lobenherz, a longtime supporter of the conservancy and its US-31 initiative, was the first to donate a conservation easement along US-31 in 1995. He donated another in 2000.

"I've enjoyed working closely with Tom Bailey and his staff over the years to help create opportunities to protect this strategically important corridor," Lobenherz said. "The window of opportunity only exists while the parcels are still in relatively large tracts. I intend to continue to do what I can to further the conservancy's goal in this worthwhile initiative."

In fact, Lobenherz is currently working with the Little Traverse Conservancy to protect an additional 1,800 feet of US-31 frontage across the road and south of the new preserve with a conservation easement.

Another facet of this story came together when Rachel Schwarz and the late Taimi Hoag of the Little Traverse Bay Bands of Odawa Indians Environmental Services Department approached the Conservancy about working together to protect the Susan Creek property.

A tributary to Lake Michigan, Susan Creek is a high priority for watershed protection. The tribe is currently monitoring water quality at this site. As a local unit of government, the tribe was also able to apply for funding earmarked for shoreline and watershed protection through the Department of Environmental Quality.

The result has been a $250,000 grant from the department's Michigan Coastal Management Program toward the land's acquisition. The tribe will hold 55 acres of the land in ownership as a nature preserve protected with a conservancy-held conservation easement. They will work with the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council to conduct a wetland delineation and wetland assessment of the Susan Creek property. The Conservancy will hold the remaining 168 acres as a nature preserve.

"This project has been a unique opportunity for us to develop a working relationship with the conservancy and Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council," said Rachel Schwarz. "The group has focused on conserving high-risk areas near the Lake Michigan shoreline, and this has resulted in the establishment of the first designated nature preserve for the Little Traverse Bay Bands of Odawa Indians. The Tribal government strives to protect Mother Earth with respect and honor, keeping the next seven generations in mind."

"The complimentary parcel brought wonderful, leveraging local match," Bailey said. "It also elevated the stature of the project, protecting a significant portion of this watershed which lies within a highly developing region."

The Conservancy is seeking additional funds to complete the purchase. For more information, please call their office at (231) 347-0991.

New lake-to-lake trail discussed

There was a room full of experts that met recently to discuss the proposed new trail that would link Lake Michigan and the Fisherman Island State Park with Lake Charlevoix at Ferry Beach.

JoAnne Beemon, director of the Charlevoix County Land Conservancy, defined the boundaries of the proposed trail which follows the former Medusa railroad spur that ends at the local cement plant, CEMEX. She reported that CEMEX is well aware of the community interest and has indicated a strong willingness to work with the committee on the project.

Bruce Wood, president of the local snowmobile club, described their current agreement and use of the trail with CEMEX. The Jordan Valley Trails Council, which includes the club, has a muli-year lease on the property for use as a snowmobile trail.

Wood said the club wants what is best for everyone in regard to the trail. He added, it is unknown at this time if the trail would be paved.

Charlevoix Recreation Director Ike Boss, expressed the importance of a multi-use trail with shared use by bikers, those that snowmobile, walk, jog, and roller blade.

"Everyone should be able to enjoy their sport on the trail," he said.

Larry Sullivan, Charlevoix County Planner, voiced the concern of ownership as it affects both any grant request and maintenance. He added that the county master plan calls for such trails in the Charlevoix area.

Dan Ulrich and Lucas Porath representing Northwest Design Group expressed their willingness to offer their expertise in developing cost estimates, grant writing and helping determine the best planning process.

Their firm has had a major role in the development of many trails in Michigan.

It was decided that the February meeting of the Lake to Lake-Charlevoix Trail committee will focus on: trail ownership, defining trail boundaries, County Planning Commission strategy and property acquisition.

Anyone with an interest in the project, comments, or questions can contact JoAnne Beemon at 547-4820 or 237-9335.

Harassment claims did not meet discriminatory policy

KUR

ment, which would qualify it as discriminatory harassment.

"Right now, I am not happy with what is going on by any means, but I don't think there is a protected class (harassment charge)," Frykberg said.

The county's harassment policy is broken down into two categories: sexual harassment and discriminatory harassment. For it to be discriminatory harassment, it must revolve around the "protected class," such as religion or race.

For example, if a department head were making the working environment of an employee hard just because they are African American, that is discriminatory harassment.

"Nothing here is protected class. It doesn't seem to me that it would be useful to go into discussions on who is telling us the truth...," Snyder said.

Frykberg added, while the situation seemed dire in the prosecutor's office, he was impressed that everyone in the office could still be professional.

"I give them credit for the day-to-day operations being done. It says a lot for all sides involved," he said.

When asked if the situation in the office could be healed between Kur and the three employees, Kur said, "The short answer is, I don't know the answer. What the end result of this is going to be is anybody's guess."

She added, "The manner is which these concerns were addressed, quite frankly, causes me concern. I was never approached regarding harassment."

The committee has written a letter outlining its findings. The employees have the right to take the matter before the full county commission if they do not like the committee's findings.

They added they would help Viles, Rozema, Quinn and Ward transfer to another department in county government that they qualify for.

After the meeting, Kur said the committee members were right on with the law.

"I think that they made the right decision that none of the allegations made were to the level of discriminatory harassment," she said.

Sheriff warns about telemarketers

If you have a telephone, chances are a telemarketer has called you. Most phone sales pitches are made on behalf of legitimate products or services, but many telephone calls are frauds.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater says to take these steps to avoid being scammed:

- Resist high pressure sales tactics. Legitimate businesses respect the fact you're not interested.
- If you don't want the seller to call you back, say so. If they call back, hang up. They're breaking the law.
- Take your time. Ask for written information about product, service, investment opportunity or charity that's the subject of the call.
- Your financial investments may have consequences for people you care about. Before you respond to phone solicitations, talk to a friend, family member or financial advisor.
- Hang up if you're asked to pay for a prize.
- Don't send money, check or money order by courier, overnight delivery or wire, to anyone who insists on immediate payment.
- Keep information about your bank account and credit cards to yourself — unless you know who you're dealing with.
- Before you pay, check out the company.
- Hang up if a telemarketer calls before 8 a.m. or after 9 p.m.

If you suspect that you've been victimized by a telephone scam, call the Michigan State Attorney General's Consumer Protection office at (517) 373-1140 or call the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department at (231) 547-4461.

SCRAPBOOK

Historical gates refurbished, on display

The Roaring Twenties roared into Charlevoix, and no place did they roar louder than the Colonial Club on Meech Street near Dixon Avenue. A wonderfully vivid story about the era can be read in Edith Gilbert's Summer Resort Life: Tango Teas and All!, available at Harsha House Museum's gift shop.

A gambling establishment and posh restaurant, the Colonial Club opened every summer until it was raided in 1947. For the next quarter century the abandoned building deteriorated until the condemned old structure was finally torn down in 1974.

During demolition, the iron entrance gates were saved by Gary Forbrig and ultimately donated to the Charlevoix Historical Society.

Rusty and forlorn, the gates were removed from storage this fall and restored to their original glory by Richard Louiselle. With the cost underwritten by the members of the Charlevoix Historical Society, the restoration was completed, and the gates were installed at the entrance to the new Depot Heritage Garden just before the New Year 2003.

A joint project of the Charlevoix Area Garden Club (a member of the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan), the Charlevoix Historical Society and the Charlevoix Evening Garden Club, the Depot Heritage Garden continues to grow as funds become available.

A new campaign to "buy a foot of fence" has been started. A tax-deductible donation of $50 pays for one foot of iron garden fencing. Checks should be made out to the Charlevoix Area Garden Club (CAGC) and mailed to CAGC Treasurer, 11545 N. Pa-Be-Shan Trail, Charlevoix, MI 49720. You may call 547-0373 for additional information.

Valentine dinner

A musical sing-along and poetry reading will kick off the annual potluck Valentine dinner, hosted by the Charlevoix Historical Society at 6 p.m., on Tuesday, Feb. 5 at the historic Depot at the end of East Dixon Avenue in Charlevoix. The public is invited. Bring a dish to pass and your own tableware. Your admission ticket is a Valentine card signed with your name or "from a secret admirer." Valentines will be distributed to the residents of Boulder Park Terrace and others on Valentine's Day. Those wishing a ride to the Depot should call Mike Bergeon at 547-2742. Call the Charlevoix Historical Society at 547-0373 if you know of someone who is alone and would like to receive a valentine or if you need more information about the event. City land being considered for center sense to me to spend a couple bucks looking at details rather than just going out and doing it," he said.

The total cost of this second part of the consulting group's study is $13,000. The Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau will fund the remaining $6,500.

The study is expected to be complete in three weeks.

It will proceed in five phases. The first phase will estimate how and how much the facility will be used. The second phase is a financial analysis that will calculate operating income and expenses. The third phase is a cost analysis that will look at costs to develop the facility. The fourth phase is an economic and fiscal impact analysis that will review the economic benefit results of construction. And the final phase is a written report.

Skelton's group's original study looked at locating the meeting facility at the former Charlevoix Middle School off Grant Street and at the Bridge Street Inn Bed and Breakfast. It found the more viable of the two sites to be the bed and breakfast because of its close proximity to lodging.

This second study will look at a third site, 300 feet of city owned property located along the herm that runs next to the Pine River Channel, adjacent to the Weathervane Restaurant.

Wiesner said if the city owned site is chosen and the city moves forward with the project, the facility would be built underground, into the bank, with the road and parking remaining on top, and glass looking out onto the channel.

He added that both the bed and breakfast and the city property face parking issues.

Ownership of any meeting facility has yet to be decided but Wiesner said he anticipates it being "public owned."

Kur, county to face suit over Whistleblower Act

LAWSUIT

County Commission meeting in March 2002 when she commented on his termination to the commission. He added she violated his privacy when she entered his office and took some calendars which, he claims, had evidence of mismanagement by Kur written in it and accessed his computer.

Jarema wants compensatory damages, exemplary damages, judgment for lost wages, lost fringe and pension benefits, interest and costs, an order reinstating him to the position he would have had and an injunction prohibiting further acts of retaliation or discrimination.

Kur has said charges of mismanagement against her are false. She said she terminated Jarema due to poor work performance. She further claims that Jarema's calendars, computer and office are not private and are owned by the county.

Grant Parsons, Jarema's attorney, said he was not worried that two of the three allegations have been dismissed.

"It was not the main part of our case," he said. "The whole claim is the whistleblower claim."

Parsons added, "What's happening up there is literally unbelieveable....I'm flabbergasted by what the litigation has shown in this case."

Kathleen Lieder, one of the attorney's for Kur and the county, also said she is not worried.

"If it goes to trial, we will win because Jarema cannot prove Kur fired him for whistleblowing activities. Instead we will show she had good business reasons to terminate his employment due to unsatisfactory workplace conduct. We are very pleased to see two-thirds of the case has been dismissed," she said.

While the trial is scheduled for May 21, Lieder said there are several more court appearances that will occur, such as a pretrial and jury selection.

Carver stays on a little longer

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The search for a new city of Charlevoix Fire Chief is taking longer than expected, but current chief Doug Carver has agreed to stay on until a permanent replacement can be found.

Carver, 62, announced his retirement in September. He served in public safety for 40 years in California, Petoskey and for the last 10 years, in Charlevoix.

Shortly after Carver announced he would turn in his fire gear, a fire chief selection committee was established and this week was targeted for selection of a new chief.

But, according to City Manager Mike Wiesner, that timeline has been pushed back and no new selection date has been set.

The committee includes: Wiesner, mayor Gabe Campbell, city police chief Dennis Halverson, third ward council person Shirley Gibson, second ward council person Karen Campbell and first ward councilman Bill Haggard.

The process the committee and city

Feindt was well respected, loved

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix resident Mary Feindt, 86, who was known as a pioneer for women, an extremely hard worker, a great employer, wonderful mother, valuable teacher and a picture of success, died Jan. 29 after a long bout with cancer.

Mary Feindt

Feindt, was the owner of Advanced Geomatics in downtown Charlevoix and Novi and the Charlevoix County Land Surveyor, as well as a pioneer in land surveying for women who left a mark all over Charlevoix.

"I could read an encyclopedia of stories (about her)," said Father Frank Partridge of St. Matthews Church in Boyne City. Partridge worked with Feindt at Charlevoix Abstract (now called Advanced Geomatics) when he was a young man, from 1944 to 1947.

"We always joked that when she bought the business, she bought me with it," he said. "She was more like a sister to me, rather than an employer."

Art Emmons, of Charlevoix, also had many fond memories of Feindt. He worked with her for close to 50 years, from October 1946 to March 1998.

"She was a fine person, very honest, easy to work for," Emmons said.

He added Feindt was also a very hard worker, who commonly came in to work at sunrise and would not leave until late in the evening.

"She would have worked until she was 100 if she could," he said.

All of Feindt's hard work lead to many accomplishments in her life. Besides being the owner of Advanced Geomatics and the county surveyor, Feindt paved the way for women in her field when she came to Charlevoix in 1938 to work for Robert Sloan in his surveying business. She bought the business from Sloan in the 1940s.

Feindt was the first woman in surveying and title work and was the only woman surveyor in the country for many years.

Feindt has also been the liaison between the American Congress on Surveying and Mapping and the American Land Title Association, a member of the Downtown Development Authority, past president of the Charlevoix Chapter of Zonta, an honorary member of the American Congress on Surveying and Mapping, received a masters degree from the University of Michigan, was past president of the Michigan Land Title Association and was selected at

Sheriff warns about new credit card scam

Sheriff George T. Lasater reported that a new credit card scam has surfaced.

Residents of Charlevoix County were contacted by a telemarketer advising a Charlevoix County citizen he was representing "J.A.G." — a federal agency. The caller informed the resident that federal government mandated the citizen surrender their credit card identification number and social security number and if they refused the federal government would send the citizen a bill for $700.00 for non-compliance.

Lasater said the scam is usually concentrating on senior citizens.

The sheriff has referred this complaint to the Federal Bureau of Investigations.

King and queen to be chosen for Winterfest

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

At half-time of the Rayder basketball team's Winterfest match-up against Elk Rapids a king and queen will be crowned.

This year's court includes 12 seniors. They are: Maggie Kantola, Matt Kilkenny, Lorna Kilborn, Donovan Swanson, Natashia Kleiber, Brandon Anderson, Katie Lieberman, Will Barrett, Nina Rogers, Eric Bourassa, Lauren Silberhorn and Trevor Kline.

Out of the six accomplished female students, only one will be selected to be the 2003 Winterfest queen.

Kantola is the daughter of Vic and Pam Kantola. Her hobbies include: painting, camping, reading, snowboarding and attending concerts. In the fall of 2003 she plans to continue her education at the University of Michigan's School of Art and Design.

Kilborn, a Rayder student athlete, is the daughter of John and Deb Kilborn. During her high school career she has participated in cross country, track and student council. After graduation she plans to attend Central Michigan University.

Kleiber is the daughter of George and Lisa Kleiber. When she isn't busy on the volleyball court, softball diamond or cross country course you can find her hanging out with friends, snowboarding or cruising town in her 1964 Ford. After high school she will head to the Upper Peninsula where she will enroll at Lake Superior State University majoring in criminal justice.

Lieberman is the daughter of Kraag and Cindy Lieberman and Ed and Barb Gregory. Her high school career has been a mix of athletics, academics and the fine arts. When she isn't busy with the performing arts group, the National Honor Society or the track team, she enjoys hanging out with friends. This fall she will attend Grand Valley State University.

Rogers is the daughter of Ken and Kay Rogers. During high school she found her niche on the stage and with the dehate team. She plans to attend Hope College this fall.

Silberhorn is the daughter of Bill and Cathy Silberhorn. During high school she has excelled in the classroom, on the basketball court and on cross country courses and the track. She plans to take her enthusiasm for school and sports with her to Central Michigan University where she will study to become a teacher.

While these prospective queens dream of the crown, six royal princes will be waiting in the wings to hear who will be named the 2003 Winterfest king.

Kilkenny is the son of Mike and Diane Kilkenny. During his high school career he has played baseball and football and enjoyed working at Mount McSauba. This fall he will attend Western Michigan University.

Swanson is the son of Barb and Kevin Swanson. During high school he excelled on the football field and basketball court. After graduation he plans to attend college locally and work for the Swanson family business.

Be respectful when riding snowmobiles

EDITORIAL

Finally, after a couple of years with an uncooperative Mother Nature, the Charlevoix Snowmobile Ride-In will take place this Saturday.

Many snowmobilers will ride into Ferry Beach to warm up and enjoy some food and refreshments, and maybe even ride into downtown Charlevoix. This event is sponsored by the Charlevoix Snowmobile Club, whose members will be on hand to answer questions about the trails, Charlevoix and the club.

The Charlevoix Snowmobile Club is composed of about 100 people, dedicated to the sport of snowmobiling. They promote the sport and they also promote the responsible use of the machines.

They are a fine example of what a true snowmobiler is.

While it would be great if all snowmobilers were as responsible as the members of the Charlevoix Snowmobile Club, there are some snowmobilers who need to learn some safety tips and courtesy lessons from these folks.

This is important because many people in northern Michigan are getting fed up with the way some snowmobilers act, which could lead to further restrictions on the sport. Here are just four simple ways to keep that from happening:

- First of all, it is not necessary to speed. While it may be fun to go flying across a white field of snow, it is not so fun when you hit a tree at high speeds or fall into an unseen pit or ravine. Death kind of takes the joy out of a weekend outdoors.
- Secondly, private property does exist in northern Michigan. Do not take short cuts across someone's front lawn or a farmer's field. It really ticks off the locals when you rip up their lawns, destroy their plants and damage their driveways.
- Third, avoid riding your machine early in the morning or late at night. Snowmobiles tend to make a lot of noise and this tends to annoy the residents when they are trying to sleep.
- Fourth, do not drive your machine when you have been drinking. If you want to kill yourself, don't do it in a way that could hurt others.

Snowmobiling can be a safe and fun sport, but one bad apple can spoil it for everyone else.

Work on art center is coming along nicely

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

Crooked Tree Art Center board members walk through the building's new construction. (Courtesy photo)

"Unbelievable!" That's what I kept muttering as we board members of the Crooked Tree Arts Center walked through the remodeling and expansion of "a work in progress."

The Crooked Tree Arts Center, located in downtown Petoskey, serves both Charlevoix and Emmet counties, and offers programs and experiences in the arts to over 50,000 northern Michigan residents and visitors each year.

Wearing our borrowed hard hats, we gingerly stepped between stacks of plywood, over electric wires, tarps, pipes and chunks of wood. We tried to find our bearings, but we were lost in the old familiar building that now looks like the inside of a giant cigar box!

Converting the former 112-year-old Methodist Church into a contemporary art center took not only $4 million, but a lot of guts!

Where there used to be a scattered music room here and there for individual lessons, we now have six adjacent, sound proof rooms in which to teach voice, piano, strings, woodwinds and brass.

The ceramic studio is almost twice its size and will house a gas kiln, which will not only provide a much higher quality firing for student work, but programming here could grow by 50 percent.

Actors and entertainers who grace the stage in the theater will now have private dressing rooms for both men and women, with a dozen make-up stations each and showers big enough for a wheel chair. In fact, the entire facility will be accessible to people with disabilities. There will even be a lift back stage to provide wheel chair access to the stage.

The lower level will include a long anticipated dark room for classes in photography. There will be enough display area for talented local artists to showcase their work. There will be a large dance studio with a suitable dance floor and a piano to teach both modern dance and ballet to live music.

An elevator will be installed next week that leads up to comfortable third floor offices that offer plenty of desk space for computers, as well as a spectacular view of Little Traverse Bay.

Finally, on the main floor, there will be two large, climate controlled and properly secured galleries for exhibiting high quality visual arts exhibits, some of which the center has never before been privileged to offer to the public. Beautifully restored stained glass windows will grace the north wall of the new gallery in the addition. In fact, all the stained glass windows in the Arts Center are being restored and re-installed.

Instead of the proposed plan launched in 1972 to tear down the remarkable Victorian structure to make room for a parking lot, there will be a month-long, grand re-opening celebration this fall. The details of the proposed extraordinary exhibits are still secret but will be revealed soon. You can rest assured they will be like nothing that has ever been seen here before, and it will make you proud to be a resident of this area.

I want to thank all those dedicated folks who donated their time and/or blood on that day. I also appreciate the volunteers who contacted donors by phone previous to the blood drive and those who did such a marvelous job of baking the unique variety of sweets enjoyed by all of us. I also thank our gracious hosts at the Charlevoix Community Reformed Church.

Once again, the businesses put posters in their windows to remind people of their opportunity to save lives by donating blood to the Red Cross and the Lions Club of Charlevoix provided the manpower to set-up and break-down the Red Cross equipment. Thank you!

I have been told that each blood donor at the next community blood drive on May 15 at the Reformed Church in Charlevoix will go home with a carton of ice cream.

If anyone reading this hasn't donated blood before, please come May 15. You will discover that you'll have fun and be on your way with not only a carton of ice cream but the wonderful feeling that you have given the gift of life. Spend an extraordinary hour with us!

Thank you.

Proud of the Democrats

Editor:

I have been a life-long, dues-paying member of the Democratic Party and always proud of that fact. To me, it is the party of the common, ordinary working class folks like my husband and me.

I don't know that I have ever been prouder of the party than I am now at two actions taken by the Charlevoix County Democratic Party at their Feb. 1, 2003, meeting.

First, they passed a resolution supporting the Ingham County Democrats' resolution to the State Convention to "Oppose the preparations for an unprovoked U.S. war with Iraq by the Bush Administration." I wholeheartedly applaud that action as we will never achieve "peace on earth, goodwill to men" (which only a few weeks ago we were singing about) by killing one another on this planet.

Secondly, the Charlevoix Democrats passed a motion to donate $300 to the Northern Michigan Hospital nurses, either for their strike fund or their food bank, whichever the nurses deem needs it most. In horrendous cold and snow, these dedicated nurses have walked the picket line in defense of their beliefs, while an arrogant hospital administration sits in warm offices and refuses to negotiate.

Someone once gave my husband and me an essay entitled, "Why I am a Democrat." It was written by Ralph Chandler.

In part it stated, "I am a Democrat, not because we are always right or know the best thing to do, but because I think we care more. I think we care more about people and about ideas. We have a social conscience."

I hope others who care about world peace and also the nurses on strike in one of our local hospitals will choose to express themselves via the media or by helping out the striking nurses or by writing their senators and congressman and just making their voices heard.

Enjoyed column

Editor:

Our family very much enjoyed the Jan. 8, 2003 column written by Marilyn Boss titled, "Writer shares memories of school in Charlevoix." Marilyn's columns are always a delight, but this particular article was especially enjoyed as it brought back shared memories for both my husband Steve (class of 1969) and daughter Abby (class of 1999).

Though I never attended Charlevoix schools, throughout the years I've heard numerous stories shared at family gatherings about the old K-12 building (now Charlevoix's "old" middle school). The one story I never quite believed was the one they told of a fish pond in the Kindergarten classroom. Who would construct a fish pond, much less stock it with goldfish and turtles, and place it inside the confines of a classroom filled with the wriggling little bodies and curious young minds of 5 and 6-year-olds? But everyone assured me such was the case and my husband's family even had a story to prove it.

My husband Steve and his twin brother Chuck, now an engineer for Daimler-Chrysler Corporation, started Kindergarten in September 1955. Naturally, knowing those two and their inquisitive minds, it was inevitable that the Kindergarten pond would eventually beckon. One day when they returned home on the bus, their mother, Martha Paterka, took one look at Chuck, dressed in the unfamiliar garb of a cowboy outfit and asked in bewilderment, "What happened to you? Where are the clothes I sent you to school in?"

Chuck grinned, held up a bag filled with wet attire and proudly announced, "I fell into the goldfish pond." Actually to this day, Chuck swears he was pushed into the fish pond by a classmate, a particular gentleman still living in Charlevoix who shall remain nameless!

The story of Chuck falling, or being pushed — whatever the case may be — into the Kindergarten fish pond has been told over and over at family gatherings and is always guaranteed to produce a hearty laugh or two. But, I still never really believed the story of the Kindergarten fish pond, or that such a thing could actually exist, until this past December. My husband brought home the book Charlevoix II by Bob Miles which is currently on sale through the Charlevoix Historical Society, and let out a whoop as he turned to page 146.

He held up the book to show me the picture. 'Lo and behold, finally proof of the infamous Kindergarten fish pond! We got a good laugh out of that picture and all the little boys and girls sitting 'round the fish pond.

Thank you for allowing me to share this little memory from our family's recollections of times gone by. And thank you, Marilyn for providing the literary spark that sets our family to reminiscing and so the stories begin once again!

Ahn Trio to perform at art center's Ross Stoakes Theater

The Crooked Tree Arts Center's Virginia McCune Performing Arts Series will host The Ahn Trio, a chamber ensemble of three sisters, at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, March 7 and 8.

Bringing glamour and high-level playing to their performances, pianist Lucia, cellist Maria (twins) and violinist Angella tour the world.

The classically trained trio, originally from South Korea, first gained public attention in 1987 when they were featured in a cover story entitled "Asian-American Whiz Kids" in Time Magazine.

They have been featured on NBC and PBS, and most recently in Town and Country Magazine. The Ahn have graced the cover of Spotlight magazine and are included in two books, "Best Friends" and "Cool Women, Hot Jobs."

The Ahn Trio tours the world, performing almost 100 concerts annually in such places as Lincoln Center's Alice Tully Hall, Carnegie's Weill Hall, Chicago's Ravinia, Singapore's Victoria Concert Hall, Moscow's Tchaikovsky Hall and Seoul Arts Center. They are appearing in Leipzig, Germany at the Strings of Fire Festival one week prior to their Petoskey visit. Visit their web site at www.ahntrio.com, for more on them.

The trio's most innovative project, "Ahn-Plugged," has enabled them to reachout to new audiences all over the world. This recording project grew from the Ahn Trio's passionate dedication to the commissioning and performance of contemporary music and has led to significant additions to the piano trio repertoire.

Among recent premieres are Eric Ewazen's The Diamond World, and Kenji Bunch's Concerto for Piano Trio and Orchestra. Other premieres include works by Michael Nyman, Paul Schoenfield, John Musto and John Zorn.

"Groove Box" was released in 2002 and has received glowing reviews. The program for Groovebox returns to a proven formula that provides a sequel to their previous album Ahn-Plugged.

The Ahn Trio program for their concerts at the Crooked Tree Arts Center includes selections from Joseph Haydn, Maurice Jarre and Kenji Bunch. They often alter their programs during their performances, as they watch the audience's reaction to their music.

The performance is scheduled for the Crooked Tree Arts Centers Ross Stoakes Theater with an Afterglow following the Friday, March 7 concert. Tickets are $20 adults and $8 students for members, $25 adults and $10 students for non-members and $50 for patrons.

All seats are reserved and tickets are on sale now.

The Crooked Tree Arts Center's temporary box office is located at 445 E. Mitchell Street, downtown Petoskey. Box office hours are 9 a.m - 5 p.m., Monday-Friday. Tickets may be purchased over the telephone by calling the arts center at 347-4337 or online at www.crookedtree.org.

Support for this program in provided in part by the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs.

Two teens arrested for shooting sheep

Sheriff George T. Lasater said the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office has arrested a 16-year-old and a 17-year-old from Ellsworth as the result of an investigation where a farmer's livestock was shot and killed on Jan. 6.

The incident took place on Matchett Road, off Barnard Road, in Marion Township.

The farmer found one of his sheep dead in his field and reported the incident to police. An investigation showed the sheep was shot with a .22 caliber rifle.

Evidence and a tip from a citizen led police to the Ellsworth Community School, where the suspects were later located.

Investigation also shows others, along with the two whom have since been arrested, went back the day after the shooting and removed the dead sheep from the field and tried to dispose of it.

The sheep was later located and returned to the farmer.

The two suspects have been charged with: maliciously killing of an animal (four year felony) and possession of firearm in commission of a felony (two year felony).

The investigation is ongoing at this time as to the other suspects and their involvement.

Dr. Mary C. Feindt: Died Jan. 29, 2003

Dr. Mary C. Feindt passed away on Wednesday, Jan. 29, 2003, at the age of 86 following an extended bout with cancer.

She had been a resident at Boulder Park Terrace since November 2002.

Funeral services were Monday, Feb. 3, at the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix (UCC), and were officiated by the Rev. Mary Willis.

A pioneer in women in surveying, Dr. Feindt was the first woman licensed as a professional surveyor in Michigan in 1944 and graduated with a master's degree in civil engineering from the University of Michigan the same year. She also held a bachelor of arts degree from Albion College and was awarded an honorary doctorate degree in science and industry from Ferris State University in 1999.

Mary received a gubernatorial appointment to the Michigan State Board of Land Surveyors in 1979, and was the first chair of the United States Forum for Women in Surveying from 1983-84. She received an honorary membership in the American Congress on Surveying and Mapping in 1988 and an Award for Outstanding Service to Surveying and Engineering in 1993 from the Ferris State College of Technology.

She was also active during the past several years in FIG, an international organization for surveyors and geographers, and to that end traveled to many countries as a U.S. representative.

In addition to land surveying, Mary was engaged in a land title business for many years. She was just as involved with the title profession as she was with surveying and spent much of her professional career as a liaison between the surveying and title professions.

She was deeply involved in the development of the present ALTA/ACSM Land Title Standards. The Michigan Land Title Association honored her with the creation of the Mary C. Feindt Award in 1987 to be given to title persons for meritorious service.

Dr. Feindt was also active on the local scene. She was the Charlevoix County Surveyor continuously since 1945, and had been involved with the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce since its inception. Mary was an avid member of the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority, and has served as a trustee of the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix (UCC). She was also a member of Zonta International of Charlevoix and the Order of the Eastern Star.

The city of Charlevoix declared "Mary Feindt Day" to commemorate 50 years of service in 1994 and Mary received the Outstanding Citizens Award from the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce on Jan. 9, 2003.

Mary (Bastian) Feindt was born in Chicago, Ill., in 1916 and grew up in Albion. She was the daughter of Ernest H. Bastian and Lila M. (Waitt) Bastian. She first moved to Charlevoix in 1938, and owned and managed Charlevoix Abstract & Engineering Company (now known as Advanced Geomatics) from 1944 until her passing.

Her dedicated and enduring work effort and service to society earned Mary the Michigan Outstanding Older Worker award in 1998 from Green Thumb, Inc.

Mary married J. Lawrence Feindt in 1942, and they worked together in the business until her husband's death in 1988. She was joined in the business by her son, Larry, professional surveyor, and by her daughter-in-law, Faye, in 1971. Her stepson, C. Fred Feindt (now deceased), was also a member of the business during the 1970s and 1980s. Her granddaughter, Amy Feindt, is currently employed at Advanced Geomatics and received a degree in surveying-engineering from Ferris State University in 2000.

Mary is survived by her son, Lawrence R. (Larry) Feindt and daughter-in-law Faye A. (Whitley) Feindt, who reside in Charlevoix; sister, Lois Metzler, who lives in Bradenton, Fla.; and three grandchildren, Amy C. Feindt who resides in Howell, Mich., Rene P. Feindt who resides in Charlevoix, and Jacob H. Feindt who is currently a student at Northern Michigan University. She also is survived by three great-grandchildren, Christine and Isaac Zeitler of Howell, Mich., and Jesston Whitley of Charlevoix.

The family suggests memorials be given to the Mary C. Feindt Surveying Scholarship c/o Debra Jacks, Ferris State University, 330 Oak West 100, Big Rapids, MI 49307; the Mary C. Feindt scholarship for women entering the fields of mathematics and science at the Charlevoix Zonta Club; or the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix (UCC).

HEALTH

The flu can be a very deadly sickness

James Stewart, M.D.

'Your health'

This is the time of year when we brace ourselves for the first influenza cases and hope that the public health efforts to vaccinate will lessen the impact this yearly scourge places on our schools, churches, hospital and the workforce.

"Influenza" derives its name from the Italian "Influenza de freddo," or "influence of the cold." It is a disease of the winter and its transmission occurs when we move indoors to shield ourselves from winter weather. It spreads across the northern hemisphere during our winter and across the southern hemisphere during their winter. It is caused by a virus that changes or mutates every year. The federal government tries to program these genetic changes and produces a vaccine each year that is intended to protect against the current virus antigens. Some years the virus changes again even after the vaccine is made available and we seem to have more cases of the illness.

In the fall of 1918, before vaccination was available, the virus produced its most lethal mutagenic change. The worldwide effect was devastating. Beginning in September of 1918, the first cases occurred in Boston. Rather than killing just the very young and very old, the disease produced a "W" curve, with the very young babies dying and the very old dying. But it also struck young adults between 20-40 years with lethal vehemence. The pandemic dropped the life expectancy of an American by 12 years, from 51 years to 39 years of age for the year 1918. Troop ships carrying soldiers to France would arrive in LeHarve with 25 percent casualty lists, with many regiments so decimated by the disease that they were unable to enter the combat lines.

How many died? Estimates range from 20 million to 100 million worldwide. We know that in four months, the Allies (United States, Britain and France) lost more soldiers to influenza than were lost in the 4.5 years of combat with Germany.

A long-time patient and Boyne City resident told me of going to the Methodist Church in Boyne City, which served as a local gathering site for the sick. She told me that for weeks, all of the pews were filled with the sick and dying and that the doctors and nurses remained in the church continuously attending to their friends and families.

A military hospital at Fort Devens, near Boston, Mass., had a bed-space of 2,000 but during the epidemic, had an occupancy of 8,000 with 5 percent of the soldiers dying daily.

Shortly after the turn of the year, the disease receded and then disappeared altogether. A progeny of the virus recurred in 1958-1959 and took 70,000 lives and the "Hong Kong Flu" of 1968-69 took 34,000 American lives, but we have never again experienced the devastation of the 1918 influenza virus.

Is it possible it can recur? Of course it can. We have anti-viral drugs that lessen the disease course and we also have vaccinations to prevent the illness. They are effective, but require two weeks or more, for antibody production.

So, if you haven't yet received your flu shot, call your doctor and protect yourself and your family.

Dr. James Stewart can be contacted at Pine River Medical — located by the Charlevoix Area Hospital — by calling 547-6554.

Snowmobile Ride-in to be this weekend

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Snowmobilers participating in the fourth annual Charlevoix Snowmobile Club Ride-in will gather this weekend at Charlevoix's Ferry Beach for an afternoon of food and fellowship.

The event is scheduled to take place from noon to 5 p.m., Saturday, Feb. 8 under the beach pavilion.

Outdoor comforts like a huge bonfire and hot dogs, hot chocolate and coffee will be served to warm riders inside and out.

After filling up at the beach, those who attend will be encouraged to try out the city designated trail into downtown East Park.

"We want people to get acquainted with Charlevoix and what we have here," John Ferguson, a member of the board of directors of the Charlevoix Snowmobile Club, said.

He said the mission of the afternoon is to generate revenue for Charlevoix and interest in the club.

The club's membership is currently around 100 people. Its members also belong to the Jordan Valley Trails Council and help maintain trails and keep trail permits updated.

"By having and maintaining trails we help prevent trespassing problems — people ride the trails instead of riding everywhere else," Ferguson said.

In spite of last year's late weather related cancellation of the event, he is expecting a large group to gather this year.

"Planning for this year is going well. All we need is mother nature to cooperate," Ferguson said.

Who: Charlevoix Snowmobile Club
What it is: Snowmobile Ride-in to Charlevoix.
When: Noon to 5 p.m., Feb. 8, Saturday
Where: Ferry Beach on Ferry Avenue

While the club sponsors the event, it is open to everyone, regardless of age, club affiliation or where you are from.

"We want to see any aspiring snowmobiler or anyone who would like to show up," he said.

For more information about the ride-in contact Ferguson at 547-6882 or Jeff Hilligan at 547-2597.

Sheriff warns: Be careful dealing with telemarketers

If you have a telephone, chances are a telemarketer has called you. Most phone sales pitches are made on behalf of legitimate products or services, but many telephone calls are frauds.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater says to take these steps to avoid being scammed:

- Resist high pressure sales tactics. Legitimate businesses respect the fact you're not interested.
- If you don't want the seller to call you back, say so. If they call back, hang up. They're breaking the law.
- Take your time. Ask for written information about product, service, investment opportunity or charity that's the subject of the call.
- Your financial investments may have consequences for people you care about. Before you respond to phone solicitations, talk to a friend, family member or financial advisor.
- Hang up if you're asked to pay for a prize.
- Don't send money, check or money order by courier, overnight delivery or wire, to anyone who insists on immediate payment
- Keep information about your bank account and credit cards to yourself — unless you know who you're dealing with.
- Before you pay, check out the company.
- Hang up if a telemarketer calls before 8 a.m. or after 9 p.m.

Fraudulent telemarketers are criminals.

If you suspect that you've been victimized by a telephone scam, call the Michigan State Attorney General's Consumer Protection office at (517) 373-1140 or call the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department at (231) 547-4461.

A new attorney magistrate has been chosen to work for Charlevoix County's 90th District Court.

Former Charlevoix County magistrate Dave Kurchinksi retired in December after 15 years. But the county court's demanding caseload didn't leave Judge Richard May much time to replace him.

May serves as district court judge in both Emmet and Charlevoix counties.

In requesting a new magistrate be hired, he told the county commission that the two county district court caseload increased 25 percent from 1994 to 2002.

He said the state Supreme Court Administrator found this caseload merited employment of 1.7 judges. While a second judge was not approved, May discovered the next best thing, an attorney magistrate.

Unlike a standard magistrate, an attorney magistrate can take more of the caseload and render decisions in cases including small claims and landlord/tenant issues. The difference between the two is a law degree.

The commission agreed to hire Jennifer Schafer to fill the attorney magistrate's shoes part-time in both counties.

Schafer, 32, of Petoskey, will work three days a week in Emmet County, where the caseload is heavier, and two days in Charlevoix County. She started in Emmet County Jan. 27 hearing final pre-trials and her first day in Charlevoix County's District Court office was Jan. 30.

While it may seem the split would make for a hectic work environment, Schafer said because May is the judge in both courts, the transition should be easy. The only difference will be computer systems and staff.

"Beyond that, I think the job will be very continuous," she said.

She has no previous judicial experience, but worked in prosecution in St. Claire and Emmet counties. In August of 2001, she started her own family and probate law practice, the Law Offices of Jennifer Schafer and Susan

Equalization Ratios, as shown, are the percentages of assessed valuations to true cash value as determined by a survey of individual assessments. The Multipliers are those necessary to bring the Ratios to the required 50% of estimated true cash value.

The Multipliers, as shown, are tentative and subject to change as the result of possible adjustments by individual assessing officers. Assuming that no adjustments are made, the Multiplier may be applied to each individual valuation.

Note: THESE MULTIPLIERS REPLACE THOSE OF 2002 AND ARE NOT AN ADDITION TO OR SUBTRACTION FROM THEM.

Lundgren, in Petoskey.

In spite of recently opening her private practice, she decided to take the magistrate's position because of her desire to work with May.

"I think he is a great judge. I'm eager to work with him. The idea of being the magistrate in a new position here really appealed to me," she said after accepting the job.

She said the new environment will also give her a chance to use specialized skills she developed in college that deal with criminal law. She attended Michigan State University in East Lansing and earned her hachelor's degree in Criminal Justice and went on to Thomas M. Cooley Law School in Lansing.

"That's more my niche," she said.

Of particular interest to her is the variety — hearing small claims cases and civil tickets.

"I think it will be fascinating. I like the every day, human interest issues," she said.

While small claims cases have peaked her interest she also feels they will most likely present her greatest challenge.

"There is just such a wide variety of issues to be addressed — everything from debt collection to insurance, worker's compensation and real estate and consumer protection law. I'll have to be a jack of all trades and keep up on those areas of the law," she said.

Sleep Center helps people in quest to get good rest

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Dr. Susan L. Anderson wants her patients to fall asleep when she is treating them.

Anderson is interested in helping her patients with their sleeping problems, especially those that could be dangerous to their health. To do this, on Jan. 6, she opened the Sleep Center on the third floor of the Sleep Inn near the intersection of Petoskey Avenue and Mercer Boulevard.

This new center is affiliated with Charlevoix Area Hospital, she said. Anderson also works with the Northern Michigan Hospital Sleep Center and the Bay Area Neurology and Sleep Disorders in the Burns Professional Building.

Anderson's clinic helps you find restful sleep

SLEEP

Anderson is also a member of the American Academy of Sleep Medicine and AWAKE (Alert, Well and Keeping Energetic). She has been in northern Michigan for three years.

The Sleep Center diagnoses and treats all sleep disorders affecting adults and children, including sleep apnea, narcolepsy, periodic leg movements.

A patient at Anderson's business is put in a private room that is equipped with cameras and other monitoring equipment. Anderson and her staff monitor the patient from a separate room and evaluate their sleeping stages and other signs, such as if they stop breathing or have heart irregularities.

It is an overnight process and some patients are kept throughout the next day to study the effects of their sleep.

The Sleep Center specializes in treating children and patients with special needs, with rooms furnished for children or rooms that have a special bed or two beds. Special needs include allowing space for care givers or parents and patients with chronic back pain.

Anderson said it is important to determine if a child is having problems sleeping, because this can impact their behavior during the day. She said some children are diagnosed with ADD, but really have a sleeping disorder.

"A lot of (children) simply never manage to do well in school simply due to sleep disorders," she said.

Patients at the business can make an appointment themselves or be referred by a doctor. Anderson said health insurance normally covers the cost.

For more information on the Sleep Center, call (231) 237-0900 or e-mail sls@improvingsleep.com.

Kur represents state at national conference

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur represented Michigan state prosecuting attorneys at a national convention last month in Washington D.C.

Mary Beth Kur

Kur, along with a Michigan delegation representing various aspects of the state's legal system, attended to conference to discuss ways to keep innocent people from being wrongly convicted of crimes. With her group was a defense attorney, judge, police officer advocate, victim's advocate and a representative from the legislature.

"There were people from all different areas of the political spectrum and all different sides of the judicial system," she said.

Kur said in addition to the Michigan delegation, there were many other states that sent representatives to meet with, as well as national figures such as former United States Attorney General Janet Reno and well-known attorney Barry Sheck.

"I liked the interaction with the people from all different disciplines who were smart and caring. It was interesting to talk to Barry Sheck and Janet Reno, regardless of whether or not you agree with their politics...," Kur said.

As for the problem of innocent people being convicted, Kur said the Michigan delegation did not know to what extent it is in the state. But, they all agreed that even one innocent person being wrongly convicted of a crime is too many.

Throughout the convention, the groups discussed way to keep this from happening in the country. One of those the Michigan delegation designed was the creation of a criminal justice commission consisting off all sides of the judicial system.

One of the ways to keep innocent people out of jail is through DNA, Kur said. In some cases, people who are innocent have been released from prison because of new DNA evidence.

However, this system is new to the state of Michigan.

To help this matter, Kur said the state will need to round up all of the people in Michigan with outstanding warrants. There are 500,000 in the state of Michigan and of those, 40,000 in Wayne County, she said.

"The more DNA you have, the more right you can be about cases to test," Kur said.

But, the system costs money to run because all felons in the state of Michigan have to provide DNA samples, therefore there are a lot of samples that need testing by technicians. To speed up the process, the state would have to hire more technicians.

Money was a factor in many of the plans.

Kur said a concern was also raised over the way the state pays for defense attorney for people who cannot afford one themselves. Kur discovered that the state of Michigan is last or second to last in pay for these attorneys.

She said there is a lawsuit in Wayne County to increase those fees.

Of these plans, Kur said the group is already working on creating a criminal justice commission. Just last week, she had a conference call with the chief justice of the state supreme court, the state attorney general and a member of the senate judiciary committee about this proposal.

"Within a month we are going to get in on it. It will probably take at least that long to touch base," Kur said.

A grant paid for the group to attend the event.

Cheerleaders take third in class C competition

The Charlevoix High School cheerleaders are not only cheering on the sidelines at basketball games, they are also competing in competitions.

In these competitions, there are two rounds, as determined by MCCA (Michigan Cheerleading Coaches Association).

The leadership round has a time limit of 1 minute, 30 seconds. This round must demonstrate the ability to get the crowd involved.

It must contain at least one jump, performed in unison. This round may not contain any pyramids, partner stunts, tumbling, splits, gymnastics, heel stretches or any trick which requires the support of another person. And no props, signs or music are allowed.

Competing in this round, Feb. 1, the Charlevoix High School cheerleaders took third in the Class C division behind first place East Jordan and second place Evart. Both East Jordan and Evart advanced to the State Championship for Sideline Cheerleading last March and Evart tied for sixth place.

Members of the Charlevoix Cheerleaders are: Jamie Melke, Amy Drew, Lee Meggison, Ashley Potter, Jenn Sanchez, Katie Way, Sarah Featherly, Amber Smith, Kara Fitzgerald, Rachel Barta and Christalle Pohlman. The girls are coached by Erin Bemis and Anne Dafoe.

The Charlevoix Rayder Wrestling team traveled to St. Ignace Jan. 30 for a double dual meet with Newberry and then to Houghton Lake Feb. 1 for an individual tournament.

Charlevoix had a close win against Newberry finishing on top with a score of 39 to 36. Wins by decision went to Danny Possert at 103 pounds, Matt Novotny at 112 pounds, Nathaniel Sotuyo at 130 pounds and Chris Aepelbacher at 140 pounds. Against St. Ignace Charlevoix lost 58 to 21. Wins for Charlevoix went to Novotny and Tony Kiernan by decision and Sotuyo and Lahr with pins.

"We continue to show great promise for our future wrestling program. I'm proud of the kids. They showed a lot of team spirit tonight. We are gearing up now for our next tournament at Houghton Lake Feb. 1," coach Craig Golovich said.

"Wrestler of the night was Nathaniel Sotuyo. He had an outstanding match against a tough opponent. He wrestled heart and soul until the last whistle and came out on top."

At the individual tournament in Houghton Lake, first place medals went to Aepelbacher and Golovich. A second place medal went to Novotny, third place medals went to Jed Daman and Gillespie and fourth place medals went to Kiernan, Sotuyo and Travis Burke.

"Aepelbacher and Golovich both gave a great performance winning every one of their matches to take first place. Both boys had a real battle for their final matches. The team as a whole had a very good day," Golovich said.

Basketball team comes out on top in high scoring game

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

For fans who like to see scoring, Friday's varsity basketball game at Benzie between Benzie Central and Charlevoix was a treat.

The fast paced game ended with Charlevoix on top with a score of 111 to Benzie's 95.

"I think it was the highest scoring game in Charlevoix basketball history," coach Keith Haske said.

Haske said the game was back-and-forth all night, with both sides shooting well. As for Benzie's 95, he said when you have that fast of a game, you are bound to give up some points.

He added, the game was exactly the way Charlevoix likes to play.

"There was never a lull," Haske said.

Putting up points for the Rayders were: Scott Friske with 23; Todd Carey with 17, Spencer Bryan with 14 and Cody Crain with 13. Nate Teuscher also added eight assists and Crain had seven assists.

Charlevoix's game against Harbor Springs last night was canceled due to weather. It has been rescheduled for 6 p.m., Feb. 11. Charlevoix will face East Jordan Friday at home.

The team will be at it again at 6 p.m., Saturday in a home game against Glen Lake.

On Feb. 14, the Rayders will face Elk Rapids at home. And then at 1 p.m., Feb. 15 they will be in Petoskey.

School to have annual Winterfest

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Who: Charlevoix High School

What it is: Annual Winterfest celebration.

When: Feb. 10 — Feb. 15; king and queen crowning will be halftime of the basketball game Feb. 14.

Where: Charlevoix High School

The 2003 Winterfest celebration at Charlevoix High School will be a week-long event packed with everything from whacky dress up days to a face off of two rival basketball teams.

Festivities will kick off Feb. 10 when students turn in their trendy duds for pocket protectors and dress up as nerds.

On Feb. 11 students will wear their class colors as they enjoy afternoon rehearsals of their "six minute shows" to be performed at the Winterfest Assembly. Freshman will wear polka dots, sophomores will wear plaid, juniors will wear animal prints and seniors will be in stripes.

After the wildly printed clothes are put away, on Feb. 12 students will search for an interesting hat to show off at Hat Day. After school they'll need those hats and other cold weather gear to stay warm while they mold snow into huge sculptures. Judging will be that night after dark.

On Feb. 13 students and staff will show off their collegiate allegiance when they dress in college sweatshirts. After school, students can talk about post high school education goals as they decorate the school halls.

On Feb. 14 Rayder pride will outshine college ties as students deck themselves, head-to-toe, in maroon and white. The school colors will splash across the gym bleachers at 1 p.m. that day when teachers, students and alumni gear up for the big game at the Winterfest Assembly.

The Rayders will take on Elk Rapids at 6 p.m., Feb. 14 in the high school gym located off Marion Center Road. At halftime the Winterfest king and queen will be crowned.

Win or lose against Elk Rapids, a big dance party is scheduled to take place from 8:30 to 11:30 p.m., Feb. 15 at Charlevoix Elementary School. National Honor Society members are in charge of decorations. The school is located at 13513 Division Street in Charlevoix.

Feindt inspired many in Charlevoix

Michigan's Outstanding Older Worker in 1998.

She was also awarded an honorary doctorate degree in science and industry from Ferris State University in 1999.

Feindt was a member of FIG, an international surveying association, that has given her the opportunity to share her knowledge with many other countries, such as Finland, Spain, Australia, Argentina, the former East Germany, South America, South Africa, the Netherlands, Czech Republic and South Korea.

In 1994, the city of Charlevoix declared "Mary Feindt Day" to commemorate 50 years of service and Feindt received the Outstanding Citizens Award from the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce on Jan. 9, 2003.

In addition to all of these, Feindt was a wife and mother. Her family took an active role in her business.

Feindt married J. Lawrence Feindt in 1942, and they worked together in the business until her husband's death in 1988. She was joined in the business by her son, Larry, a professional surveyor, and by her daughter-in-law, Faye, in 1971. Her stepson, C. Fred Feindt (now deceased), was also a memher of the business during the 1970s and 1980s. Her granddaughter, Amy Feindt, is currently employed at Advanced Geomatics and received a degree in surveying-engineering from Ferris State University in 2000.

"The biggest thing I am going to miss about her is any prohlem that came up she was there to help," Larry said of his mother.

He added, besides her work, Feindt had a domestic side to her. She loved to shop with her younger sister, loved University of Michigan football games and collected dolls, that she used to make outfits for and dress up.

In addition to her family, Feindt had a big impact on many of the business people in northern Michigan.

John Ferguson, co-owner of Ferguson and Chamberlain surveying in Charlevoix, worked for Feindt from 1967 to 1977.

"I respected her more than any person I have ever been around. I admired her work ethic. I really enjoyed working for her; I learned a lot about the surveying profession and life in general," Ferguson said.

Ferguson's business partner, Sherm Chamberlain, also spoke highly of Feindt.

"She was a very classy person. She had very high business ethics and always sought to find the truth in any situation," he said.

Both Ferguson and Chamberlain added, while Feindt was a small woman, she was extremely brave.

They said when she was in the field, Feindt was willing to do what it took to get the job done, even if it meant walking over sand dunes, crawling under brush and walking through swamps.

This sentiment was also echoed by John Taylor, co-owner of Northern Preferred Title Company of Charlevoix. Taylor worked with Feindt from the mid-1980s to 1995.

"Her work is evident all over northern Michigan," he said. "She loved this community. She was always there to help."

Taylor added Feindt never retired and continued to work right up to her death.

"She loved to work and tried to instill that in her family. Larry is a lot like her," Taylor said. "She literally lived to work. I am going to miss her."

Funeral services were Monday, Feb. 3, at the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix (UCC), and were officiated by the Rev. Mary Willis.

Feindt is survived by her son, Lawrence R. (Larry) Feindt and daughter-in-law Faye A. (Whitley) Feindt, who reside in Charlevoix; sister, Lois Metzler, who lives in Bradenton, Fla.; and three grandchildren, Amy C. Feindt who resides in Howell, Rene P. Feindt who resides in Charlevoix, and Jacob H. Feindt who is currently a student at Northern Michigan University. She also is survived by three great-grandchildren, Christinc and Isaac Zeitler of Howell and Jesston Whitley of Charlevoix.

The family suggests memorials be given to the Mary C. Feindt Surveying Scholarship c/o Dehra Jacks, Ferris State University, 330 Oak West 100, Big Rapids, MI 49307; the Mary C. Feindt scholarship for women entering the fields of mathematics and science at the Charlevoix Zonta Club; or the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix (UCC).

Committee narrows down fire chief candidates council approved included advertising for the position, gathering resumes, narrowing the field of candidates and having those candidates interview with a professional team which would narrow the field for final interviews with city council.

As of Jan. 15, the application cut off date, Wiesner had received 33 résumés from applicants across the state interested in the chief's position.

After a lengthy discussion at the fire chief selection committee meeting Feb. 3, it was decided that eight of those 33 candidates will be interviewed by a professional team to determine who is not fit for the job.

Local applicants include: Paul M. Ivan, Jerry Meggison and shift commander Joe Schwartzfisher. The five other applicants from across the state include: a confidential candidate, Alan E. D'Agostino, Michael T. Kennedy, Craig E. Miller and Janis (John) V. Smits.

These eight were chosen based on 18 criteria established by Carver and Halverson — called the "matrix" system. But Mayor Campbell said he didn't think this "matrix" system was a fair evaluation of all the candidates.

"We are not talking about points, we are talking about people. I don't think this is a fair monitor," he said. "A lot of these things (criteria) are good, but they don't mean you are a leader."

He requested that the committee go through the 33 candidates and choose eight to first be interviewed by council and then hy the professional panel, instead of using the top five matrix scores and the three city department applicants.

Halverson disagreed that the matrix was an unfair way to weed through the applications.

"It isn't a perfect method, hut it is a fair method to get a large number to a manageable number," Halverson said.

Wiesner said by interviewing with the panel, council will have a better idea of what the candidates are capable of.

"There is value in getting an outside opinion. You get a different perspective and that's really where we felt there was value," he said. "I probably have more experience dealing with the fire department than council and I don't feel comfortable making that decision."

Aside from value in having professional input, Halverson said a professional recommendation could address potential liability issues down the road.

"I think it's a better insurance policy for the city. I think down the road it is conceivable if something catastrophic happens someone might want to know what steps were in place when the person was chosen," he said.

The professional panel includes: Carver; Norman Conklin, chief of the Resort-Bear Creek Fire Department; John Deming, chief of the Otsego County Emergency Medical Service; and Ralph Soffredine, Traverse City Police Chief.

This team is expected to return with anywhere from three to five of those interviewed with the technical skills to do what is required.

The department currently includes a full-time chief, three full-time firefighters, 25 paid-on-call firefighters and 12 paid-on-call emergency medical technicians. The three full-time firefighters are Lyle Gennett, Bob Roloff and Schwartzfisher.

Man guilty of assaulting sheriff

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

John Joseph Shulick, 44, of Boyne Falls, was found guilty of assaulting Charlevoix Sheriff George T. Lasater Tuesday in the Charlevoix County Circuit Court.

Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur said, "The verdict was a correct one and Mr. Shulick got what was coming to him."

Last fall, Shulick was accused of ramming a shotgun into Lasater's mouth, when Lasater and sheriff deputies went to the home of his ex-wife in Boyne Falls. Lasater was trying to serve an eviction notice to Shulick that was stipulated by his recent divorce.

As a result of the assault, Lasater lost some of his front teeth and his upper lip was almost cut off.

Shulick was arrested following a standoff with police and charged with assault with intent to do great bodily harm — a 10 year felony; assaulting a police officer — a four year felony; and a felony firearm violation — a two year felony.

A jury found Shulick guilty on all three counts.

In a written statement following the verdict, Lasater said he was extremely pleased with the results and hopes Shulick "receives the help he needs to be a productive and honest citizen someday."

He added he is very grateful to Kur and feels she did an outstanding job. He also thanked Sandy Ward, victim advocate, and the officer in charge of the case, Det/Sgt. Donald Sproul.

"These three key players make me proud to be a member of the criminal justice system in Charlevoix County," he said.

Lasater added, he appreciates all the support he has received during the trial.

"Now, I must get back in the saddle, move forward to do my best to give the citizens of Charlevoix County the optimum service possible," he said.

Shulick will be back in court on Feb. 28 for sentencing.

City hall plans ready for bids

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix City Hall renovation plans are ready for bids and construction is expected to start in March.

The project will add 2,930 square feet of space and will renovate the existing building which is over 20,000 square feet.

According to city hall project manager Jim Shull the largest change will be the 2,200 square foot addition to be made on the Mason Street parking slab. It will house new public restrooms and the police department. The exterior of the addition will be the same limestone material that currently exists.

"It shouldn't look out of place. It should blend," he said.

Other big changes include moving city council chambers to the second floor and renovating current chambers for city administrative staff, utility billing, accounts payable and the city clerk.

An elevator will be added to allow handicapped access to the second floor. And the former post office located off Mason Street will be renovated, including the addition of restrooms, partitions and upgraded electrical.

Charlevoix girl fights for warm classrooms

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Nicole Angermuller, a junior at Charlevoix High School, is fed up with the uncomfortably cold temperature of her art and music classes.

"All I want is to be warm while I am doing my work," she said.

Two weeks ago after talking with high school principal Gary Grundman, she decided to exercise her right to free expression by distributing a leaflet to inform students, staff and parents of the heat situation. Aside from pinpointing the problem, she also offered the principal's name and the high school's phone number as a way for others to act.

"Everyone is pretty happy that I am trying to do something about it," she said.

The leaflet claims that at least half of the classrooms at Charlevoix High School are heated in the range of 50 to mid-60 degrees with a few classrooms in the 70 degree range.

Grundman said the school is having mechanical problems with heat in both the band and art rooms, two classrooms

Charlevoix band had its Mojo working in Memphis

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix's Mojo and the Boogieman got its mojo working up and down Beale Street in Memphis, Tenn. earning high praise and top honors from blues enthusiasts across the globe.

The local blues band rocked America's most famous blues mecca for three days, Jan. 30 to Feb. 1, competing in the Blues Foundation's Nineteenth Annual International Blues Challenge (IBC). By the time the whirlwind weekend was over, Mojo, a six piece blues band, was named in the top eight of the best unsigned blues bands in the world.

Mojo started its weekend with 30 minute performances Thursday and Friday nights before two different panels of judges. They faced six bands from across the world including representatives of Buffalo, N.Y., Iowa and as far away as Singapore.

The soulful blues put out by the five member Singapore outfit and the swinging sound from Iowa were no match for Mojo's high energy shows. They had the dance floor packed each night and solidified their win Friday with flawless renditions of five original songs.

At 2 a.m. that night the band and a caravan of faithful Mojo fans bounded confidently up Beale Street toward the Old Daisy Theater where finalists were to be announced.

"I was pretty confident, we played well both nights and everyone brought their A game Friday night," Charlie Witthoeft, Mojo's harmonica player, said.

The announcement would narrow the field of over 60 bands to just eight that would be eligible for $20,000 in cash and prizes.

The theater was packed elbow-to-elbow as judges tabulated final scores. At around 3 a.m. judges started the announcements with Mojo as one of the winners.

Mojo's six members, Jon Archambault, Leo Dombecki, Bryan Fischer, John Hefty, James Hunt and Witthoeft, exchanged hugs and high five's as a group of fans chanted "Mojo, Mojo, Mojo...." into the early morning air.

"That was an exciting time for the band. We've waited so long to get there, especially Jon and Bryan. There is a real sense of accomplishment," Hefty said.

Saturday was the final day of the competition and the band that is used to playing three, hour-long sets had to trim its show from the tight 30 minute contest time to 20 minutes.

Bands arrived at the theater at 7 p.m. It was a sold out show and crowds lined up around the block to get a seat in close proximity to the stage.

Mojo went on second and put on a show that put Charlevoix on the map.

After they took their final bow the band's CD's and promotion packs were in short supply and talk of big festivals and well respected blues clubs gigs flourished.

Six other bands followed and by the early morning hours of Feb. 2 winners were named. Delta Blues, a band led by a fiery female from Charlotte, N.C. won first prize with its country western spin on the blues.

While Mojo would have loved to be named number one, they packed up for Charlevoix the morning of Feb. 2 knowing they had already won.

Their winning streak started Nov. 10 when they played a free show in Detroit's Greek Town that earned them a spot on the roster for the First Annual Detroit Blues Competition Nov. 24 in Royal Oak.

Then, they beat five of Detroit's best and were awarded the chance to represent the Detroit Blues Society in Memphis.

And finally, they won again when they arrived in Memphis and within days had attracted a large following of fans and were named in the top eight of the best unsigned blues bands in the world with Archambault being named one of five guitar players in the running for the sought after Albert King award.

"This was the first step in getting this band out there doing it coast to coast. It opened the door for us to find a national audience," Hefty said.

Archambault said it also showed the band the strength of its hometown backing. He said without the support of people from across the state the band would have never made it to Memphis.

Student shows guts speaking out on issue

EDITORIAL

Sometimes it seems as though people just don't care about the world around them.

Many people suffer from apathy. They basically will just look the other way on world and community problems, thinking they will disappear.

Other people are afraid to act on anything that is bothering them, saying they "don't want to rock the boat."

This is a problem a newspaper deals with on a constant basis. Many times people will avoid talking with us on a community issue, in fear that someone will use their opinion against them. Sometimes they call us up and give their opinion on a subject, but will refuse to write a letter to the editor, usually because they are afraid of what people in the community will say.

It can be a frustrating job for a journalist to get a person to talk openly in today's world.

But, just when you think the world is filled with people who are afraid to speak out, along comes a person who proves you wrong. And, when the person is a teenager, it makes for an exciting future.

Charlevoix High School student Nicole Angermuller is just such a person. You see, while attending classes at the new Charlevoix High School, Angermuller was constantly trying to keep warm. Rather than just accept the temperature, Angermuller started to do something about it. See page one.

First she went to the school principal, Gary Grundman. When he couldn't give her a solid answer, she took her complaint to the streets by making a flyer about the problem and asking people to call the school about it.

She then put these flyers up throughout town and even alerted this newspaper to it.

It takes guts for a person to stand up for something, regardless of the issue. And here we have a student with some guts. She stood up to the school administration and is willing to let the community know what she thinks is a problem.

Now the problem is being addressed, in part, thanks to Angermuller's moxie.

Sometimes young people can teach the world so much.

Averages are not the whole, truthful story

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

I believe it was Mark Twain who catalogued the degrees of falsehood in which humans commonly participated by noting that there were "lies, damned lies and statistics."

Surrounded as we are by the numerical results of polls, budget numbers, percents of this and that and above all averages, it is worth being reminded that Twain's third category "statistics," can be used to shade or hide the truth as much as it can be used to inform.

Averages are among the most used of statistics and can be the most troublesome. An average after all is just an arithmetic exercise: dividing one number by another. An average is no more true than the numbers that are used to calculate it and may be far more misleading.

Examples can be useful. I used to tell my students the story of the duck hunter who believed in averages as truth. One day, sitting in his blind on the edge of his favorite pond, he saw a fine drake mallard fly in and settle on the water just about 30 yards out. It had been a quiet morning in the blind with no ducks flying and our hunter decided that we would shoot the duck where it sat, rather than on the wind. He fired and sent up a great geyser of water just behind the duck. The duck fluffed its feathers and held its ground. He overcompensated, fired again and sent up a similar geyser just in front of the duck. He then urged his retriever after the duck, since on the average he had killed it.

Another wonderful story of averages is making the rounds currently. Bill Gates walks into a homeless shelter and the economy perks up considerably, since the average net worth of the people now in the shelter is over a billion dollars. There is no more money, of course, we have just divided Gates net worth by the number of people in the shelter.

If such stories seem far fetched and not like what we hear every day, consider this: What is it likely to mean if a politician tells you that with the proposed tax cuts, the average family of four will receive more than a thousand dollars tax relief? Suppose for simplicity of calculation we count only 10 taxpayers. If one of them gets $10,000 and the others get nothing, the average tax relief is $1,000. More realistically, suppose nine taxpayers of our 10 get $100, and one gets $9,100, the average tax relief is still $1,000. It is all too easy to assume, as most of us might, that the average is somewhere close to what we will all get. That is simply false. We have been mislead into believing that an average is a real thing.

When someone tells us that the average year-round temperature for Michigan is 47 degrees, we know that the average is not much comfort in February or in August. Money averages are much easier to misunderstand.

In 1996 Stephen Jay Gould wrote a marvelous book filled with information about the misleading nature of averages and other statistics. If you would understand what politicians and others are telling you with their statistics, reading "Full House" by Gould is a fine beginning.

And don't believe any average unless you know the numbers that are used to calculate it.

Letter to the editor

Recommends Ivan

Editor:

I am a senior citizen, who has moved into the township for housing that will accommodate my needs now, but I also lived within the city of Charlevoix for many, many years. In fact, my husband, Ed, was a member of the city council and a mayor of Charlevoix for years. So my interest in city government has not diminished just because I now live outside its boundaries.

I am writing to express my feelings about the selection of a new fire chief for Charlevoix. I am of the firm belief that the job should be awarded to a qualified person from within the city. We should not have to always go outside to find someone who can handle city jobs; I am convinced that we have qualified people right here at home.

I know Paul Ivan has applied for this job and I want to offer my recommendation for him. He has been on the city police force for many years and done a great job. He is a good worker, a good citizen, and I know would give his all in this effort, just as he has done in his present job.

I know that many people agree with me and I would hope they would add their voices to mine in recommending this good man.

Head lice cases being reported

Several cases of head lice have recently been reported to the health department.

"Head lice are a common problem during the school year, especially in the winter months," said Joshua Meyerson M.D., medical director of the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency. "They occur at all social levels and are not related to cleanliness."

Children can get head lice from close contact with an infested person or by sharing hats, clothing, combs and hairbrushes. The most common symptom is intense itching of the scalp.

Head lice do not transmit diseases to humans, but scratching can result in infection.

The favorite site for lice and nits (lice eggs) are the nape of the neck and behind the ears. If you suspect your child has lice, examine this area using a magnifying glass and flashlight. Actual head lice are hard to see because they are tiny and few in number.

Nits are found on the hair close to the scalp. Nits are gray white or silvery in color, oval in shape and the size of a poppy seed.

"If one person is infested, all family members should be checked and all infested members treated at the same time," Meyerson said.

There are prescription and over-the-counter medications for treatment of head lice. Medications should be applied according to the manufacturers' instructions. Because all lice and nits may not be killed with the initial treatment, a second treatment is usually recommended 7-10 days later to kill newly hatched lice.

Never use home remedies such as alcohol or kerosene. They don't work and may be dangerous.

Removal of nits after treatment is not necessary, but if attempted for aesthetic reasons, they can be removed with a special fine tooth "Nit Comb."

At the time of treatment, all bedding and clothing used within the last 72 hours should be dry cleaned or laundered in hot soapy water and machine dried. The hot setting on the dryer should be used. Non-washable items can be sealed in a plastic bag for 14 days or left in below freezing temperatures for 12 to 24 hours.

Insecticide sprays, aerosols and fumigation of the home are not recommended.

Only vacuum those areas touched by a child's head (such as a car seat or favorite chair.

"Remember to clean your child's favorite fuzzy toy as well as headgear, brushes and combs," Meyerson added.

Although lice may survive for 2-3 days off a person under ideal conditions, they usually die within one day.

The Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency is the local health department serving Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego counties. Its staff is dedicated to preventing disease and injury and promoting healthy communities.

For additional information about head lice, telephone your child's physician or a public health nurse at the health department.

Nursing scholarship honors McRae's mother

Ralph McRae

Former Charlevoix mayor, civic booster, and philanthropist Ralph McRae died more than a year ago but, now, thanks to his foresight and generosity, his influence will continue to live on, helping others as was his habit.

The Edna Brown Memorial Scholarship Fund, named in honor of McRae's mother, has been established within the Charlevoix County Community Foundation. McRae provided for the gift in his estate plan, and directed the fund to provided nursing scholarships to area students.

"Ralph McRae had a longtime admiration for the nursing profession," Robert Tambellini, president of the foundation, said. "Since his mother, Edna Brown, was a caring person who had a reputation for helping others in need, Ralph named his fund in her memory. We're honored to carry out his wishes and delighted to help this area's nursing students achieve their goals."

Beginning in the fall of 2003, the Edna Brown Memorial Scholarship Fund will provide four to six full-tuition scholarships to qualifying students from Charlevoix and Emmet counties who wish to pursue a nursing degree at North Central Michigan College (NCMC) and have been accepted into the nursing program.

Applicants will be evaluated primarily on financial need, grade point average, and the submission of a personal statement.

The deadline for applications is April 1, 2003 with a decision expected June 30. To obtain more information and/or an application, contact the NCMC Financial Aid Office at (231) 348-6627.

The Edna Brown fund joins 141 other funds held by the Charlevoix County Community Foundation - 45 of which are designated for scholarships. Of the foundation's $7.1 million in assets, more than $1.2 million is invested in scholarship funds. Last year, the community foundation awarded more than $85,000 in scholarships to area graduates, and the foundation's total scholarship awards now approach $500,000.

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation was established in 1992 by local civic leaders who wanted to build a permanent charitable endowment to serve the area. Donors to the foundation make unrestricted gifts, or create their own funds to serve their personal interests. Donations are invested and each year a portion of the investment income is used to make grants that support programs in the arts, education, environment, health and wellness, civic improvement, youth, and recreation.

More information about the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and its scholarship funds is available by calling (231) 536-2440, or by writing P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, MI 49727.

Annual firefighter's ball to be this weekend

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Fourth Annual Firefighter's Ball is this weekend at the Charlevoix Country Club.

The ball is scheduled to take place at 8 p.m., Feb. 15 in the club's Mahogany's dining room.

"It's just a mid-winter fun-filled evening," said Shari Kline, secretary-treasurer for the Charlevoix Volunteer Firefighter's Association and a member of the firefighter's ball committee. "The camaraderie between the fire department and the community is special. It's nice for us to have an event to thank the community for things they've done for us."

The much anticipated event is a formal evening celebration sponsored by the Charlevoix Volunteer Firefighter's Association to benefit the city of Charlevoix Fire Department. Proceeds pay for incidentals that are not in the city's budget.

Last year 180 people attended and the association raised $3,800 for the department. The money was used to buy an automatic external defibrillator and radios for firefighters. In 2001, the money raised at the ball paid for a new snowmobile.

Kline said fund-raising opportunities at this year's ball will include a silent auction and a 50-50 raffle. Those who attend will indulge in heavy hors d'oeuvres and will be entertained by DJ the DJ, Dr. Dennis Joy.

There are around 50 tickets left. They are $25 each and can be bought by calling Kline at 547-8495.

Equalization Ratios, as shown, are the percentages of assessed valuations to true cash value as determined by a survey of individual assessments. The Multipliers are those necessary to bring the Ratios to the required 50% of estimated true cash value.

The Multipliers, as shown, are tentative and subject to change as the result of possible adjustments by individual assessing officers. Assuming that no adjustments are made, the Multiplier may be applied to each individual valuation.

Note: THESE MULTIPLIERS REPLACE THOSE OF 2002 AND ARE NOT AN ADDITION TO OR SUBTRACTION FROM THEM.

New surgical wing has its first patient

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

> "I think our new hospital is a credit to the community. It certainly illustrates what good foresight will do."
> James Elliott,
> First patient in the new surgical wing

Major changes to the surgical wing at Charlevoix Area Hospital made for a comfortable stay for the first patient to be operated on there.

Long-time Charlevoix resident James Elliott was the first patient to use Charlevoix Area Hospital's new surgical wing. Elliott, 94, was in the hospital Feb. 3 for opening day of the unit having his gallbladder removed by hospital surgeon Richard Hagelberg.

He said the patient rooms in the new unit offer comforts that weren't available before including: spacious rooms with natural light and a great view of Lake Michigan.

"I think our new hospital is a credit to the community. It certainly illustrates what good foresight will do," Elliott said. "I think it's a big improvement."

The new surgical wing is part of the major expansion project the hospital started in August of 2001 which also included a new emergency department and expanded obstetrics. The surgical unit now offers nine new semiprivate rooms, two of which are dedicated to pediatrics.

Facilities in the wing-like rooms and the nursing station are also more spacious than they used to be. Joy Klooster, vice president of nursing services, said the additional space has been a welcome change for nurses who no longer have to work in cramped quarters.

"It's more comfortable for patients and staff," she said.

Aside from changes to the hospital building itself, Elliott said in his five decades of using it one thing hasn't changed, the caring medical staff. His family physician Dr. Jim Gels was in and out all of last week checking on him and even made it in on Thursday, his day off.

"I think the hospital is very adequate and the staff is very competent," Elliott said.

In fact, his stay has been so comfortable Elliott said if the future holds more surgeries he would return to Charlevoix Area Hospital for further treatment.

But in spite of all the fabulous amenities he enjoyed, Elliott said he was looking forward to going home over the weekend.

Elliott's safe return to his Charlevoix home marks the end to two successful experiences his family has had with opening day in a new unit at the hospital.

The Elliott family has summered in Charlevoix since 1951. During July of 1955 his daughter Sally (Elliott) Winter was the first patient to receive care at the new pediatric unit.

Winter, who currently lives outside of Chicago, Ill., said she was 2 years old when she suffered a broken arm, the same day the unit opened.

"I know my parents were most grateful for the professional, yet sensitive care I received, and they thought it was exciting and memorable that I was the first patient to use the new pediatric unit," she stated in a letter.

Sally's sister Jan (Elliott) Biddick of Petoskey said that while her sister's experience at the new hospital was good, and the family enjoyed tours of the new unit, just like dad, Sally was ready to head home.

Ways get turned down for rezone by county

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Dawson and Mark "Barney" Way will take their rezoning request before the Eveline Township Board without the support of both the Charlevoix County and the township planning commissions.

"We are following through," Mark Way said.

The Ways applied to the Eveline Township Planning Commission June 24 to have their property rezoned from agricultural to R-4, a residential zone that accommodates mobile homes. Currently there is no area in the township zoned R-4 or set aside for R-4 zoning.

The request applies to two pieces of property spanning over 150 acres, located adjacent to one another, with frontage on M-66 and Brock and Ferry roads.

"We meet all the R-4 criteria (including frontage on a main road and land size). The township master plan doesn't allow for it and that's a gray area. But we feel we should get it because there is no R-4 district in the township and we meet the criteria," Mark Way said.

He added that the development would provide needed affordable housing.

But in spite of the fact that the property fits R-4 criteria as outlined by the township zoning ordinance, both commissions have recommended that the township board deny the request.

On Dec. 2 the township planning commission took the advice of professional planners and voted to recommend that the township board turn the request down.

Township planning firm Gourdic-Fraser of Traverse City had reviewed the request and felt it is just too large. The piece of property in the R-4 district could accommodate a 1,200 unit manufactured home community.

While the Way development plan is looking at closer to 200 homes, by changing the zoning the planners said the township is opening itself up to the possibility of there someday having 1,200 homes at that site.

The next step in the rezoning process took place last week on Feb. 6 when the county planning commission reviewed the Way request.

The commission voted 5 to 1 in favor of recommending against the rezone. Commissioner Bob Draves was vacationing in Canada and did not vote.

Tom Wieland, a member of the county planning commission since 1968, was the one vote in favor of recommending the property be rezoned.

"My first love is to preserve farmland, but my thought on this is if there is a need for 200 to 500 houses of that type in the township, better to have them grouped in one spot than spread out all over the township," he said. "One of the problems we are seeing with farmland is people are buying 10 acre chunks and putting a house on it and letting the rest grow up with weeds and brush."

County planner Larry Sullivan agrees with Wieland and issued a six page letter as to why he feels it would be appropriate to rezone 77 acres that make up the north half of the property, but not the 78 acre south half.

"You protect farmland, forest areas and open space by providing areas of high density housing," he said.

He believes the property on the north would better support a number of homes because of its close proximity to M-66. Sullivan said the land to the east is agricultural land and because of that, the southern half would then be better used as agricultural land.

However, by developing the north half, Sullivan said the township would be limiting sprawl. He explained that by putting 300 homes on a 100 acre lot fewer people have to move to more remote areas where they buy big parcels.

Sullivan also pointed out reasons not to approve the rezone, including its conflict with the township's master plan. The change would allow eight units per acre which is more high density than modest density as the master plan allows for in that area.

In spite of county planning commission member Nancy Ferguson's personal involvement with the Way property, she voted.

Ferguson is a member of the Eveline Township Preservation Group that has adamantly opposed a wind turbine generator project at the Way property and at nearby property owner Ralph Richardson's. She has also voiced opposition to the R-4 rezone.

Charlevoix attorney Allen Telgenhof had written a letter on behalf of the Ways requesting that she abstain.

Sullivan said after reviewing the issue with Brian Seelye, an attorney in the county prosecutor's office, they decided based on Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedures, which governs the commission, she should vote.

Ferguson has no financial involvement with the property and she agreed that she could evaluate the request based on its merits, putting personal feelings aside.

The township planning commission will review the county's findings and the township board is expected to vote for or against the rezone at its meeting scheduled to take place at 7 p.m., March 11.

Hospital helps infants get a start on reading

It's never too early to start reading and a new project co-sponsored by the Charlevoix Public Library and Charlevoix Area Hospital aims to nurture bookworms and encourage good reading habits among the very young.

Babies born at the hospital, and children who are patients, now receive a complimentary book bag, complete with a new, age-appropriate book, bookmark, library card application, information on the library's story hour program and, for pediatric patients, a coloring book and crayons.

The project grew out of a meeting between Amy Spegele, youth services assistant at the Charlevoix Public Library and Charlevoix Area Hospital's Birthing Center nurses, where a discussion about OB books soon turned to ways in which the two organizations could collaborate on other reading and health projects.

"We're always looking for ways to reach new people and get kids involved with their local library and this was a perfect fit," Spegele said. "Hospital officials say the reaction from patients has been very positive as well."

Big Rock crews moving spent fuel rods

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Work decommissioning the Big Rock Nuclear Power Plant on US-31 is on schedule as crews are busy shipping spent fuel rods, encased in thick cement casks, from the plant to a storage pad on site.

So far, the Big Rock crews have loaded four of the large casks, leaving four more left. One of those casks will be filled with various "irradiated" equipment, such as racks and other debris from the spent nuclear fuel pool, instead of spent fuel rods.

"The casks are going very well. Loading is on schedule and on time," Tim Petroskey, public affairs director at the plant said.

The process to load a cask and take it outside of the plant to a special storage pad can take around 8 to 9 days.

The first thing to happen in the process of loading a cask with the spent fuel rods from the spent nuclear fuel pool is workers bring in a large concrete "overpack" into the containment building — the large building that looks like a ball on the property.

Workers use an overhead crane, for radiation shielding, and they drop a stainless steal canister in a transfer cask. Inside this canister is a "lower basket."

Crane operators move this to the spent fuel pool then place fuel bundles — spent nuclear rods — into the basket, all underwater. Up to 32 bundles go in the lower basket.

Once the bottom basket is loaded, the upper basket is put into the canister and is loaded with fuel bundles.

A shield lid is then put on the canister and the crane lifts the transfer cask out of the spent fuel pool. It is taken to another room where a shield is remotely welded on and the canister is vacuumed dry.

Petroskey said this takes a couple of days as workers literally suck out every molecule of water inside the cask. They then backfill the cask with helium.

The crane then places the transfer cask and canister on top of a concrete overpack, where it is then lowered inside of the overpack. Another lid is bolted onto this overpack.

At this point, workers inflate air-bladders around the overpack that enables them to move the 167 ton cask about 120 feet to a waiting heavy hauler.

The heavy hauler moves the cask about 1.5 miles to the dry fuel storage pad — this takes about 15 minutes.

The air bladders are inflated and a mover backs it off of the heavy hauler and into storage position.

These casks will be stored on the Big Rock property until the opening of a federal spent nuclear fuel storage facility at Yucca Mountain in Nevada around 2010.

Once Yucca Mountain opens, Petroskey said the fuel will be shipped out. This should be wrapped up by 2011. Then the dry fuel storage pad will be dismantled by 2012.

As for the rest of Big Rock, Petroskey said the facility will be gone by 2005.

Charlevoix Area Hospital creates new foundation

Charlevoix Area Hospital has announced the formation of the Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation to build and strengthen the relationship between donors and the health needs of the communities it represents.

Hospital president William C. Jackson, said, "The hospital board believes the establishment of a foundation for the hospital is essential for the long-term health of the institution. With increasing costs for health care providers and on-going reductions in Medicaid and Medicare reimbursements, we must have the ability to effectively attract and manage planned gift opportunities and insure philanthropic support for local health-care issues."

John Kurtz, president of Charlevoix State Bank and Mary Adams, retired mortgage banker, have been appointed as co-chairs for the foundation. Other foundation board members include: Scott Beatty, Susan Flanders, Ken Forrester, John Frey, James C. Holmes, Jr., Loretta Jodar, Jackie Krutsch, Marge McGoff, John Riecker and Chuck Unbehaun.

Representing the hospital board on the foundation board are Rebecca Haney, board chair and Jackson.

"I am very excited to be a part of this foundation. We want to assist the hospital board and staff in providing a vision for the future of healthcare in our communities," said Kurtz. "The hospital has proven its ability to offer quality care and we are proud to have helped in a small way to produce a quality facility."

Mary Adams added, "We know the good work the hospital and its medical professionals have done and we believe the foundation can help provide for the future medical needs of the area. Our goal has expanded beyond the $5 million needed for the construction to include future healthcare needs."

Supporting the foundation will be the members of the Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation Development Council who were very successful during the past three years raising over $5 million in support of the hospital's expansion program.

The Development Council hosts two major fund-raising events annually, Holly Daze and Symphony on the Green in addition to working with donors on planned and major gifts, the Lighthouse Club and numerous community outreach and educational programs.

Foundation offices are located at 14634 Park Avenue in Charlevoix, directly across from the hospital.

Kathy Johnson will serve as foundation director and Patti Barraw is event coordinator. Donations for the hospital may be directed to the Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation and mailed to 14700 Lake Shore Drive in Charlevoix.

Questions regarding the foundation or support for the hospital should be directed to Johnson at 547-8502.

Volunteers needed for foster review board

The State Court Administrative Office of the Michigan Supreme Court is seeking volunteers to serve on the Charlevoix County Foster Care review board.

The Michigan Legislature established the Foster Care Review Board Program in 1984 in an effort to improve children's foster care programs through the state utilizing citizen review boards.

The five to seven member boards meet one day each month to review a representative sample of cases of children who have been removed from their homes and placed in foster care due to abuse or neglect. At these reviews, board members interview parents, foster parents, caseworkers, attorneys and other interested parties who may be involved in planning for the ward.

Advisory recommendations are formulated and mailed to the court, child welfare agency, prosecuting attorney, parents and other interested parties. The purpose of the review is to ensure that all agencies, including the court, have established a place for the ward and progress is being made toward achieving permanency.

The Foster Care Review Boards are comprised of citizens who reflect a broad cross section of their communities. Minorities and men are especially encouraged to apply.

The program is seeking volunteers who have demonstrated leadership in other settings.

Employees of the Family Independence Agency, family court or private child placement agencies are prohibited by law to serve on Foster Care Review Boards.

Each volunteer who is selected must attend a two day orientation training March 27 and 28. This training is a requirement to serve on a board. Also, board members attend annual training which is given in different locations throughout the state and expenses for training are reimbursed.

If you live in a rural or northern part of the state, it is possible you may be selected for a multi-county board. Members of multi-county boards would be required to travel to several different locations for board reviews, once a month.

Citizens interested in becoming a board member for the Foster Care Review Board should call (517) 373-1956 for an application. The deadline for receiving applications is March 3 and interviews with prospective candidates will take place in February and March.

Two local middle school students win essay contest

Two students from Charlevoix Middle School in Charlevoix, have been named local winners in the thirty-fourth annual "America and Me Essay Contest."

The two students, who earned the first and second place awards for their school are Zita Anderson, first, and Nicole Mackowiak, second. Both received award certificates for their achievement.

As the school's first place winner, Anderson's name will also be engraved on a plaque for permanent display in the school.

Anderson's first place essay now advances to the state level competition, from which the top 10 essays in Michigan will be selected.

The top 20 statewide winners, who will be announced in April, will receive plaques, cash and U.S. savings bonds valued from $500 to $1,000. In addition, the top 10 essayists will be honored at a banquet in Lansing, meet with Michigan's top governmental leaders and be the featured guests at a Lansing Lugnuts minor league baseball game dedicated in their honor.

A team of finalist judges that included a top Michigan Government official and the sponsoring teachers of last year's top two statewide winners, will determine the ranking of the top 10 statewide winners this year.

Several thousand eighth-grade students from nearly 525 Michigan schools participated in the 2002-2003 "American and Me" essay contest. The topic of the 2002-2003 contest was "My American Hero."

Started in 1968 and open to all Michigan eighth grade students, the contest encourages Michigan youngsters to explore their roles in America's future. As sponsor of the contest, Farm Bureau Insurance has earned 11 national awards from the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge.

Rayders Volleyball has strong showing in Suttons Bay meet

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

Charlevoix had a strong showing in the sixteen team Suttons Bay volleyball tournament last weekend, going 4-1-1 for the day.

The Rayders finished third in their pool with a 1-1-1 mark, tying Indian River Inland Lakes, 15-14, 7-15; defeating Elk Rapids, 15-11, 15-10; and narrowly losing to Frankfort, 12-15, 13-15.

Once in "power pool" action against the other third place pool finishers, however, Charlevoix got on a roll, winning all three matches, beating Traverse City St. Francis, 15-13, 15-9; dropping Mesick, 15-11, 15-14; and besting Suttons Bay, 15-11, 15-13.

"The tournament basically had the top teams in Classes C and D in northern Michigan," coach Liz Grunch said. "It was a great effort, only losing once in a real close match. I was real happy with the quality of play and the fact that despite all the matches and the long day, the girls didn't let up and finished undefeated in the power pool."

Natashia Kleiber and Kari Way led the offensive attack with 23 kills each. Andrea Ruhlman and Teresa Martin each added 13 kills.

Kleiber and Way contributed 35 and 23 digs respectively as well.

For the day, Kleiber was named as team most valuable player in what Grunch termed her "best tournament so far."

Grunch also lauded the play of Becca Kanine.

"Becca had a real good tournament not just statistically (59 assists, 19 digs, four aces) but also with leadership," Grunch said. "She did a great job keeping the girls in the game and not letting them get down when they made mistakes."

The Rayders (17-11-4 overall, 5-3 conference) return to Lake Michigan Conference play on Thursday at Elk Rapids. They travel to Lake Superior State University for a tournament on Feb. 15.

Basketball team wins two by wide margin

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders basketball team had a rough week with the weather and the schedule makers, but an easy time of it on the court as they defeated East Jordan, 100-60 and Maple City Glen Lake, 62-35 on back-to-back nights.

Earlier in the week, the showdown with Lake Michigan Conference leader Harbor Springs was canceled due to inclement weather.

The Rayders jumped out early against the Red Devils, leading 22-12 at the end of the first period and 51-26 at the half. The margin gave coach Keith Haske the opportunity to use his bench liberally in the second half and keep the team fresh for the Glen Lake game.

"Most of the kids are playing pretty well now. I feel pretty comfortable now with anyone we put in there," Haske said. "Todd (Carey), Donnie (Swanson) and Spence (Bryan) have really come on."

Charlevoix scored 31 in the fourth quarter to hit the century mark for the second straight game. The Rayders had earlier scored 111 against Benzie Central.

Scott Friske led all scorers with 26 points. He also pulled down eight rebounds and blocked two shots. Drew Wright scored 13 and Cody Crain added 12. Bryce Daly chipped in with nine.

Nate Teuscher handed out seven assists and grabbed four rebounds.

It was a battle of two traditional basketball powers and two former state Coaches of the Year when Glen Lake and coach Don Miller visited Haske's Rayders.

The game was over early as the Charlevoix press took its toll leading to a 36-14 half-time advantage.

"We pressured the ball real well. We were real aggressive," Haske said. "A lot of the things we weren't doing earlier, we are now doing. That's good to see."

Friske led a balanced effort with 14 points, six rebounds, three steals and two assists. Daly had nine points, five rebounds, three assists and two steals.

Teuscher contributed six rebounds, three assists and two steals. Bryan and Carey each had eight points. John DiMartino had four rebounds, three assists and two steals.

The junior varsity team won both of its games as well, defeating East Jordan, 78-38 and Glen Lake, 74-68. Against the Red Devils, Sparky Nitchman and Ben Bergmann each scored 17 points. Chris Golski and Ezra Bakker added 10 apiece.

Nitchman drained 25 points and Mitchell Klooster had 13 against the Lakers. Matt Loper and Bergmann scored 11 and 10 respectively.

The varsity Rayders (11-2 overall, 5-2 conference) hosted league leader Harbor Springs (12-3, 7-1) on Feb. 11, but results were unavailable at presstime.

Charlevoix hosts conference foe Elk Rapids (10-4, 6-2) on Feb. 14 and travels to Petoskey for a non-league contest on Feb. 15.

Klinger resigns as varsity football coach

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix High School varsity football coach Todd Klinger and assistant coach Tim Carey have resigned from their positions.

Klinger had been the coach of the football team for six years before the resignation. He said he just had a change of priorities that left him with the realization that it was time to quit.

"I felt that as I was looking toward next season and the things I needed to do, I didn't want to do them. I was kind of at the point where I thought I was emotionally burned out," he said.

Klinger said he has a growing family and he wanted to focus on them, rather than spending his summer setting up and running football camps, working a weight room, keeping track of equipment and planning practices.

"My feeling is that if my heart is not 100 percent into it, then I shouldn't do it," he said. "So, I decided to make a change."

Klinger said criticism over his coaching by parents had nothing to do with his decision.

"The parents were real supportive. I had a lot of people that came up to me with positive comments," he said. "The parental support has been real good."

Klinger added, "I enjoyed my time coaching. I will have a lot of positive memories to look back on."

His resignation came as a surprise to the school's athletic director Jim Kanine.

"I know he spent a lot of time making his decision," Kanine said. "I told him he had a positive evaluation this last year....there were things that I wanted him to take a look at, but I think he would have been able to take care of them."

Kanine added Klinger did a good job as a coach and helped the Charlevoix program.

Carey resigned from his coaching job for similar reasons.

"I've been with this for nine years now and I think time is up," he said.

New coaches to be leading baseball, track teams in spring

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The varsity baseball and girls track teams will be led by new coaches this spring.

The baseball team will endure head coaching turnover for the third year in a row.

Last year, after one year holding the reigns of the varsity baseball program, high school Spanish instructor Pete Scholten resigned from the coaching position to spend more time with his family.

Long-time junior varsity football and baseball coach Brian Certa stepped into Scholten's seat.

Certa was the junior varsity baseball coach in 2001 and was planning to coach the team again in 2002. But he saw there was a need at the varsity level and accepted the position for the short-term.

Charlevoix High School athletic Director Jim Kanine said Certa had a strong rebuilding season last year and at the beginning of the year it looked as though he might return. But Kanine received Certa's letter of resignation Jan. 6.

"It was a tough decision this year. I really enjoyed coaching last year and with the time it takes I want to make sure I don't overextend myself," Certa said.

Aside from his work with the sports program, Certa is also the high school's construction technology teacher of 23 years, a father of five and is taking graduate courses.

Kanine said if Certa wants his junior varsity coaching position back, he's got it. And Certa said he is still considering that.

Bryan Hawkins, high school history instructor, replaced Certa at the helm of the junior varsity baseball team last year. Hawkins was the assistant coach in 2001, helping out Certa and Scholten.

The baseball coaching position has been posted and Hawkins has applied for the position.

While the boys on the baseball diamond take orders from a new coach the girls on the track will be learning from a new leader with a familiar face.

Kanine said girls' cross country coach Mary Plude has applied and will likely be appointed to the position left vacant when head coach Jennifer Glass resigned this fall.

Plude has been the assistant track coach for six years.

"When the opportunity came I wanted to head up the girls," she said.

Plude is hoping Marilyn Morehead who has volunteered with the track team in the past will be her assistant.

The first day of practice for the spring sports season is March 10.

Student speaks out over heating problems

Angermuller regularly spends time in. Temperatures in other individual classrooms are decided by the instructor.

He said the art room's temperature in the morning is usually right around 60 degrees and, with the help of ceramic heaters, heats up to about 66 degrees by late afternoon.

However, on a few occasions, the heat problem has forced art classes to the commons area, a reality that frustrates Grundman.

"I want the very best for these kids. Moving the art class to the commons area is unacceptable. I'm very discouraged by it. But I know there are people here every day monitoring the system and working on it," he said.

While Grundman said he hasn't received calls from people responding to the leaflet, he is addressing the situation and hopes it will be rectified soon.

Technicians are currently working to fix the problem, but Grundman said the hot water heating system is huge and finding a solution hasn't been easy. The building is 136,000 square feet.

"It's a very sophisticated system. People are working really hard on it and sooner or later they'll find out why those rooms are not receiving the heat they should," he said.

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Dr. John Sturock announced at the Feb. 10 school board meeting that a design fault may have been discovered and a coil will be added in the art room and fin tubing in the band room.

Angermuller is hoping technicians have pinpointed the problem.

In the meantime, she said she will be wearing several layers of clothing in her classes at the school.

SCRAPBOOK

Writer shares memories of past snowstorms

Marilyn Boss

'Days gone by'

As the snow is gently falling outside, my thoughts turn back to yesteryears, when we really used to get a lot of howling, drifting snow, which we haven't seen in the last 20 years.

I remember particularly the winter of 1966-67, when we had our German exchange student, and we didn't have school for a week. We had a house full of kids, plus the student, making eight children in all. Of course they loved to play in the snow, and when they came in, we had the clothes rack over the register in the floor, completely covered with their clothes.

Dale, who was a door to door milkman at the time, recalls that he had a brand new light blue 1966 Ford extended Econoline van, which he used to deliver milk. He had big heavy lug snow tires on it, with double cross-link chains over the top of the tires, plus a locking grip rear end. He filled it to the roof with cases loaded with milk, so that he would still have a half a load on the truck for weight when he finished giving him traction to get around the streets of Charlevoix.

He remembers this one Saturday morning in particular, when he had our son, Bo with him. The snow was so deep on East Hurlbut, that when he left Alice Street, heading west on Hurlbut, he couldn't stop at a couple of his customers, as he saw the road ahead was drifted full at the corner of May and Hurlbut. He quickly pulled the automatic into low and held the gas pedal tight on the floor. The truck became airborn, and made it through the drift. The only catch was, the truck had to go to the body shop to have the front end bent back into shape and refinished. For all practical purposes, the town was paralyzed. Of course, Dale was in his glory. He has always loved snow storms. That same year, I had a new 1967 Ford school bus. I was the first woman bus driver in the north, and naturally the parents were concerned about a woman driver. They dismissed school right after lunch and had an extra person ride on each bus to help the driver to get the kids home safely.

Dale was a school board member, and he rode with me on the Barnard route. We turned west off Barnard Road on to Ferry Road and Dale saw that the road was full ahead. He had all the kids sit in the very back of the bus, to give it weight to hold it down. There were several farmers shoveling the snow out of the small hill which was full. I shifted the rear axle into high range, put the four speed transmission into second gear and leaned on the horn. With my foot in the carburetor, we hurled through snow which flew over the windshield. The farmers scattered, and I'm sure they wondered who in the world was driving that flying missile. Dale was helping me see out the side, and we cleared that snow out of there quicker than a flash without getting stuck.

When we returned to the bus garage and were told that driver, Mary Ann Cudd Stephan was hung up by the Gerald Johnson farm on Maple Grove Road in Hayes Township, Dale got in another bus with Mart Elzinga, the supervisor, to go and help get the stalled bus out of the blown shut road. It stormed so bad on the Boyne City Road near the Greensky Hill turnoff, that Mart had to open the bus door and leave it open for Dale to stand there and direct him. There was no vision through the windshield. It was a complete whiteout. When they got to the other bus, they were able to take a long rope and pull the bus out so it could complete the route. The snowbanks were 6 feet high on the sides of the road and visibility was zero. Many of the people coming up here to live have no conception of what a true northern Michigan winter can be like.

We also had a bad winter in 1959. The country roads were plugged so bad that the dairy farmers had to dump their milk, as there was no way for the big milk tanker trucks to get to them. Mick Cunningham's hill, on the Barnard Road, just past the dog kennels, was so full of snow that they had to use big earth moving end loaders to clear it. When they got it cleared, the road went on the sod on the east part of the paved road, because that was the only place they could get through. Many of the school buses had the tin on the bottom rolled under from trying to get through the little trails that were left after the snow plows went through. The next spring the bus bodies had to be pushed back into place and refinished to take care of the damage done by the snow.

In the late seventies, we had a bad storm and school was dismissed right after lunch. Dale was driving a bus at that time on the Marion Center route. He was taking the last ones to get off the bus home. It was so terrible out, that he couldn't get past Russ Dohm's chicken coop, as the road was full and the hill ahead was impassible. The kids wanted to go home, rather than go back to town. Dale saw that they were safely inside Russ' big commercial chicken coop, where they would be safe and warm. When the storm subsided, they could walk the short distance up the hill and home.

That same week that school was closed, Dale and Bo took the ski hill snow machine and went right down the center of Bridge Street, which was void of any traffic and completely filled with snow and brought LeRoy Buchanan, who was Oleson's store manager, home. They put the machine away in the ski hill garage and the storm was so furious that they had to walk backwards, arm in arm to reach our house, one block away. The storm was so violent, they were thankful to make it.

One nice thing about times back then, was the equipment the county and city had. The county had "big V" rotary plows with blades turning on each side and also big auger snow blowing plows, so they were equipped with the best to be had. They also put two Oshgosh trucks together with a big pin in between them to hold them together, and went in tandem down the roads.

History does repeat itself, and we will most likely have such storms again. There are many stories about winter happenings, which I will write about next month.

Construction firm for renovations to be picked

CITY

Jim Shull

A full set of contract documents can be reviewed at Fuller, Nichols Architects in Harbor Springs or at the Charlevoix city manager's office located on the second floor of city hall.

Bidders are required to inspect the site at a pre-bid walk through scheduled to take place at 1 p.m., Feb. 18.

Construction bids are then due back by 4 p.m. March 6.

The bids will be reviewed by city staff and representatives of Fuller Nichols, the project architectural firm. The review will produce recommendations for city council who will ultimately award contracts. Council is expected to make its decision at its meeting scheduled to take place at 7 p.m., March 17 at city hall.

The project will be tackled in four phases.

During the first phase, the former post office on Mason Street will be converted to temporary offices for city employees.

The renovation is expected to take eight weeks.

Then, in phase two, city administrative personnel will move to the post office and the recreation department will relocate to Mount McSauba.

After staff has moved, the addition will be built and city offices, the basement and meeting rooms will be renovated.

This is expected to take 29 months to complete.

Phase three is expected to take two weeks and will include minor changes to the post office to accommodate the police and fire departments.

Then, in phase four, police and fire personnel will move to the post office for two months while their quarters are renovated.

Construction will begin after council awards bids March 17.

At this time, the city's $2.318 million cost estimate for the project has not changed.

A 17-month programmatic schedule initially targeted January, February and March of this year as the final three months of the project with the police and fire departments moving back in March 29.

Shull said reviews slowed the process down.

"It was all in the details. Everything we can catch prior to construction will save the city money. When contractors find unexpected things, it involves redesign by architects and review by engineers and that holds up construction," he said. "We are still expecting some of those, but we are just trying to minimize them."

Recall petitions given to county

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A recall effort in Eveline Township has moved a big step toward a special election.

A group of petitioners has gathered 203 signatures, 39 more than were required, to recall township clerk Don Hayden and supervisor Dan Skrzeczkoski.

Susan Parks, treasurer of the Eveline Township Preservation Group filed the signatures with the Charlevoix County Clerk's office Feb. 10.

"I think this is for the good of the township. It's something we need to do to start things moving in a different direction," she said.

The preservation group saw the township moving in a direction it didn't agree with in October of 2001 when the township zoning ordinance was changed to include wind turbine generators. The next month a wind turbine project proposal followed and the group started its fight.

Group members claim wind turbines don't belong in Eveline Township and if put there will likely result in negative ramifications for area residents.

A lawsuit, this recall campaign and demands for zoning ordinance changes have since been part of the battle.

The township is close to finalizing changes to the zoning ordinance. The planning commission will meet at 7 p.m., tonight, Wednesday, for a public hearing to review the changes. A public hearing to review changes to the master plan is expected to be scheduled for April 9.

Nancy Ferguson, a member of the preservation group and a recall petitioner, has said the group backs the township's efforts to amend the ordinance.

But the group isn't behind two members of the township board, Hayden and Skrzeczkoski. Parks said the group took aim at the board members because they have not represented township residents well.

She said Hayden has not properly executed his duties as township clerk and Skrzeczkoski has not listened to the people.

Gasoline prices on the rise in area

By JEREMY MCBAIN

Due to fears about a possible war with Iraq and a colder than normal winter mean Charlevoix residents and drivers — as well as the rest of the nation — are seeing higher prices at the pump and on their heating bills.

Last week gasoline prices jumped from about $1.49 per gallon for unleaded to about $1.79 per gallon at all of the gas stations in town. Additionally, people who heat their homes using oil or propane are dealing with higher bills.

"Supply and demand is driving oil prices. The issue is the lowest crude stocks in the nation in 25 years," said Ed Hoffman, director of petroleum marketing for Holiday Stations. The company has a gasoline station in Charlevoix on Bridge Street.

Hoffman added his company has been very conservative with rising prices, but it had to do so because the prices of crude oil have gone up.

"We simply have to pass it on to the consumer," he said.

Tim Underwood, general manager at Ellsworth's Farmers Exchange — who sells home heating oil and propane — added, "We have taken 30 cent increases in propane in the last 70 days. That is a huge increase."

He said this is all related to three things: First, the talk about a war in Iraq; second, an oil strike in Venezuela has cut worldwide production down; and third, the cold weather has been a big draw on propane.

Underwood also said the nation's crude oil supplies are very low and pointed out a report from

Well known Charlevoix businessman dies

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix lost a man who carved his way through winding rivers by canoe, down mountains with the edges of his skis and through the hearts of his friends and family with his unique personality and love.

Greg Smith

Greg Smith, 57, a Charlevoix resident and co-owner of Bahnhof Sport in Charlevoix, Petoskey, Breckenridge, Colo. and Park City, Utah died suddenly and unexpectedly Feb. 15 at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

Greg leaves behind his family, friends and a rich legacy of success in the retail ski gear industry.

He was born Jan. 1, 1946 in Fort Collins, Colo. and graduated from the University of Colorado where he met his wife, Lindy, a Gaylord native, on a blind date.

The two married in 1967 and moved to Charlevoix in the early 1970s after Greg served four years in Vietnam as a lieutenant in the U.S. Navy. After settling here, the couple opened their first Bahnhof across the street from the Perry Davis Hotel in Petoskey.

Greg's friend and right hand man, Gary Hunter, general manager of Bahnhof stores, described his partner as an outgoing guy.

"He was an optimist, he always had a positive attitude," Hunter said.

Hunter said his positive attitude helped build his family's retail ski business.

"I'll miss his confidence. He was always planning what to do tomorrow, where to open a new store, how to change the store, what new lines to pick — he was always talking about tomorrow," he said.

Over the 30 years that Hunter and Greg worked together, the two grew as business associates. But Hunter's most fond memories are not of massive business transactions, they are of times he spent laughing with Greg as he told stories.

"He would talk about today and dream about tomorrow," Hunter said.

Greg was always planning the next place to explore his passion for outdoor sports. He enjoyed rivers, the mountains and the ocean.

Hunter said Greg's favorite midsummer afternoon outing in northern Michigan was spent canoeing the Jordan River. He also took extended canoe trips out west and owned a company called So Many Rivers, a canoeing outfitter in Utah. Through this company he would take Charlevoix Boy Scouts on canoe outings down Utah's Green River.

Friends and family said he had no one favorite ski destination, but loved the challenge of helicopter skiing. In warm weather climates like the Cayman Islands you would find Greg underwater, scuba diving.

His next adventure was to Europe where he would spend part of this summer on a bicycling trip.

Greg was not only an avid outdoorsman and a great friend and co-worker he was also a dedicated father, grandfather and husband.

"He was a very supportive father. When we had an interest, he told us we could achieve anything, we just had to work for it and he would help us achieve that," his daughter, Sarah Smith-Bishop, said.

His survivors include his wife, Lindy Smith of Charlevoix; his son, Ryan Smith of Park City, Utah; his daughter, Sarah Bishop of Breckenridge, Colo.; his grandchildren, Parker and Garrett Bishop; his father, Owen Smith; his brother, Kent Smith; and his sister Sally Ward.

A service is scheduled for 3 p.m., today, Feb. 19 at Charlevoix's First Congregational Church located at 101 State Street.

Donations are being made in the name of Greg Smith to Charlevoix's Mount McSauba.

"The funds will help keep kids interested in an activity that has been a big part of our loves — he was always very interested in keeping kids active," Smith-Bishop said.

For information on this fund contact Rick Brandi, Charlevoix city treasurer, at (231) 547-3251.

OPINIONS

Some thoughts to ponder during the winter

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

Here are a few things to think about this winter.

Some of them have been driving me nuts. Don't think about them too hard though, it could be dangerous. The last one is just a little tip that is helpful to all our readers.

Reality shows

Every channel on television has a reality-type program every night.

There is a bachelorette trying to find a man, a bunch of people trying to "survive" in a remote locale, some kids trying to win a recording contract by singing horrible ballads and cameras that follow some famous person around all day.

It is enough to make a sane person insane. Especially those of us who live in small houses where the sound of the television can be heard in every room.

Since I have a wife, my control over the television and nightly entertainment is very limited. Add to this a sister-in-law who is staying with us temporarily and any thought of control disappears. To make matters even worse, the sister-in-law is addicted to these horrid shows.

The problem is, these shows are hits. People, like my sister-in-law, are watching them religiously. The television networks know this and are trying to pander to the public.

But, should they?

The government regulates things that are bad for us with various laws. There are laws against drinking alcohol under the age of 21, laws against minors smoking cigarettes, laws requiring us to wear helmets when we ride motorcycles, laws forbidding the use of drugs and so forth.

I believe these television shows are just as harmful. They are addictive, they suck away imagination and I can actually see intelligence points dropping as a person watches it.

Therefore, I am pleading with the television networks to end this insanity before the government realizes how bad these reality shows are for the nation's health. Please, for the sake of mankind, stop!

Bring back the "Muppets." Bring back "Three's Company." Bring back "Family Ties." You can even bring out more police and lawyer shows! Just bring back some creativity to television.

My wife keeps saying it is only a phase. I hope she is right for the sake of the country's sanity.

Parking

Why is it that some people just can't park a vehicle?

I see people with this problem all the time, especially at one of the local grocery stores. Instead of parking in a space on the property that is set aside for the temporary storage of a vehicle while the owner shops, these people park right next to the building.

Visit the Captain's Corner Plaza on M-66 and you will see what I mean. All along the outside of the grocery store you will find vehicles parked next to it, not in the parking lot.

You may say, "Perhaps these are people who are handicapped or pregnant and cannot walk from the parking lot to the store?" Regardless of the fact that there are special parking spots for folks who have these troubles, I have noticed a majority of these people are healthy, young Americans who don't even have a slight limp.

While you could call these people selfish and lazy, look on the bright side: at least they are not taking up a handicap parking space for those who need it.

I say, "Park in the parking lot people. It is only a little bit more of a walk to the store and by the looks of the average American diet, we could all use the exercise."

Your health

Lastly, since it is winter, I thought I would share this healthy tip sent over to me by the American Heart Association.

This organization is reminding people to take it easy when they are shoveling snow, as this activity can increase the workload on the heart. The cold weather also temporarily narrows blood vessels, which can be dangerous if your vessels are already narrowed due to fatty deposits.

The American Heart Association strongly recommends consulting with your physician before shoveling snow. The group further suggests calling 9-1-1 immediately if you experience these symptoms:

- Uncomfortable pressure, fullness, squeezing or pain in the center of the chest lasting for more than a few minutes.
- Pain spreading to the shoulders, arms or neck.
- Chest discomfort with lightheadedness, fainting, sweating, nausea or shortness of breath.

Have a safe and fun winter. Leave the shoveling to the neighborhood kids.

Poem reminds writer of sunnier, fun summer days

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

Uninspired, my mind is blank today as I glance out of my office window.

I see a white sky, white rooftops, white trees and bushes, and white lawns. It is February and we've had several inches of fluffy white snow along with 0 degree temperatures.

This afternoon a workman is coming to my house to shovel snow off my roof and knock down the crystal icicles that touch the ground by my front door.

All's quiet. No telephone calls, no doorbell ringing, no mail. I am wondering what to write for this week's Courier, when I receive this message on my computer from my 16-year-old niece, Claire, in California.

"Dear Aunt Edith, I wrote this poem for my English class and thought you might enjoy it."

ENDLESS SUMMER

The familiar white house

Sits there just like the summer before

The chairs on the porch aren't moved

The big yard welcomes us for another summer.

We gather our stuff

Making our way up the cobble stone walkway

Knowing when the door opens

Our little aunt will be there, smiling

Ready for hugs and kisses.

We feel at home, safe and welcomed

As we get situated our minds wander to all the fun we can have

Hanging out at the courts

Visiting the beach

Heading down town for the ever so mouth watering fudge

Enjoying the lake from a boat

Catching up with old friends

Going out for fish and chips

Taking endless trips down the sand covered mountain

Enjoying the festivals in the

Letters to the editor

Wind turbines don't belong here

Editor:

When will reason about wind turbines prevail?

Steve Hansen, when writing to a local newspaper in January about wind turbines in Eveline Township states, "In summary, wind turbines in Eveline Township bring some money to a few, quality of life and economic impairment to many, and all for an essentially insignificant change in the state and national energy scenario." This quote need not be focused on one township alone. All of us who live in the northwestern lower peninsula of Michigan need to look truthfully at the entire wind turbine issue.

Why are manufacturers trying to install wind turbines here?

There is a Federal Program that provides them favorable tax treatment. Customers who elect to pay a premium for "wind turbine" power through their regular power grids are doing so because they believe they are helping to solve energy and pollution problems with "Green Power." These well meaning people are not helping because it requires large numbers of wind turbines and more areas of consistent wind than we have in Northern Michigan to accomplish this. Even if our beautiful horizon were peppered with a thousand wind turbines they would provide approximately .5 percent or one two hundredth of the present generating capacity of Michigan. (When the wind blows)

Who is supporting wind turbines in northern Michigan?

The main beneficiaries are the wind turbine manufacturers who benefit from the government subsidies. Landowners, if their land qualifies, will be paid monthly to allow the wind turbines on their property. There are also local residents who fail to examine the specific facts and take the view that wind power must be good ("motherhood and American flag" view) without realizing that many places in the country are much more appropriate for wind turbines than northern Michigan.

Will the general populace benefit?

No. The general populace will be looking at and listening to huge (up to 400 foot) wind turbines day and night (lights). Migrating birds will be at risk of being killed. Our beautiful northern Michigan natural scenery and vistas will be spoiled. Tourism, our primary industry in northern Michigan will be negatively impacted. Individual property values will be reduced and municipality revenues negatively affected. All this because a federal energy program is being forcefed into an area where it does not belong.

What can we do to prevent the wind turbine manufacturers from forcing their way into our townships and counties?

Learn the facts. Spread the word about all of the negative impact that wind turbines will have on our beautiful countryside. Let your township officials know that you don't want wind turbines and don't accept the statement that the townships must provide for the wind turbines, because the state requires that townships must provide for any activity that is "reasonable and necessary." There is a lawsuit involving Bay Township right now that addresses that issue. It is abundantly clear to me and I hope to the courts, that wind turbines in northern Michigan are not reasonable or necessary.

Send back survey

Editor:

Charlevoix County recently mailed out a Community Survey to obtain views and opinions regarding a variety of growth and development issues facing the county. In large part, this survey consists of a number of photos and illustrations, which the recipient is asked to respond to, or rate. Other questions ask the respondent to what degree they would or would not support various development alternatives. Approximately 12,500 surveys were mailed to registered voters and non-resident property owners. I would like to thank those who have taken the time to complete and return the survey. Over 2,400 surveys have been returned so far.

I also encourage those who have yet to complete the survey to take a few minutes to fill it out and send it back in the return envelope provided. Your views are important in the development of the Countywide Land Use Plan and to the community in which you live and/or own property. In order for plans governing the future growth and development of the county to be successful, they must represent the views of the citizens who will participate in implementing them and/or those who will be affected by the respective plans.

For those who still have the survey, but have misplaced the return envelope, please contact the Charlevoix County Planning Department for instruction on how to return the survey.

All surveys need to be placed in the mail no later than Feb. 28, 2003. Thank you for your participation!

Niece's poem brings back summer memories

GILBERT

park.

These and many more memories of good times

Fill us with excitement

We finish unpacking

And go out to sit on the porch with our family

Sharing smiles of the year gone by

And watching the sun set over the lake.

In my mind's eye the temperature has risen to a mild 70 degrees, the sun is shining brightly, while youngsters on bicycles, parents pushing tricycles, joggers with head phones and visitors pulled by dogs, all parade by my front porch. The back door slams. The phone rings. "Where's Mom?" "What's to eat?" "Let's go swimming" "Want some fudge?"

Then poof they're gone!

I wonder if they had a good time? I gather a sock, a book, a toothbrush to mail back home to them. I wonder what special memories they will have of this summer?

Now I know. Thank you, Claire!

Beware of new telephone scam

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater said a scam is working the area concentrating on Charlevoix County senior citizens.

He said under the scam a telemarketer advises the resident they represent a government agency called "SCI" and the resident's credit card has been overcharged by $299.

The telemarketer further claims this government agency wants to return the amount to the citizen, but need their actual card number to do so.

Fortunately, the senior citizen contacted in Charlevoix County realized this was a scam and refused to give up her credit card number, Lasater said.

Since the telemarketer stated they represented a government agency, this complaint has been referred to the Federal Bureau of Investigations.

Church offers prayer for peace using many religions

Beacons of Blessing

By PASTOR MARY WILLIS
and by CARA HOCHHALTER
First Congregational Church UCC

Let us join hands in prayer with our Muslim and Jewish brothers and sisters throughout the world. As we seek peace with our Islamic brothers and sisters, let us join in prayer with them at the traditional five times a day.

The times are:

1) The dawn prayer is before sunrise.

2) The noon prayer is when the sun starts to decline.

3) The afternoon prayer is midway between noon and sunset.

4) The sunset prayer is right after sunset.

5) The night prayer is just before retiring to bed.

The Muslim tradition of "ablution" (washing their faces, their hands and arms to elbows, wiping their heads with wet hands and washing their feet to their ankles) is part of the daily prayer ritual and is performed before each prayer time.

Remembering this, let us wash our hands before our prayers, as a symbol of our willingness to wash away all negativity and become pure for this time with God. As we are able, let us kneel.

The following prayer joins the prayers of Muslims, Jews and Christians worldwide, all of whom have their roots with father Abraham in the Bible. Let us draw from that common heritage as we call on God in this prayer for peace.

"God is great. In the name of God, Most gracious, Most merciful. Praise be to God." (Muslim "Salat")

The Lord our God is one God. I will love the Lord with all my heart, with all my soul, and all my might (Jewish "Shema")"

And I will love my neighbor as I love myself. For Jesus said, 'Blessed are the peacemakers for they shall be known as the Children of God. Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you, and persecute you.' (Christian)"

I pray this day for the following leaders of the world whom I name: George W. Bush, Saddam Hussein, Ariel Sharon, Yasser Arafat, Indian President Abdul Kalam, Pakistani President Perez Musharraf, and for North Korean President Kim Yong Il. I also pray for men and women serving in the military, for al-Qaeda members, for peace in Colombia, for relief of AIDS in Africa, and for people in poverty and sickness worldwide."

I also pray for my church family (name it) and my own family (name members)."

May this prayer extend your love, O God. I call on your great Spirit to help me bring peace in our time. Amen"

Our sanctuary will be open at noon on weekdays for prayer.

City to give money to senior center

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix's city council voted unanimously to give the Charlevoix Senior Center $7,000 at its meeting Feb. 17.

The decision came two months after it rejected a request from the Charlevoix Area Community Pool for $6,974.

Third ward council member Shirley Gibson who voted against giving the pool money said two factors played a role in her decision to support the center.

She said Charlevoix County voters turned down funding request for the pool twice and the city cannot donate funds to non-profit organizations, like the pool.

However, she said former Attorney General Jennifer Granholm entered an opinion in 1999 that charitable contributions can be made by municipalities to organizations that benefit the elderly under the Activities or Services for Older Persons Act.

Council agreed that the center should receive the funds and voted unanimously in favor of the donation.

Earl Muma, director of the Charlevoix Senior Center was delighted with the decision. He said if council had voted to deny the $7,000 request, programs at the center would have to be cut.

The money is used to help fund the center's operating expenses. Its annual budget falls between $50,000 and $70,000.

Services it provides include: daily lunches, meals on wheels, wood carving, Action Club activities, computer lab time, craft classes, hearing aid clinics, cribbage tournaments, exercise classes and foot clinics.

"I don't know where else we would get the money right now to do it with, if we didn't get support from surrounding entities. We have to have money to keep the center open," Muma said.

He estimated that 60 percent of the people who use the center are city residents

This is the ninth year that the city of Charlevoix has given the center $7,000. Charlevoix Township increased its support this year from $1,000 to $2,000. Marion Township agreed to fund $500 and Hayes Township is considering increasing its $500 donation.

"Everyone I've heard from feels the center is doing a great job being here, available to the people," Muma said.

On Dec. 27, 2002 the Charlevoix County Commission approved allocating $15,000 in funds raised by the county's senior millage to the center. Muma said it was nice after two years of the millage being collected to see it benefit the center.

Because the center is independently operated, it does not benefit directly from the millage.

Muma hopes that in the future the center will operate wholly from the millage.

"I believe that's the way it should be. I think seniors who voted for it thought that is what it would do, benefit the center," he said.

This Northwest Michigan Works Service Center on Petoskey Avenue will be closing on April 1. (File photo)

Charlevoix residents who enjoyed the convenience of having a local Northwest Michigan Works office will now have to travel to Petoskey or Traverse City for the service.

Michigan Works, a subdivision of the Michigan Department of Career Development, has had a Charlevoix satellite office at 12705 US-31 since the spring of 1996. During that time it has provided free employment services that have helped many workers find jobs, partake in job training and in some cases go back to school.

But in spite of its important role in the community, the Michigan Workforce Development Board, decided in January to close three of four area satellite offices, including Charlevoix, April 1.

Bill Woodrow, operations manager of the Petoskey and Charlevoix Northwest Michigan Works offices, said the board based its decision on two factors — budgetary constraints and less use of the Charlevoix satellite office as compared to service centers in Petoskey and Traverse City.

"With changes in budget constraints at the federal and state level, our budget was reduced. And Charlevoix was considered underutilized when compared with numbers at the two centers," he said.

Michigan Works has four satellites and four full service centers in northwest Michigan. Three of the four satellites will be closed by June 30 including Mancelona, Benzonia and Charlevoix, which is scheduled to close April 1. The Kalkaska office has not been included in the cuts.

Woodrow said for some, the closing may make accommodating employment needs less convenient. While Petoskey is relatively close to Charlevoix, Woodrow said the distance will likely be an issue for some area residents who don't have transportation.

But he added that a wider range of services are available at the two service centers closest to Charlevoix — Petoskey and Traverse City. Services the local satellite does not provide that the centers do, include a Veteran's employment counselor and full-time Michigan Rehabilitative Services Counselor.

Those who currently partake in employment programs through the Charlevoix office will be able to transfer those services to the service centers.

Programs and services that are available at the centers include: the Michigan Talent Bank for resume postings, Work First program representatives and Workforce Investment Act (WIA) assistance.

The three full-time employees who currently work at the Charlevoix satellite office include a youth advisor, a Work First Career Advisor and a career advisor who helps administer the Workforce Investment Act and dislocated worker program will be relocated. Both the youth advisor and career advisor will relocate to the Petoskey center and Woodrow said efforts are being made to relocate the Work First career advisor to the Charlevoix County Family Independence Agency office in Charlevoix.

The Petoskey Michigan Works Service Center is located at 2225 Summit Park Drive. To contact the office call (231) 348-5150.

The Traverse City service center is at 1209 South Garfield Suite C. To contact the office call (231) 922-3700.

School board president will not run again

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix School Board will be led by a new president following the June 9 board election.

Board president Allen Telgenhof, 39, announced at the Feb. 10 school board meeting that he will not run for reelection in June.

"Allen has really been a great person to work with. He has done a great job leading the board through tough times and his leadership will be missed," Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Dr. John Sturock said.

Telgenhof has been a board member for eight years and president for six of those eight years.

During his time with the board he has been involved with several major projects including: construction of the new Charlevoix High School, fighting off a recall campaign aimed at five of the seven board members, hiring of a new superintendent, hiring of a new middle school principal and establishment of a sinking fund.

He has also served on the board's personnel, extracurricular and building and grounds committees.

"I've learned a lot. I've learned there are a lot of people, and not just school board members, who give a lot of themselves to education and the kids in this community. I knew that going in, both my parents worked for the school (in Clio), but you get a real sense of it as a school board member," Telgenhof said.

He said this sense of doing something of great value to the community is something he will miss but family comes first. Telgenhof is a father of four and he said he wants to devote more time to his family.

Telgenhof may no longer be a board member after June, but he won't be totally out of the loop. He plans to stay involved through his three children currently in the school system and fourth that will be there in two years.

He may even join the Parent Advisory Committee and will continue to be involved in sports programs.

"There are a lot of good people out in the community that are very interested in being on the school board. I felt like it was time to give someone else an opportunity," he said.

Telgenhof leaves vacant an open four-year seat and a one-year seat currently filled by newly appointed board member Bill Trubilowicz will also be open. Trubilowicz said he does plan to run again and will likely run for Telgenhof's open four-year seat.

The new board president will be selected by the board at its organizational meeting in July.

HEALTH

Dry eyes have a variety of treatments

Steven Voci, O.D.
'Your health'

Do you rub your eyes a lot? Do they feel dry and yet are teary or feel wet? Do your eyes burn and itch? Do you find yourself blinking excessively?

Should you be experiencing any or all of these problems you probably have dry eyes. This is a common condition that you do not hear much about, but one that is experienced by everyone at one time or another. Occasional dry eyes can be caused by a number of factors and we will address those as well as the more serious condition of chronic dry eyes.

Your eyes are covered and protected by a layer of tears. Tears are made up of three main components; water, oils and mucus. Glands in the eyelids secrete these components. Normally the amount and consistency of your tears is in balance and everything works, as it should. It is when the amount or consistency of your tears change that you experience the itching, burning and tearing of dry eyes.

As with everything else in the human body, age brings change. With age the quality of our tears diminishes. The normally thick, oily and mucus layers decrease and leave watery components behind. It is the function of the oily and mucus layers to make the eye surface slick and smooth allowing the watery component to slide across the eye. This allows the eye lids to smoothly slide over the surface of the eye.

As the oil and mucus layers diminish, the watery layer does not slide across the eye and dry patches develop on the eye. These dry patches irritate the eyelids and cause the eye to produce more watery tears in an attempt to relieve the dryness. This is why your eyes feel dry and watery at the same time. Burning and stinging are also related to the dry patches on the eyes.

There are many commonly prescribed medications that cause this same type of change in the tears of your eye, making them dryer. Birth control pills and hormone replacement therapy can cause dry eyes. Over-the-counter antihistamines can also contribute to dry eyes. Winter, with all its beauty can also cause changes that make your eyes dry. The lower humidity of the winter air in our homes, offices and cars can cause the eyes to be dryer as the dry air pulls water out of the tears.

The treatment of dry eyes is more for the patient's comfort rather than a cure for the condition. As much as some may wish, you cannot change your age. To stop taking prescribed medications to relieve your dry eyes is not a recommended option. And when have we ever been able to do anything about the weather, though using a humidifier can increase the humidity of our homes.

The most common treatment of dry eyes is the use of lubrication eye drops, called artificial tears. There are four general categories of Artificial Tears. The thin, watery type is not useful for most people. A medium thickness artificial tear is most useful for a wide range of patients with mild to moderate dry eyes. The thickest artificial tears are useful for severe cases, as their oily component is thicker. This can cause momentary blurring, but it clears quickly. The fourth type of artificial tears are ointments. These are for night use only as severe blurred vision occurs.

Liquid artificial tears can be used as frequently as needed by the patient. Should artificial tears not relieve a patient's discomfort, or their use interferes with the patient's routine, punctual plugs can provide the solution. Punctal plugs are placed into the tear duct opening. These plugs block tears from flowing down the tear ducts, keeping the tears in the eyes. Usually the tear ducts in the lower lids are plugged first to see if this relieves the condition. The tear ducts in the upper lids are plugged as needed.

Dry eyes are a common problem with several treatments to help the patient be more comfortable. Should you be experiencing any of these symptoms and you want relief, please speak to your eye doctor. Together you can determine the likely cause or causes of your dry eyes and the best treatment to provide you with relief.

Fire chief candidates narrowed to three

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

> Who: The Charlevoix Fire Department
> What is going on: Charlevoix Fire Chief Douglas Carver has decided to retire and the city is looking for a replacement.
> What does it mean: With only one local candidate in the top three, the city could hire a fire chief from outside the community.

Candidates for Charlevoix City Fire Chief have been narrowed from 33 to three.

On Feb. 14 a four-member professional committee interviewed seven candidates for fire chief at Charlevoix's City Hall.

The professional panel includes: current Charlevoix City fire chief Doug Carver; Norman Conklin, chief of the Resort-Bear Creek Fire Department; John Deming, chief of the Otsego County Emergency Medical Service; Ralph Soffredine, Traverse City Police Chief.

Of those interviewed, Paul Ivan and Jerry Meggison currently work with the Charlevoix department and five were from other communities. Joe Schwartzfisher, a city fire department shift commander who initially applied for the job decided not to try for the position.

The committee listed its top six choices and recommended three candidates it feels have the technical skills to do what is required of a fire chief.

Their first choice is Craig E. Miller of Wyoming, Mich. Miller is currently a captain/training officer with the Wyoming Fire Department. He has 20 years of experience in emergency services.

The panel's second choice is Alan D'Agostino, a lieutenant shift commander with the Pittsfield Township Fire Department in Ann Arbor.

Its third choice is Ivan a Charlevoix City Police officer since 1981 and a fire lieutenant with the Charlevoix Fire Department since 1997.

City council tentatively scheduled interviews with the three candidates for 5:30 p.m., Feb. 20 in council chambers at city hall. This is a public meeting and members of the community are invited to attend.

Council may select a new fire chief at this meeting or may reject any or all of the three recommended candidates.

Current chief Doug Carver has agreed to stay on until a permanent replacement can be found.

Carver, 62, announced his retirement in September. He served in public safety for 40 years in California, Petoskey and for the last 11 years, in Charlevoix.

The department currently includes a full-time chief, three full-time firefighters, 25 paid-on-call firefighters and 12 paid-on-call emergency medical technicians. The three full-time firefighters are Lyle Gennett, Bob Roloff and Schwartzfisher.

Charlevoix/East Jordan girls going to state

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix/East Jordan High School girls' ski team is heading to the state finals, following a third place finish in regional competition Feb. 13.

The girls' team scored 126, putting them in third place, behind Harbor Springs, in first, and Houghton, in second.

Coach Sue Miller said the feat was simply "awesome."

"It was within points with Boyne City," she said. Boyne City scored 126.5.

Miller added, "It has been a long time since the girls' team went from Charlevoix. They are a very deserving girls' team. They have been working hard."

Additionally, two members of the boys' team are going to the state finals. Miller said York Smith will be going to compete in the giant slalom and Taylor Fisher will be competing in the slalom.

As for the boys' team, they finished fifth in the regional competition with a score of 146. This takes them out of the state meet.

Rayders lose to Elk Rapids

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

Playing on back-to-back nights, the Charlevoix Rayders look like two different teams, first losing last Friday to Elk Rapids, 76-63, but recovering to beat Petoskey, 69-58 on Saturday.

"I don't know that I have an explanation for it," said coach Keith Haske. "One of our worst efforts followed by one of our best."

The Rayders jumped out early on Elk Rapids, taking a 9-5 lead on a Bryce Daly three-pointer early in the first quarter.

The first sign of trouble appeared just seconds later, however, when Charlevoix's 6 foot, 6 inch junior Scott Friske was whistled for his second foul and went to the bench with 4:24 left in the period.

With Friske on the bench, the Elks went on a 12-3 run to take a 17-12 lead with two minutes remaining. Charlevoix closed the gap to 19-18 at the end of the first quarter on back-to-back hoops by Spencer Bryan and Travis Smith.

The crowd was at a fever pitch in the second quarter as the Rayders inched to a four-point advantage at 25-21 on three straight points by Friske. However, Elk Rapids would not be denied and roared back with four points of their own to tie the game once again.

With three minutes left in the half, a David Shearer basket gave Charlevoix a 32-29 lead.

The Rayders were silent the remainder of the half, though, and the Elks scored the last

Volleyball team has good week of play

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders had a solid week of volleyball last week, winning a conference battle at Elk Rapids, and going 2-2 in the Lake Superior State University Invitational.

Charlevoix defeated Sault Ste. Marie, 25-22, 25-18; Oscoda 25-15, 25-15; but falling to Sir James Dunn of Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, 25-23, 25-19.

In quarterfinal play, the Rayders lost a heartbreaker to Bawating, also of Ontario, 25-23, 25-14.

For the tournament, Kari Way and Natashia Kleiber led Charlevoix offensively with 20 and 17 kills, respectively. Theresa Martin had 12 kills and nine blocks. Andrea Ruhlman added seven blocks.

Becca Kanine contributed 55 assists while Kleiber and Way keyed the defense with 37 and 30 digs, respectively.

Details on the Elk Rapids match were unavailable.

Charlevoix (20-14-4 overall, 6-3 conference) hosts Boyne City in Lake Michigan Conference action on Thursday, Feb. 20.

Schools over snow day limit for year

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Heavy February snow falls mean Charlevoix students will likely be in class longer this spring.

Classes are currently scheduled to be out for summer break June 12, but this could be pushed back at least one day. Michigan schools are allowed two snow days a year and Charlevoix schools were closed Feb. 4, 9 and 11 due to winter weather conditions.

While two days may seem inadequate for a northern Michigan school district, that is the state law. Before 1993 snow days were unlimited, but Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Dr. John Sturock said some districts in the state abused the rule and the state legislature capped it off at two.

In order to get state aid funding, which is based on a district's daily attendance rate, the third snow day and any others that may follow, will have to be made up. Sturock said extra snow days are most commonly tacked on at the end of the school year.

Students who wait and wait to get out in the spring sunshine will likely have to wait a little longer. But that isn't bothering some of them right now.

Senior Jake Pace said, "Right now it doesn't bother me, I guess at the end of the year it might."

Not only do the closings effect plans for spring, they also impact teachers and administrators daily schedules.

The closings disrupted MEAP testing at Charlevoix Elementary School and limited Winterfest activities at the high school.

Sturock said the cancellations do disrupt classroom activities, but that disruption doesn't weigh on the decision he makes each morning.

"We don't want to call school, but when you are talking about the safety and welfare of kids, you have to take into account all considerations," he said.

Each morning he, in conjunction with the school's transportation department, evaluates road conditions. Whether or not buses can safely navigate roads is one major factor that determines if school will be open. Sturock said about 70 percent of the students in the district ride the bus.

The outside temperature is also a factor.

He explained that if a student misses the bus, then they are standing at a bus stop in sub-zero temperatures which is a dangerous situation. The low temperature and high winds Feb. 12 were major contributing factors in the school closing decision.

Charlevoix Area Hospital to have winter fitness contest

Charlevoix County residents are being challenged by the Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation to exercise regularly with their new "Four Months of Frigid Fitness" program.

The program is designed to encourage participants to exercise regularly at an activity of their choice during these winter months, with the focus being on each person's ability to do their best.

Residents are encouraged to walk, ski, swim, snowshoe or a variety of other activities during these winter days for the fun of it, to improve their health and for the opportunity to win weekly drawings being held by the foundation.

Prizes are drawn each Friday for caps, cups, makeup cases, food and other miscellaneous items. At program completion in May, each participant is requested to mail his or her "log" to the Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation Office to be entered into a single big drawing for $100.

Anyone interested in the program may receive a log by signing up at the foundation office at 14634 Park Avenue, in Charlevoix, or by calling 547-8502.

To register, each participant either donates $1 or a canned good.

As individuals register, they will declare the city they are representing and that food pantry will receive the $1 or the canned goods.

A similar program was given last summer — 100 Miles in 100 Days — and more than $400 was raised for food pantries located in Boyne City, Charlevoix and East Jordan.

For additional information or to receive your "Frigid Fitness" packet, call 547-8502 or come by the foundation office at 14634 Park Avenue in Charlevoix.

Charlevoix succeeds in beating Petoskey

thirteen points for a 42-32 halftime lead.

Elk Rapids continued their torrid pace as after the teams traded baskets to begin the third quarter, the Elks scored the last 15 points of the quarter to take an insurmountable 60-34 lead.

In the approximate 11 minute blitz, Elk Rapids outscored the Rayders, 31-2.

Charlevoix was 1 for 16 in the third stanza.

Despite the deficit, Friske tried to single-handedly bring the Rayders back in the final quarter, netting 14 points in the first four minutes of the quarter and 19 total in the quarter.

The highlight came on a dunk off a baseline drive with 7:15 to go in the game that brought the Rayder nation to its feet.

Charlevoix outscored the Elks, 29-16 in the period, but it was too little, too late.

Friske finished with 24 points and 18 rebounds on the night. Travis Smith had eight points and Nate Teuscher added five assists and four steals.

The Rayders rebounded figuratively and literally the following afternoon with the win over the Northmen, dominated by the inside play of Friske and Drew Wright, making his first varsity start.

Charlevoix jumped out to a 6-0 lead and never trailed. The Rayders led by as many as 13 during the first half and 36-25 at the break.

In the second half, the Northmen were no closer than five points, trailing 55-41 at the end of three.

Wright led Charlevoix's scoring with 15 points while Friske added 14. Spencer Bryan and Bryce Daly had solid efforts off the bench, scoring 11 and nine respectively.

Charlevoix (12-3 overall, 5-3 conference) hosted Cheboygan in a non-league contest Tuesday, Feb. 18. Results were unavailable at presstime.

The Rayders also host conference leader Harbor Springs (7-1, 12-3) in a makeup game on Wednesday, Feb. 19.

Future of gasoline prices are uncertain

GAS

the chief economist of the American Petroleum Institute that argued this very thing.

But, at least one organization is saying this is not the case.

Jim Rink, AAA (American Automobile Association) spokesperson, said the supplies of gasoline are adequate to meet the current need.

"We are concerned that based on the current supply and demand situations that the most recent high increases may not be justified," he said. "There is adequate supply for the current demand. There are no shortages of gas."

Hoffman disagreed.

"AAA doesn't know what it is talking about," Hoffman said.

As for the high price of gas, Rink added the price increases we have seen in the state of Michigan have been higher than they have ever been in February.

"This is a new record," Rink said. "If prices stay this high, we could be in for more sticker shock at the pumps (this summer)."

Hoffman said, "It is so volatile, it is hard to predict."

However, he said the price of a barrel of crude oil is expected to tumble after any war in Iraq.

"Who knows what factors that will come into play that are hard to predict," he added.

Township recall petitions turned in under deadline

Hayden said the group's accusations are not true and he plans to fight back.

"I plan to vigorously oppose the campaign by telling the truth," he said.

Skrzeczkoski said he doesn't plan to mount a huge campaign of his own, but does want to get "the truth" out too.

"I'm going to go on with business as usual and go on running the township. But I will also get information to the voters because it's obvious this small group has misinformed people and flat out lied to them," he said.

The recall campaign process first started in mid-August of 2002 and signed petitions were turned in Nov. 25. But, due to misinformation given to the group by county clerk Jane Brannon, most of the signatures had exceeded the 90 day expiration period and were invalid.

Ferguson went to the county commission and asked that it reimburse petitioners $1,287.50 for costs incurred while it mounted the campaign.

The commission denied the request, but the group didn't give up.

The first name in round two of the Eveline Township recall effort was signed Dec. 26 and the last signature came in Feb. 9, within the required 90 day period. Seven petitioners collected the 203 signatures over a 46-day period.

"There was no problems getting the signatures, there seems to be support for the effort out there," Parks said.

The signatures were turned in Feb. 10 and the clerk's office has seven days to review them for correctness. Deputy Clerk Cherie Browe said the review includes checking to make sure addresses and not post office boxes are listed and that all signatures are dated before the petitions were filed.

After the clerk's office has completed this initial review, the petitions will be passed on to Hayden to cross check them with the township record. He has 15 days to do this. Because Hayden is the subject of the recall, the clerk's office will request he give them the township record to do the cross check on his petition. But he will check signatures on Skrzeczkoski's.

He said he plans to have the record to the clerk's office by Feb. 14.

Hayden and Skrzeczkoski will then each have eight days to review the signatures. Any written challenges of these signatures have to be submitted by March 12.

If everything is found to be in order, the county election scheduling committee will meet. The committee is made up of Sue Hobbs, representing the cities, David Simmons, representing the townships and Theresa Hart, representing schools.

The election scheduling committee is required to meet before March 19 to set a date for a special election. The election date has to be within 60 days of the committee's meeting.

Skrzeczkoski said an election will clear the air in Eveline Township.

"Put it back in the voters' hands. If they want someone else to do this, that's their choice," he said.

In the meantime, the preservation group will continue to keep a close eye on township business.

"We are continuing to work on the wind turbine generator ordinance process and whatever else comes up as regular business in the township. We plan to keep track of what is going on," Parks said.

Broadway hit Grease coming to Charlevoix

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The familiar sounds of "Greased Lightening," and scenes like the prom dance from the fun-filled musical Grease will be performed live, on stage at Charlevoix High School.

The school's performing arts class will bring the story of teenagers falling in love to life at two performances this weekend. The first show is scheduled to take place at 7 p.m., Feb. 22 and a second show is set for 2:30 p.m., Feb. 23. The school is located at 05200 Marion Center Road in Charlevoix.

Connie Ford, the performing arts instructor and director of the musical, said she and the students chose the show because they wanted to challenge themselves to use the new sound and technical equipment.

"We are trying to get ourselves upgraded on the stage," she said.

The cast includes over 60 students who have been seriously rehearsing since January. The program includes a live orchestra and a lot of dancing and choreography. The show's choreography took home an "excellent" at the district theater competition that took place in late January in Greenville.

While the choreography side of Grease has presented its challenges, Ford said another challenge has been maintaining the humor of the show without including material some may find objectionable. She said a lot of that material was omitted from the program.

"We are having a lot of fun with it and are looking forward to having the audience enjoy it," she said.

Tickets can be purchased at the school. Adult tickets are $5 and tickets for students and seniors are $3.

FIREBUG'S CONFESSION CLEARS HOTEL MICHIGAN FIRE MYSTERY

Pearl Johnson and Mrs. Cora Biossat Placed in Cells, Where Confessions Were Rung from Each — Johnson to Get $2,000 for Doing Job.

Charlevoix's most astounding sensation in many years has arisen like the Phoenix from the ashes of the Hotel Michigan fire of Saturday, March 10. Since the arrest and incarceration of Pearl Johnson on suspicion last Saturday night, developments have come thick and fast.

On the night of the fire, sometime before the sounding of the alarm, Policeman Howard, pacing his beat on Bridge Street, met the man, Johnson, coming from the direction of the Hotel Michigan and evidently under the influence of liquor. As his step was not steady, and the policeman, familiar with the symptoms and knowing that the man was probably on his way to his lodgings, was about to pass him without accosting him, when he noticed that the sleeve of his coat was covered with a whitish substance like snow, which at first blush did not seem strange to the officer, as Johnson in his inebriated condition might readily have fallen to the ground, which would account for it. But, bending closer as he passed, with a touch of idle curiosity, Howard saw very plainly that the white daub on the coat sleeve was not snow, but plaster.

This fact, unimportant in itself, proved however later the key to the mystery of the fire, as it was upon this slender thread of evidence and Johnson's suspicious actions during the fire that his arrest was based, followed by the confessions of the firebug and his principal and instigator, Mrs. Cora Biossat, which have made everything plain.

The first man to suspect Johnson was sheriff Charles Novak, whom the prosecuting attorney had called from his bed at the first tap of the alarm and who noticed that Johnson left several times during the progress of the fire to go back to the Hotel Charlevoix. Also that he left his fellows to go into the basement of the hotel alone, where one of the fire which was set was discovered later.

Johnson was to have guarded the remains of the blaze the following morning (Sunday), but Novak with his growing suspicions half-formed, induced the fire chief to put another in his place. Monday morning following, Novak took Johnson with him to the scene of the fire; went over the building and questioned him closely, but his evasive answers only strengthened the sheriff's convictions that there was "something rotten in Denmark."

On Saturday night, March 17, Sheriff Novak went to Johnson's rooms at the hotel, armed with a warrant for his arrest and found him ill in bed. He was however instructed to dress and was then promptly removed to the jail. On Sunday rumors were floating about that Johnson had confessed his guilt. These rumors were confirmed early Monday morning. People had hardly gotten the words, "I told you so" out of their mouths before they were upset again by the news of Mrs. Biossat's arrest and confinement.

As Johnson's confession implicated Mrs. Biossat, it was decided to take her into custody at once and as she was known to be returning from Detroit, where she had gone hastily on the morning after the fire to visit her daughter. Sheriff Novak took the early train south Monday morning, got off at Ellsworth and waited for the north bound train, which was due at about 9 a.m. He found Mrs. Biossat on board and waiting until they reached Phelps, he walked up to her and told her that she was under arrest. Though considerably agitated, she took it more calmly than the sheriff had expected.

On reaching Charlevoix, Novak put his prisoner in the bus and they were driven to the courthouse, where Mrs. Biossat was accommodated with a room on the second floor from where she was afterwards removed to the women's apartment on the ground floor.

Just as they had been able to wring a confession from Johnson, so now the sheriff and the prosecutor wormed the truth from the woman in whose misguided brain the germ of this revolting felony had long been nurtured, and who, by her own admission, substantiating Johnson's statements in every particular, was the arch-instigator of the crime.

From these confessions, it was learned that Mrs. Biossat had offered Johnson $2,000 and a set of bedroom furniture to set the fire of Nov. 23 of last year, in which the central portion on the second floor was badly gutted and the building narrowly escaped destruction.

At 11:45 p.m. Johnson says he entered the hotel and went to the linen room, where stood a two gallon can of gasoline. He kicked over the can and threw a match onto the oil soaked floor; then left for the fish hatchery where he was employed on the night shift.

Owing to the prompt alarm turned in by Dr. Armstrong, the hotel failed to burn down and only about $1,300 insurance could be collected by the arch-conspirator. So Johnson naturally didn't get a cent for his first attempt, nor even a stick of the promised furniture. In the eyes of his employer he had bungled the job.

But Mrs. Biossat was not so easily to be satisfied. She had started out with the determination to get that troublesome hotel off her hands and do it she would. She kept at Johnson continually to finish the job and finish it right, renewing her previous offer of cash and chattels and promising in her extremity almost anything that he cared to ask. Once or twice, the chief of police was called to the Michigan to investigate the mystery of an open door or a window, with hints of midnight marauders, camping within its lonely precincts, but investigation disclosed nothing.

These "wild goose" scares may have been the after-effects of the shock resulting from the capture of the bandit. Powers, or — who shall say — parts of a well laid scheme to spread the impression that the building was subject to nocturnal entries of unauthorized persons, covering and allaying suspicion for the grand coup that was to follow.

Finally, on the night of Saturday, March 10, dark as pitch and blustering with wind and wild flurries of snow, Johnson, heavily fortified with red liquor, essayed his second and last attempt. A two-quart bottle of gasoline had been smuggled into the basement of the hotel two or three weeks previous. Among his other preparations, Johnson had procured an almanac which he had consulted to find a night sufficiently dark and windy for his purpose.

At 11:50 p.m. he entered the basement of the hotel and set the fire back under the dining room floor, after thoroughly soaking the beams and under side of the flooring with the gasoline, and here the two quart bottle was found after the fire. This was the point where the plot failed. Had the blaze under the dining room floor been given any draft at all though open door or window, scarcely anything could have saved the building. But the fire flickered and smoldered in the dead air.

The other two points in the main office where the combustibles were planted about 10 feet apart. After doing his dirty work, Johnson staggered back to his rooms at the Hotel Charlevoix, too drunk to brush off the plaster he had gotten on his coat sleeve from the basement wall and it was then that Policeman Howard met him and noticed the damning evidence he carried with him.

Once again, Dr. Armstrong had proved a hoodoo to the conspirators. In fact, ever since the November fire, he had kept a careful watch of their movements about the building, of which Mrs. Biossat had often querulously complained to her accomplice.

The motives for the plot were not difficult to discover. The Michigan is mortgaged to the extent of some $15,000 held by local and out of town people. Mrs. Biossat was two years in arrears on a good portion of the interest, and had sustained heavy expense in the purchase of the Charlevoix Hotel and its refurbishing.

The insurance on the Michigan was about $20,000 on the real and $10,000 on the personal property or furnishings. Through a complete destruction of the hotel, the entire insurance, or at least a major part of it, might be applied to the liquidation of the mortgages and the payment of arrearages, leaving a considerable sum to be used for other purposes.

In this way also, the property on which Mrs. Biossat's "white elephant" stood, could be disposed of without danger of damaging competition, as it is not likely that with the building destroyed and a hotel doing business so near at hand any purchaser would attempt to erect another hotel building on the spot.

The work of collecting the evidence was done by sheriff and the chief of the fire department, who worked night and day on the case, assisted by the prosecutor. A deputy fire warden from the state fire warden's department visited the scene of the fire shortly after it happened but was unable to render material assistance in the case. The credit lies with our own officers solely.

At the preliminary hearing Monday before Justice Cooper, the bail was fixed at $10,000 each. There will be a second hearing on the case on Thursday, from which further developments may be expected.

The penalty for this offense is from 10 to 20 years in a state prison at hard labor, and the offenders may be sentenced on both counts, presenting the two fires. However, 25 years is generally considered a life sentence and it is possible that only the last count will be considered.

The confessions of both the guilty parties implicate a third person, whose name Prosecutor Lewis does not at this time care to disclose.

Island twinning, more on the budget and a fire chief.

City budget unveiled

This is the first report in a three part series that will look at the city of Charlevoix's proposed 2003-2004 budget. The series will lead up to the budget public hearing scheduled to take place at 7 p.m. March 17 in city council chambers at city hall.

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

In spite of big budget cuts at the state level, the city of Charlevoix has increased its budget almost $1 million, but things are tight and not everything included in the budget is a sure thing.

The city's proposed budget for 2003-2004 is $15.2 million, 34 percent of which will be directed to major capital improvements. In 2002-2003 its budget was $14.06 million.

"We'll have to be more creative in the future as we face additional revenue cuts but we are still able to do a lot of projects this year," city manager Mike Wiesner said.

While there are plenty of big projects on the city's plate this year, like the city hall renovation and airport parking lot and landscaping improvements, the city is also faced with definite and indefinite budget cuts.

The city's largest fund, the general fund took some major hits this year, including a loss of $60,000 when the marina fund was removed and converted to its own fund, a loss of $52,300 due to state budget problems and $47,233 due to the increased cost of fringe benefits and health care.

Its calculable losses to the general fund total $159,514. However, it is looking to levy an additional .49 millage for rubbish and waste removal that will bring in $83,265 making the net loss to the general fund $76,249.

Only one candidate left for fire chief

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Paul Ivan was the only man left when it came time for Charlevoix's City Council to interview candidates for the fire chief's position.

Candidates for the position were narrowed from 33 to 3 on Feb. 14 by a four-member professional committee that interviewed seven of the top applicants at Charlevoix's City Hall.

Craig E. Miller, a captain/training officer with the Wyoming Fire Department dropped out of the running early this week and Alan D'Agostino, a lieutenant shift commander with the Pittsfield Township Fire Department in Ann Arbor, dropped out last week.

Their decision to pass up the second round of interviews with city council left Charlevoix's in-house candidate, Ivan, 45. But members of council feel regardless of how they found Ivan, he is the best man for the job.

Ivan has been a Charlevoix City Police officer since 1981 and a fire lieutenant with the Charlevoix Fire Department since 1997.

"He has the hacking of the entire community. I hate losing him as a police officer, but he will make an

Hobby becomes art

Kathie Briggs shows off some of the dolls that she has made. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

Tucked away in the woods off Lake 26 is a quiet workshop where Charlevoix resident Kathie Briggs is busy creating ornate, decorative dolls.

The dolls aren't something you find in toy stores, each has a meaning or personality that reflects some of life's greatest and most trying moments.

After 20 years of vacationing in Charlevoix, Briggs, 54, and her husband Bill moved here permanently in June of 2001 from the Novi area.

"I've loved Charlevoix since I was a little girl," she said. "This is a wonderful place to be creative."

Kathie started making dolls and doll clothes as a child but stopped after high school. While she wasn't working on dolls, her passion for arts and crafts was still strong and she would often sew and make rococo Christmas tree ornaments, rag dolls and soft Santas for family and friends.

Then, five years ago, after wandering around art fairs and galleries and bumping into wonderful art dolls she found her way back to her childhood hobby.

"I would just stare, they are so beautiful," she said.

Bill encouraged her to stop staring and start making them herself.

Kathie said she thought, "My 'Grandmother of counseling' to retire

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

After three decades working in education Gayle Gennett, "the grandmother of elementary school counseling," is ready to retire and test her acting skills.

"I love acting and I love counseling so it's (retiring) hard, but it's all therapeutic," she said.

Gennett, 53, recently submitted her retirement notification after 27 years with Charlevoix Public Schools.

She started out in 1974 as the Charlevoix High School counselor moving here from Ann Arbor, where she taught high school art classes.

Her decision to make the move was rooted in Ann Arbor where she said she came across kids that struggled with friendships, or were in abusive situations, and felt compelled to do something.

"I found myself spending a lot of time with these kids as an art teacher. I decided I was ready for a career change," she said.

That change would be from art teacher to counselor. At 23, she went back to school and finished a master's program in secondary counseling at Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti.

She finished the program in just one year and shortly after, one of her professors received a phone call from the Charlevoix School system inquiring about a high school counselor. The professor recommended Gennett, one of only two female graduates in the 27 person secondary counseling program.

In 1985, after 10 years counseling at the high school, she broke new ground again as one of the first elementary school counselors in the state when she accepted a new position at Charlevoix Elementary School.

At that time, there were only eight elementary school counselors in Michigan.

"I moved to the elementary school because I felt I could help more families earlier and do more prevention," she said.

While at the elementary school she has helped countless students and families and also added a myriad of projects to her list of accomplishments. Gennett established the first K-Kids Club in the state — a branch of Kiwanis International. She also established the longest running Conflict Manager's program in the state.

"Gayle is a child advocate, she would do anything to make kids lives better. We will really miss her," elementary school principal Dick Swenor said.

In spite of her many accomplishments and the fact that she will miss the students and staff, Gennett knew this would be her last year. Her retirement will give her time to spend with her family and to pursue her many interests.

"I'm still young enough to do different things. Life is too short — I want to go on and do more," she said.

In just over a year and a half, her husband, Lyle Gennett, a shift commander with the city of Charlevoix Fire Department, is planning to retire and join his wife. He will continue with his computer repair business.

She is a mother of two girls, Mindy Gennett and Christy Kaczynski, and a grandmother of a grandson and has a granddaughter on the way.

But her retirement won't be spent at home knitting for grandchildren or baking cookies, Gennett plans to travel, seek out the rest of her birth family who she met last summer and pursue her acting career.

She has taken acting classes at North Central Michigan College and three years ago performed in the Dickens play at Bay Harbor. Earlier this year she was featured in a commercial shot in Charlotte, N.C. and plans to return there for more acting opportunities.

"Now I'm getting back to what I started out doing — back to my first love," Gennett said.

She added that she is hoping to land a cooking show or more TV commercials. And you never know who she'll meet that could jumpstart her career in September, when she will be in Los Angeles at the Golden Globe awards.

The counselor's position has not yet been posted, but Swenor said the school is hoping to hire a replacement.

Charlevoix Elementary School counselor Gayle Gennett will retire this year. She often spends her lunch with students like those shown here. They are from left; Anna Way, 7, Gayle Gennett, Katie Paramo, 7 and Shelby Isaac, 8. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

Remember to be a real fan this March

EDITORIAL

Sports excitement is in the air in Charlevoix as we head into March.

During this time of year, the winter nights are shattered with the cheers of fans as they root for their favorite high school basketball team as they battle their way to the state finals. It is a time called March Madness or basketball tournament time.

In Charlevoix, many people can be seen around town wearing "Rayder" gear that supports the Charlevoix High School team. These same people can be seen attending all of the games, cheering on the players and celebrating their victories.

But, in all this passion, sometimes fans take it too far and act in a disrespectful way.

This is the fan that screams obscene words at players, coaches and referees; is insulting to fans of the opposing side; is physically aggressive with those around them and just plain acts like a jerk.

This type of fan does not understand the true meaning of these sports games. They are really intended to teach the students teamwork and the fun of athletics. No game is a life or death matter — after all, it is just a game in the end.

As another basketball tournament comes around, we should remember these words spoken before every high school sports game: "The athletes in the Lake Michigan Conference would like your support and commitment to sportsmanship. We understand this to include respect, responsibility and restraint. It is citizenship in action. We ask you as parents, fans and officials to join us in making this a positive experience for all involved."

If you are a rude fan and these words confuse you, perhaps this will make it more clear: According to Charlevoix athletic director Jim Kanine, if a fan acts unsportsmanlike they will be asked to leave the gym. If they do not leave, the police will escort them out the door.

Further, if you see anyone acting in a disrespectful way at a high school sports game, Kanine asks that you let him know who it is right away so he can deal with them promptly.

It is OK to root for your team. It is not OK to be rude about it.

Historic Foster Boat Works gets million dollar upgrade

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

People who ask me "what's new" in Charlevoix will be interested to learn that the condo building called Foster Boat Works has been completely upgraded to the tune of one million dollars!

The entire 100-year-old building has been restored to conform to all current codes. It has a new roof, new shingles, new decks, new boilers and heating system, all new Pella windows and doors.

According to manager, Tom Sheridan, "This project was done right! Only the finest materials were used and the best tradesmen employed. There was no 'cutting corners'."

The project was started in 1999 by three elected board members of the Foster Boat Works Association, Mike Smith, Barb Alberts and John Mills. At that time the estimated cost was expected to be a million dollars, but Smith had to return time and again to the board saying, "Here's the picture, we need more money!"

Smith assures us that the landmark building on Ferry Avenue overlooking Lake Charlevoix will last another hundred years.

Originally built in 1892, it is now the oldest commercial structure in Charlevoix.

Originally built by the D.M. Ferry & Co. to warehouse seeds — mostly peas and beans grown as a good cash crop by Charlevoix farmers — the company hired local girls at that time who were pleased to make $8 to $10 a week.

The building itself is still considered to be an architectural masterwork. The massive rough hewn wooden beams are joined by wooden dowels. It was built to withstand any hurricane or tornado that nature had to offer.

After the Ferry Seed Company moved its operation to Rochester, Harry Foster and William Wallace bought the building in 1940. Here the Foster Boat Works Company manufactured wood products, including small, flat bottom, plywood rowboats and oars for the U. S. Government, during World War II.

The army's plan was to use the 16 man boats to cross the Rhine River into Germany, but when the Germans neglected to blow up the Remagen Bridge as expected, these boats were not needed.

By 1953 Foster Boat Works folded and Robert Schleman purchased the building for his Stream-Eze Company where they successfully manufactured fiberglass arrows, bows and fishing rods. At its peak the company employed 300 people.

Later the structure stood empty, but instead of being torn down, it was rescued by two developers, Dick Georgi and Arch Wright. They turned the three story building into a 36 unit condominium. Each condo had a Jacuzzi, hot tub and fireplace.

Today there are 57 units and original prices have doubled.

Adjacent to the Foster Boat Works Condominium is a marina developed by the Lundy-Heck group. Eric Kammerman is manager of these private boat slips. The two groups have a cross easement for the parking lot and Club House.

I clearly remember when the condominium project was first developed, my friend, the late Alyce Lesser, was financially involved. It was her suggestion to name the condominium Foster Boat Works because she felt that it reflected a nostalgic era — more old Charlevoix.

She told me, "We have enough places named 'Lake this' and 'Harbor that.' " I agree.

Letters to the editor

Volunteer initiative a good idea

Editor:

A recent initiative proposed by our state leadership requiring all public high school students to perform service within our community is both an outstanding and necessary graduation requirement.

Today, the connection between our rapidly changing communities and our schools needs to be strengthened. Students should experience community involvement in order to realize the connection between their education and the future responsibilities they will inherit as citizens (and contributing members of our society). This type of experience should be viewed as a personal growth/awareness opportunity and should not be exclusively required by those students excelling in the classroom participating in organizations like the National Honor Society or student council.

In the recent struggle for education dollars this is a program that could be creatively organized through a variety of partnerships. For example, today's students are able to share computer competencies with those seeking a venue to learn about these information technologies and/or those looking to educate themselves in order to qualify for jobs (Michigan Works).

Our students are capable of working with our public libraries promoting literacy programs and demonstrating special resources available at these locations.

We should require our students (not just administrators/teachers) to interview community leaders to arrange for job-shadowing opportunities and to organize the next career day at school.

Opportunities for students to work with our local governments could potentially be arranged in order for students to understand the complexity of our challenges and work toward evaluating alternatives and proposing solutions to real-world problems.

Community involvement is crucial to building the bridge between learning and applying knowledge in a practical context. The type of community service envisioned should go well beyond pushing a broom down the sidewalk for an hour after school. We must challenge and reward students participating in community service programming because as citizens, we are all responsible for supporting and building our community.

Moreover, the momentum we create will go a long way to overcome the sense of entitlement often expressed by students entering today's world as young adults. It is time to change the current paradigm from "I expect/should have" to "I will work toward understanding and becoming part of the solution."

Help the animals

Editor:

Animals depend on us.

If you are mean to animals, they will turn on you and they won't trust or listen to you. They could even kill a person if they got angry enough.

People in the U.S.A. have been getting killed from especially dogs and cats that have been mistreated. You could get arrested for animal cruelty and could get sent to prison.

Before you even get a pet make sure you like it and have enough time and money for it.

Stay in school

Editor:

All sixth graders should be in school. They will be able to read books when they come to school. They also need to be able to write or they won't get a job.

Kids need to sit still or they could be sent to the "Focus" room. You can meet new people at school and learn how to get along with others. You will have to work with many people after graduation. It will help you to not get fired on your job.

Do not tease others

Editor:

I think kids should not tease people because of their looks. It hurts people's feelings if people tease them because of their looks. If you tease them you are missing out on a good friendship. If you think that they're ugly, they are probably nice. If you tease the person they might tell on you and you would get in trouble.

Video games not harmful

Editor:

Video games are not a waste of time because they build eye contact and thinking power. They are fun on a rainy day when you are bored, or for something to do.

Video games are so exciting that you want to play them over and over again. Video games are also fun to play with friends.

Police remind parents of hazards to young drivers

The Charlevoix City Police is reminding parents of new drivers, that the first year of licensed driving is the most hazardous in a young driver's lifetime and it is the most hazardous for their peer passengers.

In the U.S., 16-year-olds have almost 10 times the crash risk of drivers ages 30-59 and almost three times the risk of older teenagers.

Teens make up only 68 percent of the driving population, but they are involved in 14 percent of all fatal crashes, according to government statistics. Crashes involving young drivers usually are single-vehicle, run-off-the-road crashes that are the result of driver error and/or driving too fast for weather and road conditions.

Government statistics also show that nearly 70 percent of crashes involving 16 to 17-year-old drivers occurred with three or more peer passengers, compared with 30 percent of crashes when the same-aged driver was alone in the vehicle.

Award to be presented in honor of Kelsey Barnard

The Charlevoix High School Athletic Department announces a new athletic award, the Kelsey Cup Memorial Award, in memory of Kelsey Barnard.

Barnard was a freshman at Charlevoix High School during the 2001-2002 school year. He competed in soccer, skiing and track.

An excellent student-athlete, Barnard had a passion for skiing. He helped the Rayder boys ski team to a conference championship and second place finishes in the regional and state finals. He was honorable mention all conference giant slalom, all regional team and all state boy's first team.

This is the first time that an athletic award has been given in honor and memory of a Charlevoix High School student. Barnard died in an automobile accident in August 2002.

The Kelsey Cup Memorial Award will be presented to a male Charlevoix High School skier during a special athletic assembly to take place at 9:25 a.m., Feb. 27 in the high school auditorium.

New telephone number for Goodwill's Workers on Wheels

Goodwill Industries of Northern Michigan now has a toll free number for its Workers on Wheels car donation program.

The new number will allow individuals from anywhere in northern Michigan to call to donate a car or receive more information about the program. The number is (877) 448-3449.

"Our goal in adding this number is to make it easy to remember and painless to call us. We are always seeking car donations to further our Goodwill's mission to help working families stay on the job. We have a local committee working in most localities in Northern Michigan to help us get vehicle donations and prioritize families that are seeking help, but we realize this program is not very visible so making the connection between the charitable thought and the right number to call is something we wanted to address," David Abeel, program manager, said.

Donations qualify as a charitable gift and have a tax benefit.

Award winning singer gives Charlevoix show

Grammy Award winning singer songwriter, Barbara Bailey Hutchison will bring her songs and wit on Tuesday, March 4 to the Charlevoix High School auditorium for a special concert for the Kindergarten through fourth graders.

While accompanying herself on guitar and piano, she offers music and stories that serve to inspire and amuse. There is much interaction between Hutchison and her audience, as she brings young and old together to sing and clap, laugh and learn.

The many awards she's received document her success as an entertainer.

The most prestigious award came when she received the music industry's highest recognition, the Grammy Award for "Best Musical Recording for Children."

Additionally, colleges and universities across the nation have voted her "Best Performance — Acoustic," "Best Female Performer" and "Best Musical Act."

Hutchinson has released eight "grown up" CDs and eight CDs of children's music — three of them nominated for the coveted Grammy Award. Other highlights of her resume include the many jingles she has sung for McDonald's, Hallmark Cards, Heinz and others.

While these may give her voice national recognition, she will tell you this isn't the most rewarding part of her career. She's happiest on stage, joking with the kids, delighting in their giggles as she sings, "It's hard to brush your teeth with a cat in the sink."

The performance begins at 9:30 a.m. For more information, call 547-3226.

Glenn Miller Orchestra to play at annual Symphony

The Glenn Miller Orchestra will be playing at this year's annual Symphony on the Green.

"This year we are very excited to present the Glenn Miller Orchestra. We see this event continuously evolving, and this year, we are stepping back in time to the Big Band era," Event Chair Amy Lalewicz said.

The concert will be at 8 p.m. on Friday, July 11 at Dunmaglas Golf Course in Charlevoix.

"We anticipate a big response to this concert and will begin to sell tickets in mid May," Patti Barraw, event coordinator, said.

In years past Symphony on the Green proceeds went toward the Charlevoix Area Hospital Expansion Project. With the expansion a reality, this year's proceeds will purchase much needed equipment for Charlevoix Area Hospital's Surgical Department, support the Beginning Strings Program administered by the Crooked Tree Arts Council, sponsor a fish for the Red Cross' Great Northern Fish-In and underwrite the Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation's Community Outreach Programs.

Symphony on the Green has changed venues every couple of years, varied the type of music being offered, and has brought the community a variety of performers.

For two years the Traverse Symphony Orchestra offered classical music featuring Van Cliburn competition finalists. The next two years familiar Broadway tunes played by the orchestra and sung by retired Broadway performer and tenor, Mark Planner were presented.

Symphony on the Green is a project of the Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation's Development Council Community Relations Committee.

For more information, please call Patti Barraw at the Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation Office 547-8685.

Bids being sought for debated island center

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Plans for a new health center on Beaver Island are being put out for bid, but controversy has surrounded the process up to this point.

Some islanders have been questioning why the center's board is paying almost $120,000 to a consultant on the project for 18 months of work, why the island's Emergency Medical Services does not have a location in the new center and even if a new center is needed.

"I don't think we need it. I think they could utilize space better," Krys Lyle, island resident said. "All of this has just been sort of thrown at us. All of this has been done without knowledge of most islanders."

Lyle said a consultant that was picked for the process was done so without a bidding process and at a forum on the center the Beaver Island Health Care Board would not answer questions on the project other than the new center's architecture.

She added, the board has said it sent out a survey on a new medical center to residents, but she does not know of anyone on the island that received one.

"Something strange is going on," she said.

But, according to Don Spencer, a member of the board in charge of the project, there have been many opportunities for residents to ask questions and the new center is needed.

He said the process to design a new facility has been very intensive and took about a year. He said a number of public meetings were given.

"The current health center was built in 1951 or 52, it is way smaller than what we need," he said.

Spencer said the new center will be about a half-mile out of St. James on King's highway — the current center is located in Saint James, across from the community school — and will be about 7,600 square feet, much larger than the current building at 2,000 square feet.

The new facility will house medical care personnel and a dentist. He added there is also room for specialists who visit the island.

Board president Connie Wojan added space is the real change in the facility. She said it is this extra space that will allow the new center to offer future services, such as more room for a pharmacy and a lab.

Construction on the building is going to be paid for from a $1.5 million grant given to the island by the state.

"It has got to pay for the whole thing, there is no leeway," Spender said.

However, one item the current center has is not going to be included in the new center — room for the island's EMS. This has caused some concern among some island residents and EMS employees.

Spencer said part of the current facilities 2,000 square foot space is used up by the EMS. For the new facility, he said the board originally had hoped it would house two amhulances and provide working space.

However, he said it turned out that this would cost a significant amount of money to construct. So, because they are under a separate funding source than the health center, the board asked St. James township if it would be willing to keep the EMS at its current location.

He added, an enclosed bay that will allow ambulances to back up and drop off patients has been planned for in the new center.

Joe Moore, an employee of the EMS, said the relationship between the health center board and the EMS has been better in the past than now, due to this issue.

"When we got word of the project, we were asked for our input and shortly there-after, dropped from the plans," he said.

Moore said while he accepts that EMS will not be a part of the new plans, it saddens him that it was not really included in the planning process for the new center.

The process on a new center started in 2000, when a report was issued that the island needed a new health center.

At that time, state funding for new health centers on Beaver and Mackinac islands was earmarked. But, the governor at the time, John Engler, cut Beaver Island out of the plans.

After lobbying by islanders and legislators, the funding to the island was restored in mid-2001.

Spencer said, the board then hired a consultant — Arlene Brennan — to figure out what the island needed. A report by Brennan said the island needed a facility about 7,000 to 7,500 square feet.

As for the land, Spencer said about 5.5 acres were donated to the center. While the new center would take up a portion of the land, he said senior housing is being studied for the rest of it.

Since the board had land and money for a center, he said it decided they needed to get working on it and members hired Brennan on an $120,000 18 month contract to oversee the process of designing the building and other issues related to it.

He added bids were not asked for because the board was already aware of Brennan's qualifications and she was recommended by Munson Hospital, among others.

Brennan is a self-employed consultant from Traverse City. She has a master's of science degree in nursing from Wayne State University and a master of health services administration degree from the University of Michigan.

Brennan has worked on project designs for Munson Medical Center, the Michigan Nurses Association, West Front Primary Care in Traverse City and others. Before striking out on her own, she was employed by Health Management Associates, Inc. of Lansing, a company that helps health organizations design, plan and implement new services.

As for the money she is being paid, Spencer said it was appropriate. His sentiment was echoed by Wojan.

"You have to keep in mind that Arlene's (Brennan) salary is just salary. There are no benefits and no travel time," she said. "We had to pay what it would cost to get her. It is really difficult, no matter what you pay, to talk someone into coming to Beaver Island, because it is so difficult to get there."

After Brennan was hired, designs for a new building were created and a bid package put together. Spencer said he expects bids to come in by March and construction to begin in April, with completion in a year and occupation by January of 2004.

Council talking tough on town's turkeys

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Some city of Charlevoix residents have had it with their feathered neighbors, the wild turkeys, and city council is attempting to alleviate the problem.

"I am tired of going out on my porch and having it full of crap," June Cross, a Park Avenue resident, told city council at its meeting Feb. 17. "If I wanted to be on a farm I would live in the country. They don't belong in the city."

She said other Park Avenue residents have also complained about the turkey population in the city. Mayor Gahe Campbell agreed that there is a problem and said the turkeys are destructive, often eating whatever flowers and plants they can get their beaks around, ruining landscaping.

"They eat anything in sight," he said.

Cross asked council to contact the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) and have the turkeys removed.

Second ward council representative Karen Campbell made the motion to "get rid of the turkeys tomorrow, or yesterday." Her motion was seconded hy third ward council person Shirley Gibson and supported by the rest of council.

The city's request was passed along to Brian Mastenhrook, a wildlife habitat specialist with the Gaylord post of the DNR.

Mastenbrook said he will set up an appointment with City Manager Mike Wiesner to explore the city's options.

He said in evaluating the situation he will look at the number one reason turkey populations come to cities — food.

"People encourage it, then more and more come and it becomes a problem," Mastenbrook said. "You have to stop people from feeding them and I don't know if people are willing to do that."

He said if the feeding does stop, they'll likely move on. However, with turkey populations that have grown up here, as opposed to those that come for the winter, it won't be easy.

Other options the DNR may explore include rocket netting and drop netting. He said rocket netting requires a hig, open space and isn't easy in a city while drop netting tends to not work well because you have to get the birds to go under the net.

It is not known at this time how much any of these plans would cost or who would pay for it.

EPA to remove material at closed plant

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) will be in Charlevoix in early March to finalize hazardous waste material removal at Hoskins Manufacturing.

Hoskins is located at 5339 M-66 North in Charlevoix's Marion Township.

According to on-scene coordinator Jeffrey Kimble of the EPA's Grosse Isle office, in September the agency moved through the first stage of removal. During that stage workers characterized the material and lined up drums and tanks of hazardous waste to be loaded onto a disposal truck.

Abandoned hazardous wastes that were discovered include: acids, caustics, solvents, lubricants and metal wastewater treatment sludge.

He said there is currently no imminent danger to the community as the site is fairly well secured and all of the wastes are inside the building.

Now the agency's plan is to further safeguard the public by going back and moving forward with the disposal part of the project. Kimble estimates this taking place during the first week in March and said it will take about 1-and-a-half weeks to complete.

Completion of disposal will mark the end of the EPA's involvement with the Charlevoix facility.

"Then the property will be clear of hazardous materials," he said.

However, this does not mean environmental problems at the Charlevoix site are clear. The Michigan Department of Environmental Quality is continuing its investigation of groundwater contamination at the site.

Currently the EPA's clean-up cost of $290,114 is being paid for out of the federal government's Superfund budget. Kimble said cost recovery is being investigated through the EPA's legal department.

But cost recovery from Hoskins won't be easy because representatives of the company claim the company has no money.

The Charlevoix site was built in the 1960s and was shut down Nov. 13, 2001. In May of 2002 Hoskins auctioned off equipment at all of its locations including sites in Mio and Hamburg in order to settle the debt it owed its lenders.

In a letter written by Holly Safranoff of Evans & Luptak, PLC, representing Hoskins parent company Armada Corporation, she states that Hoskins admits environmental compliance action needs to take place at each of its sites but, the money just isn't there.

"Hoskins has no funds other than those being used to liquidate the company and pay the bank (Comerica Bank)," she wrote.

But the lack of funding from Hoskins hasn't stopped the EPA from doing what it feels is necessary.

In requesting funding for the project from William E. Muno, director of the Superfund Division, Kimble stressed the removal work that needed to be done is time-critical.

"The actions are necessary in order to mitigate threat to public health, welfare and the environment posed by the presence of uncontrolled hazardous wastes abandoned at the Hoskins Manufacturing site," Kimble wrote.

Council votes against resolution opposing war

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

In a close vote Charlevoix's city council denied a request by local anti-war activists to pass a resolution opposing U.S. involvement in a war with Iraq.

A group of Charlevoix residents representing the Cities for Peace campaign made the proposal at the council meeting Feb. 17. That same night another group of affiliated activists requested the same resolution be made by Petoskey's city council and were also turned down.

"We're not having much luck around here," Ellis Boal, a Hayes Township resident and a representative of Cities for Peace, said.

But he said the final vote doesn't necessarily mean members of these councils back a U.S. strike against Iraq.

In Charlevoix, two members of council voted in favor of passing the resolution and those that didn't said they don't necessarily support a possible war.

Council members who voted against the resolution included first ward councilmen Norman "Boogie" Carlson and Bill Haggard and third ward councilman Sherm Chamberlain. They claim regardless of their personal opinions, it isn't council's place to pass resolutions dealing with national issues and that any vote they pass wouldn't fairly represent the opinion of their constituents.

In spite of Carlson, Chamberlain and Haggard's decision to keep their opinion about the war to themselves, the mayor, Gabe Campbell who doesn't vote, was vocal about his stance.

"We belong to the United Nations and should listen to the U.N. and not be a cowboy, that's my personal belief and I believe that pretty strongly," he said.

Third ward council person Shirley Gibson made the motion to support the Cities for Peace campaign. She said if the U.S. does get involved in a war with Iraq, it will affect everyone at some point in the future, making the issue relevant locally. Second ward council person Karen Campbell supported Gibson's motion.

Boal, spoke at the meeting and urged council to support the effort, because, while it is a federal issue, any war with Iraq would have a local impact. He said Charlevoix will be directly affected by the trickle down effect of money going to the war effort and not to needed domestic programs like schools and the Homeland Security program and will take local officials' attention away from issues of local concern.

In response to council members who claim they have not had input, Boal disagrees. He said three well attended peace rallies in Petoskey are evidence of local opinion.

But city manager Mike Wiesner, who spoke as a Charlevoix resident, disagreed with the Cities for Peace representatives. He said he votes in city elections for people he expects will address issues relevant to the city — not for people who address national issues.

Aside from the opinion that council members would be overstepping their seat, the city's legal representative Bryan Graham cautioned council in taking a stance.

He said any resolution they make is a legally non-binding expression of opinion on a federal issue which could lead to a myriad of requests by the community for council to take similar stances.

Boal said the final 3-2 vote against passing the resolution was disappointing, but it hasn't squashed the Cities for Peace effort.

Restaurant reopens under new owner

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
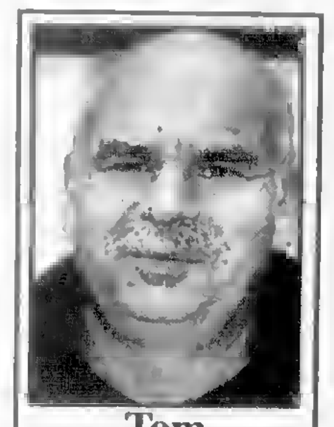
Staff Writer

The doors at Nanny's Motel, Restaurant and Lounge have been closed for a month and will reopen soon under new ownership.



Tom Brown

East Jordan resident Tom Brown, 54, bought the business Feb. 19 from his friends, Charlevoix residents Sue and Mike Barnard. After nine months working on the change of hands the restaurant and motel will reopen today, Wednesday, Feb. 26.

Brown is no stranger to Nanny's or the restaurant business in general.

In 1982, when Nanny's opened, he was the head bartender. The next year he and a partner opened the Market Mall Café in downtown Charlevoix. The cafe wasn't open long and its closing marked a temporary end to Brown's stint as a restaurateur.

He moved on to work in automotive quality control. But now, after over 10 years working with car parts, he found he was bored and ready for a change.

"I always wanted to own a restaurant and finally had the opportunity to do so. So, I decided to get back into it," he said.

If things run smoothly, faithful Nanny's patrons shouldn't notice much of a change. Nanny, who the restaurant was named for, was Mike's grandmother, but Brown plans to keep the name for now. He also plans to retain staff that worked at the restaurant under the Barnards' ownership and will offer the same menu, with possible changes to come in the future.

Brown will be assisted in running the restaurant and 13-room motel operation by Kathie Major.

County-wide authority will not benefit city

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

After meeting to discuss a county-wide ambulance authority, it looks as though Boyne City and East Jordan would benefit the most from an alliance.

Representatives from Boyne City, Charlevoix, East Jordan and Beaver Island emergency departments attended a meeting Feb. 19 at Boyne City Library to discuss a possible ambulance authority.

The authority would combine the departments under a ambulance administrator.

Chuck Vondra, a Boyne City commissioner, said the ultimate goal of the communities involved is to create a sustainable Advanced Life Support (ALS) service.

Boyne City, East Jordan and Beaver Island all currently operate under ALS systems. ALS require paramedics to respond to calls, which means higher salaries than both limited ALS technicians and basic technicians receive and requires upgrades to ambulances.

While a move to an authority wouldn't mean big changes for the Beaver Island department, its distance from the mainland is a challenge.

A move to ALS would mean advanced service for Charlevoix, but the service area's close proximity to Charlevoix Area Hospital and Northern Michigan Hospital makes any cost benefit under the authority model questionable. The city department currently breaks even.

"It would work, but I don't think it's needed. They are talking about funding full-time paramedics which for us would mean a rise in cost. And I question the need for it because of the proximity to the hospital — our furthest call is 11 minutes out," Charlevoix Fire Chief Doug Carver said.

He added that 98 percent of Charlevoix's calls are within 5 miles of the hospital and, "The worst emergency room is better than the best ambulance."

Charlevoix operates on limited ALS, with paid on-call Emergency Medical Technician specialists to keep the cost down. Currently the city department operates with one shift commander trained in limited ALS and a full-time EMS coordinator who does training and keeps the ambulances stocked with supplies.

"We can afford to run three people per ambulance because it costs us less to go on the street," Carver said. "For the people we serve, service is good at a reasonable cost."

But in Boyne City and East Jordan, where emergency response departments are ALS, they are looking for a way to sustain the service.

Boyne City manager Michael Cain said that in looking for a way to provide a sustainable service the groups may find an authority isn't the answer. But he said they could discover an authority would help contain costs and provide better service.

"We may find that all of the departments operating independently is fine and that is the way it stays but is there a better way to do things," he said.

Jay Peck, director of the Emergency Medical Services operation for the city of East Jordan, said for East Jordan to continue operating at ALS level the two full-time paramedics it has on staff, won't do it. Boyne City is facing this same concern. Demand is growing but budgets for staff and new facilities and resources aren't.

"We're growing and we need to look at how to make sure the service is there in the future," Peck said.

But as Carver said, "The fundamental problem is paying to have enough medics on duty."

Carver added that both Boyne City and East Jordan with their ALS systems would likely benefit from the authority which would help address funding issues.

Vondra said the idea is by combining services in a system approach they can provide for the needs of an entire service area.

Ways they plan to provide this service include hiring a full-time instructor coordinator, increasing the number of full-time paramedics and volunteers and reducing costs by bulk purchasing and resource sharing.

Vondra met with Charlevoix County Equalization Director, Carla Spencer, and discussed a Boyne City-East Jordan authority and what millage support would be needed to fund it if that was the chosen route of financing. They calculated a need for $750,000 a year or .5 mill.

Boyne City, East Jordan, Charlevoix and Beaver Island representatives will meet again after defining their coverage area, response time and present and future needs.

Other models discussed include a county-run system, a multi-jurisdictional system which would be owned by cities and townships and a privately owned system.

DDA, library to discuss middle school study

The Downtown Development Authority, in conjunction with the Library Board of Trustees, will have a public meeting from 6-7:30 p.m., March 5 in the library basement to hear the results of the feasibility study on the old middle school.

The preliminary presentation will announce the results of the structural and environmental studies as well as design possibilities as a library and as a community center. Cost estimates will also be available.

The preliminary presentation is designed to receive feedback from the public on the outcome of the study.

The feedback will then be culminated and added to the study for the final presentation. The final presentation will be given about one week later, the date will be announced at the preliminary presentation.

The study was completed by Engberg-Anderson Design Partnership.

Charlevoix police officer only candidate for chief

excellent fire chief," third ward council person Shirley Gibson, who made the motion to hire Ivan, said.

While Ivan is excited about his new position, he said he will miss being a police officer.

"You don't do something for 22 years and not miss it," he said.

But during his hour-long interview with council, he said he sees growth in the department and changes to happen in the next 10 years that he wants to be a part of. He said he also enjoys the teamwork involved in fire fighting.

"There is a lot of satisfaction in putting out a fire as a team. A fire department is only as good as its weakest member — it is a team thing," he told council.

Mayor Gabe Campbell who has been an advocate of hiring a local candidate for chief grinned ear-to-ear after the meeting and said he was elated at the outcome.

Campbell said in hiring in-house, Charlevoix will be better served because that person brings with him or her knowledge of the community.

Ivan listed this knowledge as one of his greatest strengths during the council interview.

"Other people that applied may have appeared much more qualified than I did. The only strength I have over those people is the community knows me, I know the community and I'm not going anywhere," he said.

If psychological and physical examinations and a background check are returned without question, Ivan will be officially hired at a special meeting to take place during the week of March 10.

Ivan's wife Judith said the new position will rejuvenate his career and he agreed.

"I take a lot of pride in becoming fire chief. It gives me an opportunity to serve the community in a different capacity than I have so far," he said.

As chief, Ivan plans to work to consolidate Charlevoix Township and city fire departments under a fire district. He also plans to continue his studies and receive fire officer I and II certification while also providing more training within the department.

Ivan can retire from the city at 55 with 25 years of service, but said he plans to put in 10 to 20 years.

Current chief Doug Carver has agreed to stay until Ivan has been hired. Carver, 62, announced his retirement in September. He served in public safety for 40 years in California, Petoskey and for the last 11 years, in Charlevoix.

Carver may help with fire officer class training in the city after his retirement.

The department currently includes a full-time chief, three full-time firefighters, 25 paid-on-call firefighters and 12 paid-on-call emergency medical technicians. The three full-time firefighters are Lyle Gennett, Bob Roloff and Schwartzfisher.

> "He has the backing of the entire community. I hate losing him as a police officer, but he will make an excellent fire chief."

Resident's doll art to be at trunk show sewing skills are good, I can draw, why not?" And quickly found all her hobby crafts like quilting, beading and decoupage were the perfect warm up for making these detailed art dolls.

She started with Danielle, a middle school age girl "not much more than a rag doll." Her skills have since progressed to award winning levels but she still keeps Danielle nestled comfortably on her bed.

Over the years Kathie has drawn inspiration from life experiences and sometimes finds the dolls lead their own design. Danielle is likely related to her lifelong profession as a teacher, she currently substitute teaches at Charlevoix Middle School. And "Courage" is a tribute to her mother, Dorothy Mulcrone who lost her battle with breast cancer on July 17, 1987.

"I get a sense of creating something, seeing where the doll will take me. I have an idea when I start, but I open myself up to what will happen next with the doll, I try not to put too much of my will in," she said.

"It's a lot of fun, sometimes when I get going I don't come up for air."

Briggs creates realistic, abstract and healing dolls including everything from male dolls like her latest yoga instructor to trolls, angels and detailed female dolls. Each stands between 12 and 25 inches and can take anywhere from a few days to weeks to make. Most are cloth, but some include mixed media like wood and clay.

She starts each with a drawing and moves on to create a pattern. After her work on paper is done she starts sewing the head, sculpting the face using a needle and thread, then moves on to craft the torso and body. Once she is satisfied with the doll's shape she starts posing and costuming using colored pencils, pens and makeup to add life to its face.

Now, after years of doll making, Kathie's work has moved from a childhood hobby to well-respected art. She will be the featured guest at the Contemporary Doll Trunk Show at the Jordan River Arts Council from 1 to 3 p.m., March 1.

The council is located at 301 Main Street in East Jordan.

"This is very big for me," she said.

At the trunk show she plans to give a detailed description of cloth doll creation and will demonstrate techniques. There will be 30 or more dolls that are part of her Fantasies in Fabric operation on display and for sale at the show.

To inquire about the dolls, visit the Fantasies in Fabric web-site at www.geocities.com/kathiebriggs. Or to have a personal consultation with her to create a doll that fits your vision, contact her at (231) 547-4971.

Girls' team finishes in eighth at state

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix/East Jordan high school girls' ski team finished in eighth place at the state championship Monday at Nub's Nob, with a total score of 209 points.

Harbor Springs took first place with a score of 68.

"We were glad to make it. As always, a lot of things can happen at state finals. We had too many crashes and mistakes that hurt us," coach Sue Miller said.

She added, since most of the team is returning next year, she expects good things.

In addition to the girls' team, there were two members of the boys' team who competed individually. Taylor Fisher competed in the slalom and York Smith competed in the giant slalom.

Fisher finished in eighteenth place with a final time of 1 minute, 8 seconds. Smith finished in twentieth place, with a final time of 55.45 seconds.

Individual results for the girls' team in the slalom were: Margaux Rowley in fifteenth place, with a total time of 1 minute, 16 seconds; Claire Niewendorp in twenty-eighth place, with a total time of 1 minute, 24 seconds; Michelle Fritsch in thirty-seventh place, with a total time of 1 minute, 38 seconds; Katie Diller in thirty-ninth place, with a total time of 1 minute, 43 seconds; Kristin Dupuis in forty-second place, with a total time of 2 minutes, 5 seconds; and Kelsey Poineau in fifty-fourth place, with a "disqualification."

Individual results for the girls' team in the giant slalom were: Niewendorp in eleventh place, with a total time of 53.83 seconds; Rowley in nineteenth, with a total time of 55.41 seconds; Poineau in twenty-eighth, with a total time of 58.24 seconds; Diller in thirty-second, with a total time of 58.97 seconds; David in forty-fifth, with a total time of 1 minute, 5 seconds;, and Fritsch in fifty-fourth, with a

Rayders beat Boyne, Harbor, Cheboygan

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders had a rare 3-0 week in basketball action last week, defeating Cheboygan, 88-67, Harbor Springs, 99-77 and Boyne City, 61-45.

The Rayders are alone in third place in the Lake Michigan Conference with a 7-3 league mark and are 15-3 overall. Harbor Springs and Elk Rapids are tied for the lead with identical 8-2 conference records.

The league crown hopes are still alive, however, as Harbor Springs plays at Elk Rapids on Tuesday and Elk Rapids travels to Kalkaska on Friday. If the home teams win both of those games and the Rayders win their two remaining contests, the three squads would end up in a three-way tie.

The biggest win of the week was over Harbor Springs, both in point spread and in importance.

Charlevoix dominated play early, leading by as many as 12 in the first quarter and 28-21 at the end of the high-scoring period.

The Rams fought back, however, and cut the lead to two with 5:45 remaining in the first half at 32-30. Nate Teuscher hit two free throws and Drew Wright scored on a jumper, a drive and a free throw to push the lead back up to 39-32.

Harbor pulled to within three again later in the half, at 42-39. The Rayders had the answer with a Travis Smith jumper, a Bryce Daly drive and a Spencer Bryan layup off a nice feed from Scott Friske giving them a 48-39 lead. The Rams connected on a three-pointer as time expired in the first half to trim the advantage to 48-42.

The third quarter featured more of the same with the Rayders pushing the lead to nine, at 55-49, but Harbor battling back to cut it to two, at 57-55. The Rams drew close but could never catch Charlevoix.

The Rayders put the game out of reach with a 15-0 run late in the quarter that pushed the lead from 61-57 to 76-57.

In the fourth quarter, the only suspense was whether Charlevoix could crack the century mark on the scoreboard. Harbor was no closer than fifteen the rest of the way.

"I thought that against Harbor Springs and Cheboygan, we played the best basketball offensively that we've played this year," coach Keith Haske said. "We shot well and moved the ball around real well."

Wright scored a career-high 29 points and pulled down seven rebounds. Friske narrowly missed a rare triple-double with 10 points, 12 rebounds and nine assists.

"I've never had a player get a triple-double before and Scott was real close," Haske said. "He had seven or eight great assists to Wright for easy baskets. Drew finished real well and it's fun to watch him come on like he has."

Teuscher dished out 10 assists and tallied nine points.

Against Boyne City, in a very physical game, the Rayders trailed early, including an 11-8 disadvantage at the end of the first quarter. Charlevoix recovered and slowly pulled away from the Ramblers, leading 27-24 at the half and 43-32 after three periods.

Friske led Charlevoix with 17 points and 12 rebounds. Teuscher scored 14 points and handed out six assists. Daly contributed 11 points to the Rayder effort.

"It was a real physical game and Boyne plays as good of a man-to-man defense as we see," Haske explained. "The refs let them play. We didn't respond well in the first half, just letting them push us around but in the second half I was happy with the way we came back. We played the way the game was going and the way the refs were calling it (physical)."

The Rayders hosted Kalkaska on Tuesday, Feb. 25, but results were unavailable at presstime. Charlevoix closes out the regular season on Friday, Feb. 28 at Traverse City St. Francis.

District play begins next week and the Rayders open at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, March 5 against the winner of the Boyne City-Mancelona game. Conference leaders Harbor Springs and Elk Rapids face off on Monday, March 3 with the winner playing East Jordan.

The district finals will be at 7 p.m., Friday, March 7.

Volleyball team in second

Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders continued their roll in volleyball action last week, beating Kalkaska, 15-8, 15-17, 15-8 and Boyne City, 16-14, 15-9.

The Rayders have now won four consecutive league matches and are in second place in the Lake Michigan Conference.

"The girls are playing well together here at the end of the season," coach Elizabeth Grunch said. "They are building off every game, still improving and still working hard."

Kari Way paced the offensive attack against Kalkaska with 13 kills. Natashia Kleiber added seven kills and was strong defensively, according to coach Elizabeth Grunch.

Becca Kanine handed out 15 assists. Theresa Martin also paced the defense with three blocks. Amanda Boss was 100 percent from the serving line with one ace.

"Becca really set a nice game," Grunch said. "She also has really stepped up on defense which has helped us out a lot."

Grunch also praised the play of Shayna Drost on defense against Kalkaska.

Grunch attributed some of the team's success to other unsung players, Andrea Ruhlmann and Jessica Pettis.

"Andrea has really started to gel in the front row for us," Grunch said. "She's attacking and getting her hands on a lot of blocks."

"Jessica has also really stepped it up for us," Grunch added. "Usually the right side is a weakness for teams but with Jessica's play, we have been covering it really well."

Charlevoix (22-13-4 overall, 7-3 conference) concludes the regular season at home against Traverse City St. Francis on Thursday.

The Rayders' district play will be this Saturday in Suttons Bay. Charlevoix's opener is at 10:00 a.m. against Mancelona.

Charlevoix swimmers going to state meet

Charlevoix Stingray Swimmers Alex Gooch and Jonathan Boyko recently qualified for the Michigan Team Swim League State Championship meet scheduled for Sunday, March 2 at Alma College.

Swimmers need to post a qualifying time to be able to compete in this meet. This is the first time the Charlevoix Stingrays have sent two swimmers to the state meet.

Gooch will be competing in the 25 yard breaststroke. He has been a Charlevoix Stingray for the past three years. Gooch hopes to keep having fun with swimming and his goal to the future is to go to the Olympics.

Boyko will be competing in the 50 yard Breaststroke. He has been a Charlevoix Stingray for the past five years. Boyko loves when the team plays water-basketball and he hopes someday to win a Gold medal at the Olympics.

The Charlevoix Stingrays will be concluding their Michigan Team Swim League Short Course Competitive Season with the Novice Championships on Saturday, March 1 and the state championships on Sunday, March 2. Both meets are at Alma College.

Competing in the novice championships are: Kathryn Sanchez, Kristen Gooch, Lynzie Gotshall, Chrystal Schemanski, Betsy Sanchez, Abbi Marshal, Peter Londgren, Daniel Sanchez and Jonathan Merrill.

Qualifying for the state championships are: Alex Gooch and Jonathan Boyko.

The Charlevoix Stingrays are a year round competitive age group swim team. It competes in numerous meets throughout the year with the concentration of the competitive season running from October- March.

The Stingrays currently have over 40 swimmers from Charlevoix, Petoskey, Boyne City and elsewhere. If you have any questions about the Charlevoix Stingrays swim team please contact the Charlevoix Area Community Pool at 547-0982.

After Glow

I'd like the memory of me to be a happy one,
I'd like to leave an after glow of smiles when life is done.
I'd like to leave an echo whispering softly down the ways, of happy times, laughing times, and bright and sunny days.
I'd like the tears of those who grieve to dry before the sun,
Of happy memories that I leave when life is done.

Topper Carey
Feb. 24, 1994

Nine years later we continue to bask in your "after glow." You have left enough happy memories to last our lifetimes...and then some. We are creating new "happy times, laughing times, and bright and sunny days" strengthened by your presence within us. Each day we thank God for the gift of your love in our lives. Your courage and determination still inspire us.

We will always love you.

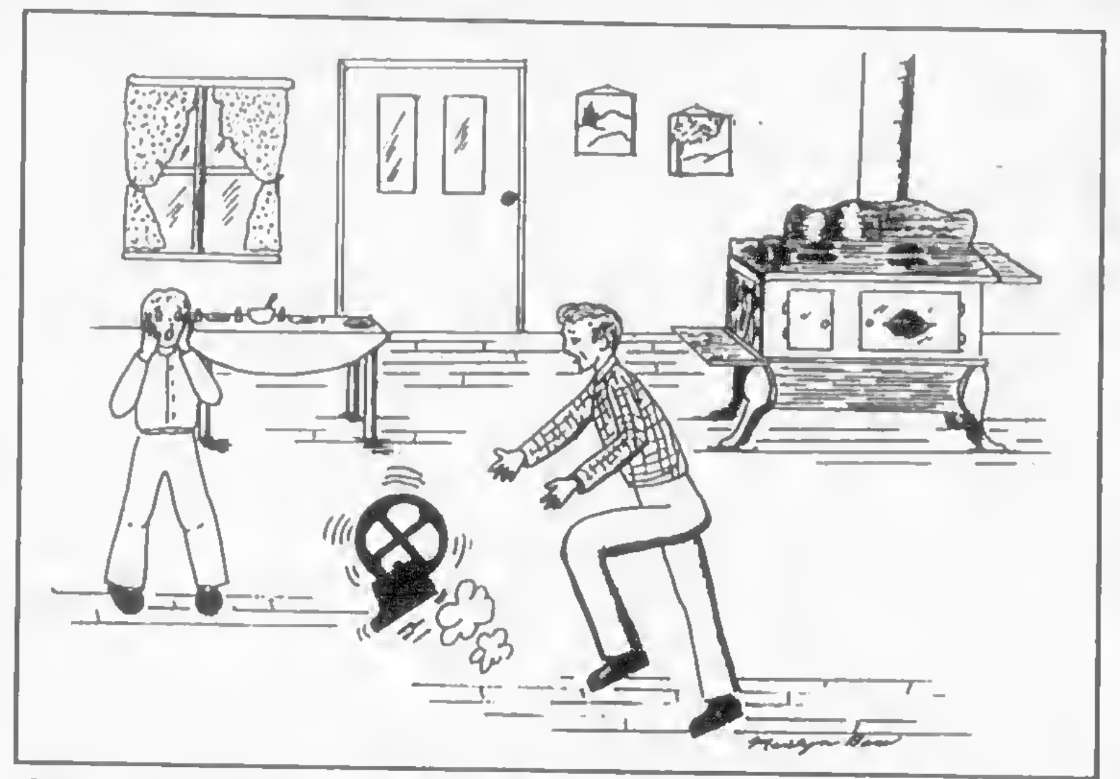
Smith shares story of father's engine dance

Clayton Smith

'Life on the farm'



Clayton Smith tells the story of his father's winter dance with an engine. (Graphic by Marilyn Boss)

In the winter of 1934, it was deathly cold at a wonderful 51 degrees below zero.

In the winter of 1934, I was a freshman in Charlevoix High School. Steuart Coleman was our teacher and he had a sense of humor and liked to embarrass us farm boys.

He asked the class to tell a true story, so it came my turn. So I tried to tell a true story about my dad, the day I saw him dancing with the engine.

The class thought I meant a native American and this blonde haired girl asked me what tribe I was. But, I told her I was talking about a "horse-and-a-half Sears." So, she said to me that she was kin of Crazy Horse and she asked me how big my ancestor was.

So, I told her it was about a foot-and-a-half tall and weighed 200 pounds. By that time, the class thought I was sort of nutty....maybe I was.

So, I tried to explain it was a gasoline engine, not a native American.

We had this small engine at the well on the farm that pumped the water to the farm for livestock. It was 20 below zero and my dad was trying to get the engine to run.

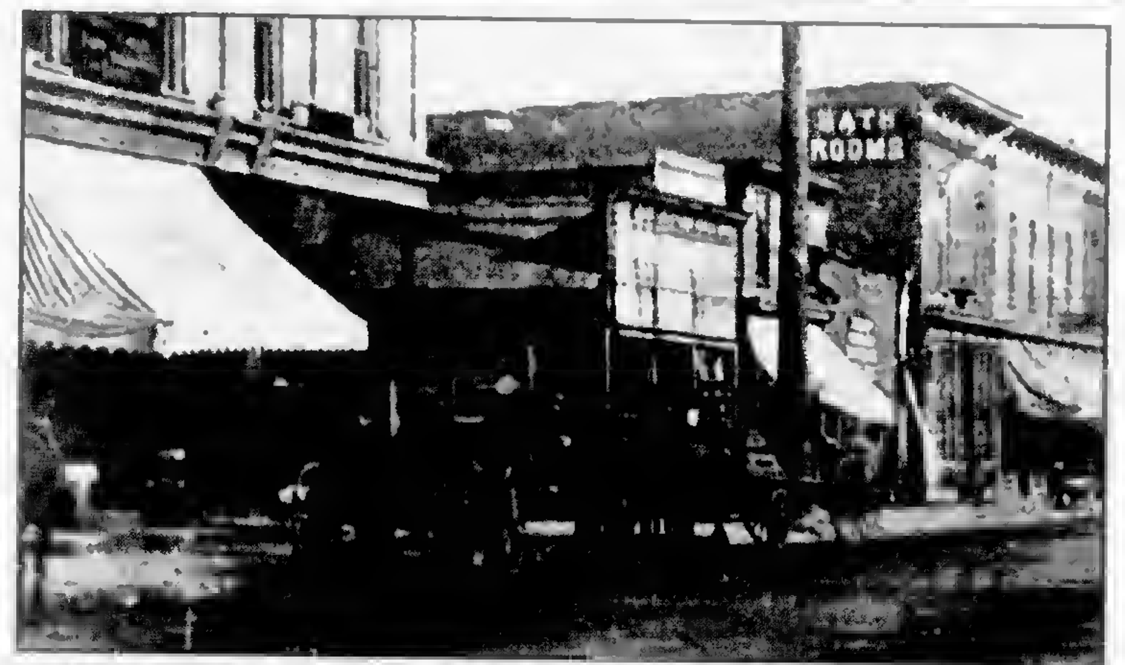
I was trying to help him. So, my dad asked me to get a hand sleigh, which we loaded it on and took it to the house to warm and see if it would run.

Once inside, the engine started up and the governor — a part that controls the speed of the engine — was stuck at full speed in the kitchen and the engine was jumping up and down, 4 or 5 inches.

My dad was trying to stop it and was chasing after the jumping engine in the kitchen.

And that was the day my dad was "Dancing with the Engine."

Clayton Smith is a life-long Charlevoix resident that writes about life on the Charlevoix farms and in Charlevoix in the early 1900s.



Charlevoix's main street

The history of Bridge Street is in fact the history of Charlevoix's businesses, for it has been the main street through town as well as its major street of commerce for over 100 years. On Tuesday, March 4, David L. Miles, co-director of the Charlevoix Historical Society, will present a photo program (open to the public at no charge) about Bridge Street, using the society's new power-point and computer projection technology. Each city block will be explored, beginning at the bridge, up the west side to Antrim Street and then back up the east side, with many stories along the way. The program will be at 7 p.m. at the historic Depot at the end of East Dixon Avenue. Call the Charlevoix Historical Society at 547-0373 if you need more information about the event. Charlevoix city budget over $15 million

BUDGET

The millage rate will likely be slightly rolled back by the Headlee Amendment. The city will know the exact millage rate, including the Headlee rollback, by May 29.

While it has quantified those losses to the general fund, others lurk around the corner. The city knows it will be impacted by lower interest rates on investments, a small increase in taxable value and higher fuel costs, but didn't factor those indefinite numbers into the budget.

"It's tight and it's going to get tighter," city treasurer Rick Brandi said.

But Wiesner assured, "We're OK."

He said the tighter budget means the city won't have as much discretionary funds to use to match grant opportunities that may arise.

"We don't have extra dollars to do things like that in the general fund, nor do we see it being available to do in the near future," he said.

And Brandi said the tight budget and further cuts that will likely come from the state have more broad implications for the future.

"This is a future issue, it isn't something that will go away. It's going to be a challenge and we will have to be more creative in the way we look at costs," he said.

Further budget cuts at the state level may mean that creativity has to start sooner than the city anticipated. Brandi said more cuts could affect the city at the tail end of the year because the state budget period ends Oct. 1 and the city still has six months to go.

Possible cuts the city could make from the budget include items from the list of capital projects, like those planned for the city's golf course and Mount McSauba which account for $251,100 in general fund capital spending.

The bulk of that money is set aside for water supply improvement projects at the recreation facilities.

If the budget is approved, test wells will be put in this spring. If needed volumes of water are detected by those wells the city will implement larger wells and complete the improvement.

Wiesner said there may be projects that can't get done and will be carried over to the 2004-2005 budget period.

If those capital cuts aren't enough, then the city has to look at scaling back services and staff.

Arrest made after six month search

A six month hunt for a Charlevoix fugitive has ended with the 19-year-old's arrest Feb. 19 in South Lyon.

According to Charlevoix City Police, Nathaniel Joseph Knebl was wanted on multiple outstanding felony warrants.

Police said he was a suspect in the 2001 crime spree in Charlevoix county and city. He was arrested in South Lyon by the Michigan State Police Fugitive Squad after a six month investigation into his location.

Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson said, "The cooperative effort between investigators from the Charlevoix City Police and the state police fugitive squad was the key in bringing this individual to justice."

Knebl was arraigned in Charlevoix District Court on Feb. 21.

Wal-Mart in Charlevoix?

Charlevoix Township land being considered

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

This property along US-31, south of Charlevoix, is being considered as the location of a new Wal-Mart. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

A Wal-Mart Supercenter with a gas station may be in Charlevoix's future according to several officials last week.

John Ferguson, who co-owns the Charlevoix surveying company Ferguson and Chamberlain, said in an interview with the Charlevoix Courier on Feb. 26, Wednesday, his firm is currently surveying property near the intersection of Marion Center Road, Stover Road and US-31 for a possible Wal-Mart.

He said his company started surveying the land on Feb. 25, Tuesday, and has five weeks from Feb. 24, Monday, to complete it. He said a majority of the property is located next to the Flight Deck bar, south of Charlevoix, on US-31. The property the company is looking at runs from the bar, northwest to Stover Road and northeast to Marion Center Road.

In addition to surveying, a representative for the possible Wal-Mart has met with Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner about getting a sewer line to the site. He said the representative did not tell him which retailer he worked for.

Wiesner said he told the representative that a sewer connection was available near the intersection of Marion Center Road and US-31, however the company would have to pay for a line running to it and sewer fees.

Shortly after speaking with the Courier on Wednesday, Wiesner issued a memo to Charlevoix City Council members informing them that Wal-Mart is interested in building a "supercenter" with a gas station on property south of town.

The Michigan Department of Transportation has even been contacted on a possible Wal-Mart south of Charlevoix by consultants trying to determine where to put entrances and exits to the business.

Paul Wisniewski, traffic and safety engineer for the department of transportation, said there are no final plans for any retail project in that area, but a consultant has requested information on traffic from the department for a possible Wal-Mart south of Charlevoix.

Cruise ship coming this summer

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

> "It is like history reactivated. I still hear people talk about when the North American and the South American would come in."
> Jacqueline Merta,
> President of the Charlevoix chamber

Nostalgia will float through town this season as a cruise ship once again makes its way into Charlevoix's harbor.

"It's like history reactivated. I still hear people talk about when the North American and the South American would come in," Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce President Jacqueline Merta said.

Great Lakes Cruise Company of Ann Arbor is planning three, eight-night trips in August from Charlevoix to Duluth, Minn. This is the first time this company has brought a ship to town.

The company with trips scheduled for this year will bring its 183-foot cruise ship, the Grande Mariner to town. The ship can carry a maximum of 100 passengers. The trip will take participants from Charlevoix through the Straits of Mackinac to the northern top of Lake Huron and through the Soo Locks. From there the ship will visit Whitefish Point, Munising, Marquette, Houghton, Isle Royale, Grand Marais, Wisconsin's Apostle Islands and on to its final destination, Duluth, Minn.

The trip has been aptly dubbed the Lake Superior Grande Tour as it covers most of Lake Superior.

The Mariner is much smaller than a cruise ship that visited Charlevoix in June 2001 called the Arcadia, which was 359-feet-5 inches in length, 53 feet-6 inches wide with a draft of 18 feet. The Arcadia housed 225 passengers during its excursions across the Great Lakes.

The Arcadia's size made its captain ultimately make the decision not to travel through the Pine River Channel. Instead, it docked off Lake Michigan Beach with the Pride of Bay Harbor ferrying visitors into town.

The Mariner will not likely have this problem.

Area fund-raisers being given for Trimpers

By JULIE WITTHOEFT

> Karen Peterson, Charlevoix High School teacher on a fund-raiser for the Trimper family by her class

A family faced with losing all three of its children to a rare genetic disorder has Charlevoix residents joining forces offering them emotional, financial and spiritual support.

Marcia and Don Trimper have lived in Charlevoix for 27 years and raised all five of their children here.

Last summer Jeff and Jane Trimper, their son and daughter-in-law, started to notice that their seven-year-old son Max just wasn't his pleasant, outgoing, comical self. Jane took him to doctors who told her Max was healthy.

Then, this fall, he fell on the playground and was very disoriented. Jane, who is a teacher at the elementary school Max attends, took him to the emergency room.

She was met by a sharp doctor who did a CAT scan on Max and found a brain abnormality. On Oct. 25, 2002 a pediatrician neurologist diagnosed this abnormality as related to Metachromatic Leukodystrophy (MLD).

MLD is the result of an enzyme deficiency that allows for destruction of the myelin sheath around nerve fibers. The result is mental and physical deterioration that leads to death.

There are three times in life when MLD can trigger — in infants, juveniles and adults. Don said the younger you get it, the more aggressive it is.

The disease affects approximately one in 100,000. Because the disorder is genetic, Maddie, 4, and Sam, 3, Jeff and Jane's other children, were also tested. Despite the odds, they also tested positive for MLD.

Both are currently showing no signs of the disease.

Through Internet research, the Trimper family found Fairview Children's Hospital in Minneapolis, Minn. and a 77-year-old doctor, William Krivit, who has "a passion for children with MLD." Krivit has dedicated 40 years of research and practice to helping this cause.

They contacted the doctor who said, "How soon can you be here?" Just two days later the family packed up and headed for Minnesota.

The family soon learned there are only treatments to slow down MLD, there is no cure.

"This is something we can't fix. You feel totally out of control," Marcia, Max's grandma, said.

Max has undergone a tough procedure, a dangerous stem cell transplant that won't cure him of MLD, but will hopefully slow its progression. If left untreated, children diagnosed with the disease often die within five to six years.

Max is the thirtieth child to be treated at Fairview for MLD.

The transplant is a 300 day process. During the first 100 days he is confined to the hospital where either Jeff or Jane are by his side 24 hours a day. Then on April 25 he can return to his home at the Ronald McDonald House near the children's hospital.

Don said that considering all that Max has been through, he is doing very well.

During the next 100 days Max can be outside with a mask and can go for car rides, but will have to avoid crowds. During the last leg, Max will be able to go out and be with people without the mask.

If the treatment fails, the Trimpers and Max will have to start from scratch.

Jeff and Jane have pulled together and find blessings in life's simplest things, like beautiful days and days when Max eats well.

"They are the most positive people you can imagine," Marcia said.

Because there is little known about MLD, much of the treatment is considered experimental and is not covered by insurance, leaving the Trimper family with mounting hospital bills and two more treatments to come. It will cost at least $150,000 for Max's treatment.

While the reality of what the family is facing is unimaginable, the support they have received from three small communities has helped make it bearable.

Assistance started in December when people in Chesaning, Jane's hometown, organized a benefit. Then, in January in Stanton, where Jeff and Jane live now, residents rallied for the cause in organizing a "Let's Kick MLD in the Butt" benefit.

Now, Charlevoix has stepped up to the plate.

A fund was started at Charlevoix State Bank to assist the Trimpers and help find a cure for MLD.

Then about a month ago, 17 students in English teacher Karen Peterson's seminar at Charlevoix High School started a fund-raiser as part of a community outreach project.

They decorated coffee cans for money collection, challenged other seminars to raise money, organized bake sales and passed collection jars at sporting events and school plays.

From 7:50 to 8:50 a.m., tomorrow, Thursday, March 6, students and staff will serve a pancake breakfast at the school with all proceeds going to the Trimper family.

"It's (the outreach project) taken on a life of its own, I think it really touched them," Peterson said.

Their goal is to raise $1,000 for the Trimpers and MLD research.

Friends of Jeff's from his days at Charlevoix High School are organizing a benefit auction at the Castle Farms for June 14. They Should we get rid of annoying animals?

EDITORIAL

Northern Michigan is a beautiful place to live, just as long as you are not an animal that bugs humans.

This statement is especially true if you are a turkey. Due to citizen complaints, the Charlevoix City Council recently decided to look into ways to get rid of the many turkeys that live in the woods outside of Charlevoix and regularly travel into town looking for food.

It seems as though these turkeys have created quite a problem for themselves because they have started munching on flowers outside of homes in Charlevoix, thus enraging the citizens. Some of those citizens complained to city council who decided recently to get advice from the Department of Natural Resources on how to get rid of this menace to our town.

The department will probably give one of two solutions that it normally gives in this sort of situation: One) Remove the birds from the area using an expensive trapping or netting procedure. The downside is the turkeys will most likely return. Two) Kill the birds by shooting or trapping them. The downside is it is very messy.

The costs for either of these two solutions is not known at this time, nor is it known who would pay for it.

Since we are in the mood for getting rid of messy, destructive animals from Charlevoix, perhaps after we are done with the turkeys we should focus our attention on the ducks and sea-gulls that foul up East Park with their droppings. Have you ever tried to sit on the ground at this park, only to sit in bird droppings? After all, it isn't fair for us to go after one bird that causes harm to private property and not the others.

But, perhaps instead of trying to rid ourselves of animals we don't like, we should just learn to live with them. We do live in northern Michigan, away from large cities.

And, since Charlevoix is not a suburb of Detroit or Chicago, and surrounded by forests and lakes, shouldn't we expect a little annoyance by some of the wild inhabitants that we share this land with? After all, who really does more damage to the world around us — the turkeys or us?

Herbal remedies can be dangerous choices

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

You may remember Professor Harold Hill in the "Music Man" story.

He warned the residents of mythical River City about the dangers which faced their children in a community that harbored a pool table. Right now, I feel just a bit like that professor, filled with the need to point out a potential danger of which many of us may not be aware.

Don't worry, I am not planning to sell you band instruments or uniforms, only information.

In many local retail stores there are shelves and shelves of what are variously described as herbal supplements, food supplements, herbal extracts or even herbal remedies. Many of them carry names that are familiar: Garlic, Comfrey, Bayberry, Black Walnut, Burdock, Horse Chestnut, Horsetail, to name only a few.

There are at least dozens if not hundreds of such supplements. Many have brand names that sound safe and comforting: Natural Way, Naturally Best and others. A few like Sleep-ease, Brain Power, Stress-ease or Fat Burner proclaim their potential usefulness in the brand name.

The specific ingredients are listed on the label, most often in very fine print, and may include more than one plant extract. Some bottles list six or seven different plant substances with the amounts not specified, since the formula is protected as a proprietary blend.

Is there any reason to be concerned about this armory of potential food supplements and possible medications? The short answer is "YES." Since nearly all herbal products and plant extracts can be considered food supplements, they are almost totally unregulated. Practically anyone can collect plants from the wild, grind or process them in several ways, put them in capsules and sell them as supplements.

If I knew that all the world's plants were safe to consume, I wouldn't worry. But most of the plants that we don't cultivate for food are to some degree poisonous. Evolution has produced thousands of poisonous plants as a way of plants protecting themselves against animals eating them.

Some years ago I taught a class about the nature and abundance of poisonous plants for the Michigan State University College of Veterinary Medicine. When I now visit the health food store or the pharmacy and look at the plant-based supplements for sale, I see names of plants that any veterinarian would consider potentially poisonous for livestock. The Horse Chestnut and Horsetail plants listed above are good examples.

A plant may be poisonous and yet not particularly dangerous since the amount of poison in the plant is small. It is at this point that we might all be concerned about the non-regulation of herbal materials sold as supplements. How much of a potentially poisonous plant is in each of the pills in the bottle I see on the shelf? There is almost no way to know. Will this herbal supplement help me in some way? Most will not. Again it is very difficult to know without careful and complete labeling.

I can provide a single cautionary example. A plant with the name Ephedra grows in China where it is known as mahuang. There are forty other kinds of Ephedra that grow all around the world, including several in the United States.

The Chinese Ephedra was the source of a drug named Ephedrine, which is now artificially synthesized and used in a number of over the counter and prescription medications for asthma and allergies. As a drug, it is regulated, as a plant extract it can be purchased by anyone at almost any health food store with no prescription and no control.

It is a part of many herbal weight-loss formulations. And it is sufficiently dangerous to have been implicated in the recent death of a baseball player. Most professional sports prohibit its use.

The extract of Ephedra on your health food or grocery store shelf may contain various quantities of any of the 40 or so different kinds of Ephedra, but there is almost surely enough of it in 50 capsules to constitute a fatal dose.

This botanist and teacher about poisonous plants worries over the availability and unregulated formulation and sale of potentially poisonous herbal extracts. Just because it is natural does not mean it is safe or good for you.

Most of the world's uncultivated plants pose some potential hazard to anyone consuming them, and their unregulated sale is a genuine danger far greater than the presence of a pool table in River City.

Raise awareness of spaying and neutering

Editor:

For years, the humane movement worked hard to convince the U.S. Post Office to create a spay/neuter postage stamp to help raise awareness about the importance of spaying and neutering our pets to help reduce the needless killing of millions of homeless animals each year.

Our petitions; letters, e-mails and faxes worked! The U.S. Post Office now has beautiful spay/neuter stamps available.

Please help raise awareness about importance of spaying and neutering our pets. Ask for the spay/neuter stamps!

Raise dropout age to 18

Editor:

I think everybody should be educated. I am trying to persuade Governor Granholm to change the drop out age from 16 to 18.

If you're 18, you're old enough to make your own decisions. You are almost an adult at the age of 18. You can live on your own at that age and make your own decisions. You can vote at 18 too.

You might not get into as much trouble if you're older. You would be more responsible if you're older also. You might get into drugs if you're younger (because you wouldn't know what to do).

You would have an easier life if you drop out later. It would be easier to get a job with more education. You can get a better job at an older age too.

As you can see, 18 is a better age for dropping out. You can get a better job at an older age. You're more responsible at the age of 18. Also, at 18 you're almost an adult.

Eighteen is just a better age for dropping out.

School should start later

Editor:

I think students should be able to sleep an hour more than usual. I think the government should bump school hours to at least 8:45 a.m. The normal school hours are just too early.

If students got more sleep, they would learn more at school daily. Students would get better jobs and better income because of their education level.

For example: people get sleepy in school and fall asleep in class and don't get the same education as others. People who fall asleep in class, will get a bad grade for cooperation.

Teenagers and kids need at least eight hours of sleep to stay healthy, most only get five or six. If we don't get to school later, we won't have the same education as others.

If education dies down, too many people will lose jobs and will have to claim bankruptcy. When they don't find jobs, the government will have to pay them.

Also, some people don't have time to eat breakfast and they do have breakfast at school, but the buses come around 7:35 a.m. and students don't always have time. Breakfast is the most important meal of the day, so we should bump school hours up an hour later.

Sheriff announces student scholarship

Sheriff George T. Lasater recently announced his professional organization, the Michigan Sheriff's Association, is calling for nominations for the 2003 Bernard Greysen Memorial Criminal Justice Scholarship.

The scholarship is sponsored by the Michigan Sheriff's Association Educational Services, Inc. Ten $1,000 scholarships will be awarded to Michigan high school seniors pursuing a career in criminal justice. Two scholarships will be awarded in each of the association's five state districts.

Nominations for the scholarship must be made by a member of the Michigan Sheriff's Association — however, the nominee does not have to be a member. Nomination forms must be submitted to Sheriff Lasater no later than Thursday, May 1.

Now in its tenth year, the scholarship has awarded nearly $100,000 in scholarships to deserving high school seniors around the state.

Individuals who wish to make a nomination can obtain the form from Lasater af the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office, located at 1000 Grant Street in Charlevoix. Nominations must come from association members and should be forwarded to the sheriff's office no later than May 1.

Big Rock's history to be displayed by group

Officials from the Charlevoix Historical Society and Consumers Energy's Big Rock Point Restoration Project are working together to determine what items will best depict the history of Michigan's first commercial nuclear power plant.

Plant artifacts will be used in a display at the society.

Items recently donated to the society include:

- "Headstart on Tomorrow," a videotape narrated by Ronald Reagan that describes the construction of Big Rock Point.
- "Welcome to Big Rock Point," a videotape that provides a tour of the plant when it was in operation.
- A compact disc of historical construction, operation and employee photographs.
- A working steam engine model that demonstrates how electricity is generated.
- Two computers that will help society employees archive Charlevoix area data and photographs.

"Big Rock Point employees are proud of their accomplishments through 35 years of operation and the past five years of site restoration activities,' said Tim Petrosky, plant public affairs director. "We are honored that the leadership of the Charlevoix Historical Society considers it important to capture and preserve the history of the plant for future generations."

Petrosky noted that as they work to return the site to a greenfield, plant employees will continue to identify important historical items to donate to the society.

Big Rock Point was the world's first high power-density boiling water reactor and an important research site for the nuclear power industry.

The plant was shut down on Aug. 29, 1997, after 35 years of service, making it the nation's longest running nuclear plant.

Due to its many contributions to the nuclear and medical communities, the American Nuclear Society named Big Rock Point a Nuclear Historic Landmark.

Charlevoix Area Pool gets funds from Chicago Club

Most members of Charlevoix's Chicago Club may have closed their cottages for the season, but their loyalty to Charlevoix and their connection to the community continue through the winter months.

When word got out that the city had turned down the Charlevoix Area Community Pool's funding request this year and that the resulting shortfall could cause the pool to miss out on a matching Frey Foundation grant, Chicago Club members went into action.

"We know how important the pool is to area families and children," Tim Ives, a member of the Chicago Club, said. "Our members felt it would be a shame to let the opportunity for a challenge match go by, and we wanted to do what we could to help."

Ives contacted Bob Tambellini, president of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, where the Chicago Club had established a fund. The fund, started two years ago, is earmarked for programs and projects that benefit the Charlevoix area and the pool's water safety programs and family swim nights seemed to fit the fund's objectives.

Tambellini spoke with officials at the Frey Foundation to see if a gift from the Chicago Club, made through their community foundation fund, would qualify for Frey's matching money. Although the Frey Foundation challenge grant had stipulated that matching funds come from local governments or schools, Tambellini said Frey administrators agreed to allow the matching grant since the Chicago Club is a local association.

Given the green light, Ives and Chicago Club members raised $5,000 for the pool in just a few weeks. Now, the Frey Foundation will award a matching grant of $5,000 to the Charlevoix. Area Community Pool, for a total of $10,000.

Pool director Al Gooch said that the grant will help the pool continue its water safety programs for children, as well as the popular $1 family swim nights.

"This is terrific," Gooch said. "We're very grateful to the Chicago Club for responding so quickly and generously to our need, to our local community foundation for facilitating the process and to the Frey Foundation for their willingness to extend their challenge match and be flexible in their grant-making opportunities. So many kids and families will benefit from this cooperative effort."

Olds is the son of the late Bruce E. Anderson and Gladys Anderson and the eldest grandson of R.E. Olds.

His early education was in schools and Cranbrook School in Bloomfield Hills. His college education was divided between Dartmouth College and Michigan State College from which he has a certificate in agricultural engineering. He was awarded an honorary doctor of business administration degree by Hillsdale College in 1977.

He has studied the Spanish language and history at Lansing Community College and Michigan State University and spoke the language well.

His aviation career began in 1939 when he soloed off the runway at the Lansing airport. Flying took him to Texas, where he started working for the Civil Aeronautics Administration's Standardization Center as a link trailer instructor.

Seven years later when he left the CAA (now FAA) he was assistant director of the Instrument and Multi-engine School of the FAA's Aeronautical Center in Oklahoma City. He continued recreational flying well in to his 60s.

In 1948, Olds went into the hotel business with his father at the Hotel Olds, starting as a storeroom helper and working through the various departments. In 1952, he became assistant manager of the hotel and was proposed for the Lansing Rotary Club by his father, who had become a Lansing Rotarian the same year the club was chartered (1916). (Olds' grandfather, Ransom E. Olds, was an honorary member of the Lansing Rotary Club.)

In 1960, he became manager of the Olds Hotel and remained in that capacity until it was sold to Jack Tar, Inc. He then owned and operated the Inn America Motor Hotel in East Lansing.

During his hotel career, Olds was active in the Michigan Hotel Association, American Hotel Association and the East Michigan Tourist Association of which he became president in 1965.

He was President of the R. E. Olds Company and the Ransom Fidelity Company. He was the elected secretary of the Lansing Rotary Club from 1973 to 1990. He is a past chairman of the Michigan State University Foundation: a former member of the Board of Directors of the Bank of Lansing; and in 1976 received a permanent appointment to the Board of Directors of the Convention Bureau of Greater Lansing, of which he helped found.

He was also active with the Lansing Regional Chamber of Commerce and was named one of the 100 Most Influential People in the Lansing area.

His primary hobbies were photography, ancient Middle Eastern and Mexican history and traveling. He was a member of All Saints Episcopal Church of East Lansing; a director emeritus of Ingham Regional Medical Center and of their Foundation Board.

He was a former trustee of the Archeological Conservancy of Albuquerque, N.M.: member City Club of Lansing; a board member and supporter of Woldumar Nature Center, which his mother founded; director emeritus of World Neighbors, Inc. of Oklahoma City; a Quiet Birdman; and was a member of the Henry Dunant and Clara Barton Society of the American Red Cross.

In 1999 the R.E. Olds Anderson Cardiac Rehabilitation Center at Ingham Regional Medical Center was named for him.

He has received awards from the Salvation Army, Boys and Girls Club, Camp Highfields and received the Ingham Healthcare Foundation Award in 1990.

He was a founder, along with Jack Breslin of the Signet Society at Ingham Regional Medical Center.

E. Olds Anderson, Jr. (Sally) of Carlton; five grandchildren, Emily, Matt, Gregg, Heather and Ben; two great-grandchildren; sister, Peggy (Jim) Wortz of Riverside, Calif. and many nieces and nephews.

Fines increase in new city budget

Editor's note: This is the second report in a three part series that will look at the city of Charlevoix's proposed 2003-2004 budget. The series will lead up to the budget public hearing scheduled to take place at 7 p.m., March 17 in city council chambers at city hall.

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The proposed 2003-2004 budget for the city of Charlevoix could make life in the city a little more expensive.

If the budget is passed by city council at the annual city budget public hearing March 17 at city hall, property owners will be subject to higher tax and utility rates and user fees and some penalties will increase.

The budget proposes to add .49 mill for rubbish collection. If the millage increase is adopted it will likely be rolled back somewhat by the Headlee Amendment.

But at .49 mill it would cost a property owner whose holding is valued at $100,000, an additional $49.

While it could be a little more expensive to own property in the city, it will also cost more to use its water and sewer services. The budget is proposing to increase sewer rates 5.5 percent and water rates 3 percent.

City treasurer Rick Brandi said for the normal residential customer this will result in a $1.74 per month cost increase. Average bills will go from just under $40 per month to just over that amount. The rate increase would boost the total revenue the city receives from sewer rates by $46,700 and would bring in an additional $22,800 in water user fees.

In comparing sewer and water rates to seven other comparable cities, Charlevoix falls in the middle range for rates. City Manager Mike Wiesner said of those cities, Charlevoix is the only one with its own water plant which costs more to operate.

While the rate increases will effect only city property owners who use those utilities, higher user fees at the municipal golf course and Mount McSauba and an increase in parking violation fees will add extra strain to wallets of those in and out of the city.

If the budget is adopted, non-metered parking tickets will go from $5, $10 and $20 to $10, $15 and $30. And metered parking tickets will increase from $2, $10 and $20 to $5, $15 and $30.

Wiesner said parking regulations are put in place to encourage turnover in the downtown and he questions whether the $2 fine is doing that.

The violation ticket price has not increased since 1994. Since then, city police chief Dennis Halverson said overhead has increased including costs, like mailings to people who don't pay tickets and an increase in administrative costs.

The city is expecting the ticket increase to bring in an additional $8,500.

The city is also proposing to institute a new $25 fine for the police department to charge as a bad check processing fee.

Under the proposed budget, golfers will pay about 3.89 percent more for season passes and McSauba skiers will pay about 12 percent more per pass.

Brandi said the proposed increase in season pass costs at the two facilities will help defray expenses at both.

Beaver Island residents make historic trip

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

St. Patrick's Day will have a special significance on Beaver Island this year, as many of the residents will have just returned from their ancestral home in Ireland.

Today, Wednesday, over 60 islanders and former islanders, left Chicago, Ill. bound to Arranmore Island, Ireland to take part in a traditional "twinning" ceremony — a recognition of Beaver Island and Arranmore Island being twin cities. The trip is being recognized by the Irish government for its historic significance since a large group of people are coming back to the place many of their ancestors where born.

But, for many of the islanders, the trip is more than historic, it is deeply sentimental.

Cindy Cushman, who has visited her family's ancestral home on Arranmore Island in the past and is returning this week, said, "When you ferry to Arranmore, it is just really weird. You feel so strongly connected. It is weird to feel connected to a place I have never been to."

She added she wishes her father, Jewell Gillespie, was still alive to see the large group of islanders traveling to Arranmore Island. She said he had taught all of his children a love for Irish culture and Arranmore Island.

"It is difficult for me because my dad....it was really important to him that we grew up with respect of (Arranmore Island)," Cushman said.

Paul Cole, a former island resident and one of the planners for the trip, said, "We are paying respect to our ancestors. It is emotional. It is like a huge circle is coming around again."

The idea for the trip began with a small group of people that were just planning on a vacation in Ireland. The group, which included Cole, Gillespie and former island resident Tara Palmer, discovered a great deal on plane tickets from Chicago, Ill. to Dublin, Ireland late last year.

Soon, other island residents and former residents became interested in the trip, eventually ending with almost 60 people going as a group.

Added to this was the fact that many residents of Arranmore Island had visited Beaver Island about two years ago for a twinning ceremony there. Since then, those Arranmore Island residents had been encouraging Beaver Island residents to come to Ireland for another ceremony.

Cole said because so many islanders were going to Ireland in this trip, it seemed like a great chance to have the Irish twinning ceremony on Arranmore Island.

According to Cole, many of the people on Beaver Island with Irish ancestry came from Arranmore Island in the 1800s and early 1900s when Ireland was suffering from famine and under the control of the British Empire.

To get from Arranmore Island to America, the islanders had to first take a ferry to Donegal Town, in Ireland, where they had to wait for passage to the United States. While a lot of people ended up dying in Donegal Town, many islanders made it to the United States and worked their way to Beaver Island.

Once on Beaver Island, the Irish people began to send money back to Arranmore Island and encourage other islanders to come to America.

> "We are paying respect to our ancestors. It is emotional."
> Paul Cole,
> Traveler to Arranmore Island

Through the years, Beaver Island and Arranmore Island have maintained their connection and Irish culture.

Now, the ancestors of those immigrant people are coming home, Cole said.

"It is a huge thing," he added.

After flying out of Chicago, Ill., the Beaver Island travelers will land in Dublin, Ireland on Thursday. From there, they will be taking a bus to Donegal Town and stay overnight in a hotel.

On Friday, they will travel to Arranmore by ferry and be greeted at the docks by the Arranmore Pipe Band, the local community and a welcoming committee.

To set the tone for the situation, when Arranmore Island residents left the island, those who remained would burn three bonfires for them on the hills overlooking the water. Those bonfires will be burning when the children of these immigrants come back.

After a night of fun and history, residents of Beaver Island and Arranmore Island will gather on Saturday for the unveiling of a memorial. The memorial is a wall over-looking the waters off Arranmore Island. On one end of the wall is a sea-otter, common on the Irish coast, and on the other will be a Beaver.

The Beaver Island travelers will depart Arranmore Island on Sunday and many should be back in the United States by March 14.

Cole added, one of the many significance symbols to the trip will be the travelers' stay in Donegal Town the night before traveling to Arranmore Island.

"The last place a lot of immigrants left (for America) is Donegal Town. So, the first day and night we return, we are staying in the last place the immigrants stayed," he said.

Equalization director for county to retire

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Long-time Charlevoix County employee Carla Spencer will retire March 31 after over 30 years working in the equalization department.

Spencer, a 59-year-old Charlevoix native, started with the department part-time as a clerk in 1966. She then moved into a full-time position March 1, 1969.

After decades of moving up the equalization ranks, she earned her level III certification from the state assessor's board and was appointed director of the department on Jan. 10, 1996.

As director, Spencer said she is responsible for providing the county board of commissioners with property evaluation information. She described the equalization department as "the land information center" where names, addresses and assessing information is kept.

She decided to retire this year after the commissioners passed a retirement program allowing employees to retire at age 55 with 20 years of service.

But the decision wasn't easy, after all these years she has built friendships and an interest in her work.

Spencer said she will miss the people she works with and keeping up with all the county changes. Big upcoming changes she will keep an eye on include the county's development of Geographic Information Systems program and a scanning and imaging program.

"These will be big steps forward for Charlevoix County," she said.

While she watches county changes from the sidelines, she won't be totally out of public life. Spencer plans to continue working with the Charlevoix Public Library Building Committee in planning its new facility.

"I'm going to do all the things required of a retired person," she joked.

For her this also means helping coordinate the Lake Charlevoix Trout Tournament to take place in June, spending time with her husband Gary, children Ember and Jordan and granddaughter Jasmine, continuing her framing and matting hobby and her work with the Eastern Star.

The county is currently accepting resumes for the position of equalization director.

Road commission projects to be scaled back

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix County road projects will likely be scaled back this spring and summer season due to the road commission's budget constraints.

"Money has been down a little bit and over the last couple of years, we have been deficit spending with some township projects," Charlevoix County Road Commission Manager, Pat Harmon, said.

The county road commission recently contacted township administrators to let them know that cost sharing for seal coating projects will be discontinued indefinitely.

The commission will continue cost sharing for gravel projects and will pay for one of three inches of asphalt work.

Harmon said the problem is that 11 of the 15 townships the commission serves have a voted road millage.

"It's getting to the point where we don't have the funds to match everyone — they have more money to spend than we have to match," he said.

Another possible issue is rising gas prices, because the commission is funded in part by the gas tax.

"If gas sales are down, the money coming in the front door is down. People might not go as far as they did in years past. Unemployment is up and there isn't going to be extra like there was when the economy was going good. People will have to cut back," Harmon said.

The commission plans to complete cost sharing projects it committed to last summer, but won't be adding any to the list.

"We asked the townships to give us a little room to see if we can get back on our feet. We can't keep deficit spending, if we do that we'll be in big trouble," Harmon said.

Figures as to how much the commission will save by discontinuing cost sharing for seal coating have not been calculated.

Projects it will follow up with in Eveline Township include seal coating 3.5 miles of Ridge Road from Ferry Avenue to Peninsula Road and some improvements to the north end of Phelps Road.

Marion Township has four gravel projects that will be completed. Hayes Township has a long list of carry-over items and Charlevoix Township has no projects to be carried over from last year.

Eveline Township levies one mill for roads which brings in approximately $170,000 annually.

Eveline Township Supervisor Dan Skrzeczkoski said when township administrators discussed road projects for 2003 that would be funded using the millage money they discussed both cost sharing and non-cost sharing projects. He said the cost sharing projects will be put off until 2004 and non-cost sharing projects will be pursued.

"For 2003 we'll have to readjust some plans, back off one year," he said.

Skrzeczkoski said the township generally seal coats at least a couple miles every year to keep up. But he said without the commission's help its hard to say whether they will fall behind.

"We'll probably have to look at dropping back on road rebuilding projects to keep up with seal coating," he said.

In Marion Township, 1.5 mills are levied for roads, bringing in about $65,000 annually.

Marion Township Supervisor Bud Boss said fewer projects will get done in the township, but they will bid out some seal coating. The township is on a five year rotation for seal coating and does approximately four miles of work a year.

In Hayes Township .9534 mill is levied for roads which brings in $126,135 a year.

Hayes Township supervisor Timothy Boyko said in spite of the cutback the township will be OK.

Charlevoix Township trustee Dale Glass said he could not comment on the effect of the cuts on the township's budget because the board had not yet discussed what roads need repair.

While the township's will do some seal coating they'll have to pay more for the work and will be able to do less for the amount of money they put in.

Skrzeczkoski said with cost sharing the township's portion for one mile of seal coating was between $8,000 and $9,000. Under the new setup, having to bid the projects out to independent contractors, it will cost between $12,000 and $13,000 per mile.

While this decision does mean cost sharing is down, it doesn't mean county residents and visitors will have to bump along pothole ridden roads this spring and summer. Harmon assured that regular road maintenance, like patching potholes and smoothing gravel roads, will get done.

The commission spends one-third of its budget in the winter for snow removal and salt costs. The budget took a big hit this past summer due to costs at both its Ironton and Boyne City facilities to build salt sheds. It is cost sharing for this project with the state but will still pay $500,000.

The budget crunch will not affect road commission employees at this time.

Barnard family delivers strong message at Kelsey Cup ceremony

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

> "Don't let someone take advantage of you, stand up for yourself, your life is in their hands,"
> Karlee Barnard
> Kelsey Barnard's sister

There wasn't a dry eye in the Charlevoix High School auditorium the morning of Feb. 27 during the first Kelsey Cup Memorial Award ceremony.

The athletic award is the first to honor a Charlevoix High School student. It recognizes a male and female student on the ski team who exemplify the spirit of Kelsey Barnard whose life was cut short Aug. 5, 2002 when he was a passenger in a tragic car wreck in Ironton.

Kelsey was 15 when he died and was already an accomplished skier. He started skiing when he was just 3-years-old. During his first year competing with the high school ski team he helped the team reach a conference championship and earn second place finishes in the regional and state finals. He was honorable mention all conference giant slalom, all regional team and all state boy's first team.

He was considered among the top five skiers in his age group in the world.

"He hoped to one day make the Olympic team and I know he might have," Kelsey's mother; Sue Barnard, said.

Kelsey left behind his legacy as a fierce competitor which his teammates carry with them at each competition. Sue recently approached high school athletic director Jim Kanine with an interest in keeping Kelsey's memory alive through an athletic award.

She and fellow ski team mom Mary Lou Smith and Kanine ultimately came up with The Kelsey Cup Memorial Award.

Michelle Fritsch was the first girl to receive the award and York Smith was the first boy.

Kyle Kramer accepted the award on behalf of Smith who was competing in a downhill competition. He read a statement from Smith about what an honor receiving an award in Kelsey's name is for him. It also included a message to Kelsey.

"When the day comes and I reach those pearly gates, have the course set Kels because I'll be ready to race," he wrote.

The award ceremony and the award itself carried and will carry into the future, a strong message for students that reckless driving isn't cool.

"Kelsey did not die in an automobile accident, accidents happen when it can't be prevented. Kelsey made the fatal mistake of riding in a car with another teen he didn't know who was reckless and irresponsible and disregarded his own safety, his sister's and Kelsey's," she said. "In his last minutes, Kelsey wasn't impressed with this kid."

Kelsey's sister Karlee urged students in attendance to understand that they don't earn respect by driving recklessly.

"Don't let someone take advantage of you, stand up for yourself, your life is in their hands," she said.

At the end of a slide show set to the song, "I want it all" depicting photos of Kelsey's life, a message splashed across the screen telling students to honor Kelsey by making quality choices. And to "play hard, stay safe and be happy."

Each student was given a key chain with this motto engraved on it.

Grand funding cycle underway

The Spring 2003 grant funding cycle is currently underway, putting local charitable dollars to work to enhance the community.

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation and the Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation invite local nonprofit organizations, educational institutions and municipalities who are in need of funding to submit grant requests to support their projects.

During the next few months, the community foundations and its Youth Advisory Committees will review grant proposals to help fund health initiatives, community development projects, education, the arts and cultural events, environmental efforts and human service programs.

The youth committees, who are made up of teenage representatives from throughout Charlevoix and Emmet Counties, will recommend awards to programs that address children and teenage issues.

Successful applicants must serve residents of Emmet or Charlevoix Counties and have a nonprofit tax status. The proposals must meet a community need or provide life enrichment programs, projects or services for area residents.

Grants are not normally given for general operations.

The deadline for grant requests is April 1.

Grant applications are available by calling the appropriate foundation office. All applicants must call and discuss their proposals in advance. Foundation staff is available to offer advice and assistance to organizations interested in applying for funds.

Reading program discusses new book

The Little Traverse Community Reads program has a new name and a renewed sense of direction.

The group, which started last fall, has recently targeted readers in Charlevoix, Boyne City, Mackinaw City and all other corners of the Little Traverse Bay region. The group has also announced plans for their upcoming book selections.

Following on the success for their first three selection, the community based reading organization has decided to make Laura Hillenbrand's "Seabiscuit" its next book. Published in 2000, "Seabiscuit" is the story of horse racing's most unlikely champion. The book details the adventures of the racehorse no one thought would amount to anything, as well as his owner, his trainer, and his jockey.

"Seabiscuit" enjoyed nearly a year long stay on the New York Times Bestseller list.

In addition, the program, which is made up of interested readers around the Little Traverse Bay region, has selected "The Nick Adams Stories" by Ernest Hemingway, "The Abolition of Man" by C.S. Lewis, and "The Watsons Go To Birmingham" by Christopher Paul Curtis.

The group reads and discusses on average one book every four months.

The group's steering committee is made up of readers from the area, including booksellers, teachers, lawyers, business people and librarians. The group welcomes interested readers to join in helping to select new books or in simply coming out for the discussions that follow the reading of each book.

Started without a name by a group of concerned readers, including Petoskey High School English teacher Glen Young and retired Petoskey area physician John Tanton; the group invites any reader with an interest to participate, as well, readers are offered the opportunity to suggest titles for future consideration.

Young and the other members of the steering committee hope to consider books that offer enduring messages, have the potential for lively discussion and might spur readers to conversation outside the confines of their discussion group.

The group also looks for books that might appeal to readers of all ages and backgrounds. Similar programs have taken place in cities such as Chicago, Ill. and Traverse City.

The public discussion for "Seabiscuit" will take place at 7 p.m. Monday, May 5 at the Bear Creek Township Hall and at 7 p.m., Tuesday, May 6 at the Charlevoix Public Library.

All readers are invited to one or both sessions.

For further information please contact Val Meyerson at 547-2651 or Glenn Young at 348-9877.

Students going to leadership conference

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Four of Charlevoix's "best and brightest" are headed to Washington D.C. for a nationwide Congressional Student Leadership Conference.

Charlevoix High School government teacher Annmarie Conway nominated 12 students to attend the conference. Of those 12, Chuck Mason, a freshman and sophomores Tom Aepelbacher, Chris Golski and Mitchell Klooster have opted to take advantage of the opportunity.

"This is a great opportunity," Klooster said.

Conway said the goal is to give the students an up close look at how Congress works and to build their leadership skills.

"They'll get to go into the top levels of government, talk to Congressional leaders and really see the insides of how Congress operates," she said.

The students leave for the conference March 11 and return March 16. During the week-long process they will visit Capitol Hill, attend government simulations and meet with local government representatives.

"I think it will be really interesting to meet politically important people in government like senators and representatives and find out what actually goes on in government right now," Mason said.

Students will receive one college credit for attending. The cost to each is $1,000.

"It's pretty expensive, but I think the benefit outweighs the cost," Klooster said.

The students are currently organizing fundraisers to help pay for the trip. To donate contact the school at (231) 547-3222. For more information about the conference visit www.leadamerica.org.

Volleyball team takes district title

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix's Varsity Rayder Volleyball team took home the district trophy after an eight-year dry spell.

"Charlevoix hasn't won a district since I was a senior (1995). Two years ago the team didn't win a game, this is a big accomplishment for volleyball," head coach Liz Grunch said. "It was a great feeling, the girls really deserved it. They worked hard all year and it paid off."

The Rayder Volleyball team went into district play with a big win under its belt and took home the title of district champions.

The team handily beat Traverse City St. Francis in their last game of the regular season Feb. 27 at home. Match scores were 15-4 and 16-14.

Leading the team offensively were Kari Way and Natashia Kleiber with seven and five kills respectively and Becca Kanine with eight assists.

On defense Theresa Martin tallied three blocks while Kleiber and Shayna Drost fended off the St. Francis attack.

That win landed the Rayders in second place in the Lake Michigan Conference and brought their regular season ending record to 9-3.

This was a powerful way to gear up for districts which took place March 1 in Suttons Bay.

"They are a young team and from the beginning I said they had the potential to win districts, but it depended on how hard they were willing to work," Grunch said.

She added that hard work and dedication won them the district championship.

The Rayders started out district play manhandling Mancelona 15-4 and 15-6.

Then, they moved on to play East Jordan, a team they have beaten twice in the regular season, and had no problem stopping at the tournament. Final scores were 15-1 and 15-11.

District finals pitted Suttons Bay and Charlevoix against one another. But Suttons Bay's strong offense was no match for the Rayder team who won 17-15 and 15-9.

For the three-match afternoon, four team members blazed the offensive trail with multiple kills. Way had 26, Kleiber has 21, Andrea Ruhlman had 11 and Martin had eight.

Martin added to her stellar performance with a strong showing from the serving line where she delivered 27 for 27 serves with two aces. Kanine helped set the offensive tone with 34 assists.

Leading the defense in district play were Kleiber, Way and Drost with help from their teammates.

"We had some great attack from Jessica Pettis from the right side and strong defensive play from Amanda Boss and Erin Burns," Grunch said.

The volleyball team will now move on to the regional competition where they will first face Rogers City at 11:30 a.m., March 8 at Boyne City.

Charlevoix did not face Rogers City during the regular season.

"They are pretty tough. It will be a good challenge for us," Grunch said.

It is a four team tournament. If Charlevoix beats Rogers City they will face the winner of the Pine River, Forest Area match.

Rayders lose chance for conference title tie

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix High School basketball team's run for a piece of the Lake Michigan Championship ended Friday night in a loss to Traverse City St. Francis, 62-60.

Coach Keith Haske said while the game was back-and-forth all night, the Rayders were having trouble shooting the ball. But, the real trouble came in the fourth quarter, when Charlevoix missed some key free throws and Traverse City got a last minute run.

With only 10 seconds to go, Traverse City St. Francis scored to put them over the Rayders by two. When Charlevoix got the ball back, their chances at sending the game into overtime ended when Scott Friske's shot in the last second bounced off the rim.

Haske said the loss was "very disapointing."

High scorers for the game were Friske with 26 points and 21 rebounds, Bryce Daly with eight points and Nate Teuscher with four rebounds, four assists and three steals.

This loss came on the heals of a nice win Feb. 25 against Kalkaska, 75-61.

Haske said, in that game, Charlevoix played very good defense and shot the ball well.

High scorers were: Friske with 23 points and 11 rebounds. Drew Wright with 16 points and six rebounds, Travis Smith with nine points, Teuscher with four rebounds and eight assists and Daly with five assists.

Charlevoix will be in the Lake Michigan Conference district tournament this week. The Rayders will play Boyne City at 8 p.m., today, Wednesday, at Boyne City High School.

Boyne City beat Mancelona on Monday to advance in the tournament. This will be the third time Charlevoix will have faced Boyne City. The Rayders beat them twice in the regular season in close games.

The winner of today's game will go on to the district final at 7 p.m., Friday at Boyne City High School.

Good start for young Rayder wrestling team

The Charlevoix Middle/Elementary wrestling team is off to a good start this year.

They began the season this past Saturday at the Petoskey tournament taking home 26 medals.

Medal winners for the middle school were Ray Jones and Hunter Johnstone taking first place; second place finishers were Nick Gottshall, Nate Golovich, Clinton Longley, Nate Tripplehorn, Zack Sharenbroch, Zeke Damon, Mat Golovich and Shawn Kiernan; third place winners were John Aimesbury, Scott Plude, Jacob Wimmer and Pat Russell.

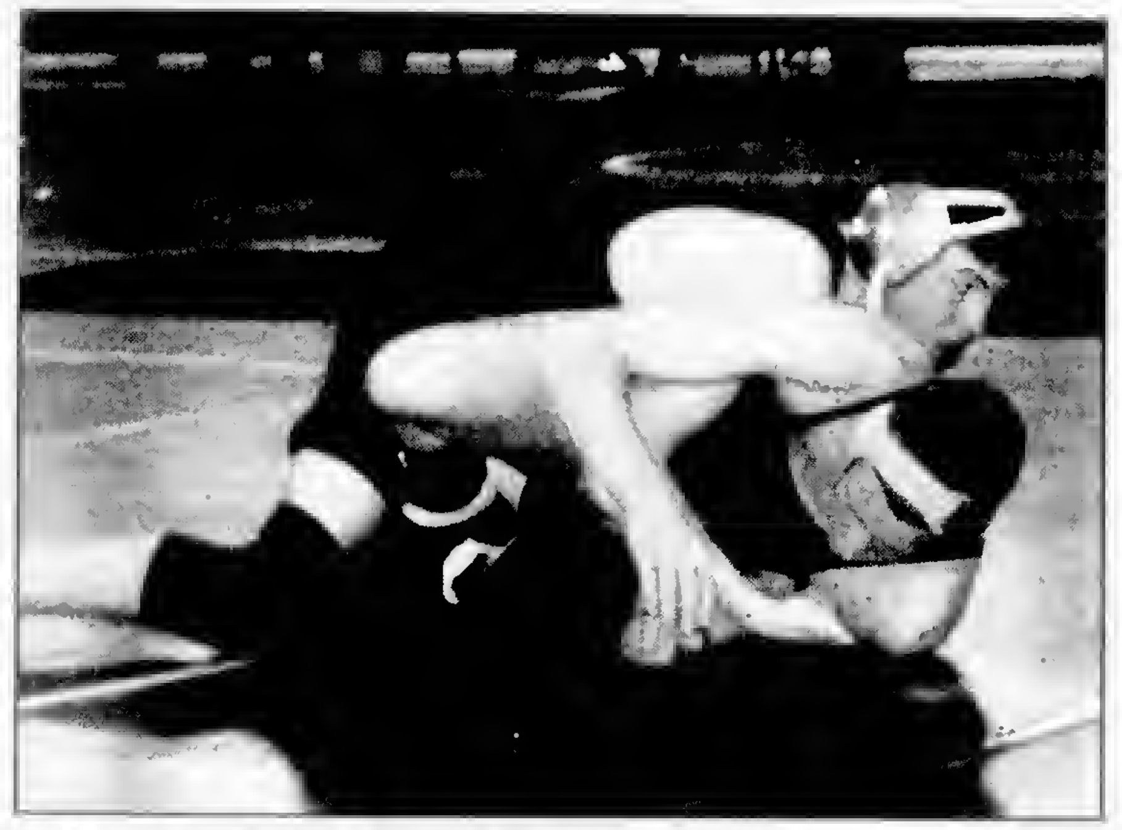
"There's a lot of potential this year with our returning wrestlers, as well as the addition of several new kids. They have all been working hard and will be great. It's going to be a good season,"Coach Craig Golovich said. "We have eleven eighth graders, including some tough heavyweights, who I hope will continue on into high school to build on our varsity team. I'm real excited about that."

The team's next tournament will be at 9:30 this Saturday, March 8 at home in the Charlevoix Middle School gym.



Wrestlers compete

On Feb. 15, seven members of the Charlevoix High School wrestling team traveled to Rogers City for the individual districts. There were thirteen teams in the district competing. Chris Aepelbacher was the only wrestler that pulled through placing fourth. On Saturday, Feb. 22 Chris Aepelbacher completed at the Regional Tournament in Ithaca. He went 0-2 for the day finishing off a great season. "Chris Lahr and Danny Possert are the only two seniors that won't be returning next year. They have been a positive asset to the team," said Coach Craig Golovich. (Above) Charlevoix's Chris Aepelbacher ties up his opponent. (Courtesy photo)

Children diagnosed with rare disease

are hoping to sell 500 tickets for the event.

After finding out all three kids had been diagnosed with MLD, Sam Supernaw Jr. contacted Lenore Morgridge and said, "This is bigger than anyone thought it could be; we need to do something."

They have since gotten to work with several other friends of Jeff and Jane's and worked to coordinate the summer event and to set up a tax exempt foundation, The Charlevoix Coalition Against MLD.

"I was so stunned, what a wonderful thing to do," Marcia said.

Don added that when he discussed the event with organizers they told him, "Remember, Jeff is one of ours."

To donate to the auction or to help organize or fund the event, contact Supernaw at (231) 547-9661.

The family has received tremendous support from the Community Reformed Church where Don and Marcia are members and from people across the globe who offer prayers and support via their Internet web site.

The site, www.caringbridge.org/mi/trimpermld, offers daily updates on Max's progress. Since it has been up and running the site has received 1,200 hits a day.

"So many people have thanked us for sharing this and being so open," Don said.

In the future, the thanks will likely come from MLD patients whose treatments and knowledge of the disease is available in part because of the Trimper family's vigilance in spreading the word about this "low profile" disease.

Jane told Marcia she has always wondered what her purpose in life was, and now, she knows. The couple plan to continue to be spokespeople for MLD.

"They want to do something to get moving on this disease, for their kids and other kids too," Don said.

The issue will likely take on a national audience when Jeff and Jane tell their story on NBC's "the Today Show." No date has been set for airing.

To send correspondence by mail to Jeff and Jane, their address is 621 Oak Street Southeast, Room 422, Minneapolis, Minn. 55414.

Board of health has first meeting

There were several new faces around the table when the board of health had its February meeting.

That's because half of the members of the board of health are new to this governing board which oversees the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency (health department) and its broad range of activities.

County boards appointed commissioners to the board of health in January, following last fall's election. Over the next several months, board of health members will be learning in-depth about many services the health department currently offers.

"It's important for new board of health members to understand what we do and why we do it," Gerry Chase, health officer for the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, said. "We're expecting additional budget cuts from the Michigan Department of Community Health and when they come, the board of health will be ready to make informed decisions."

The Board of Health is comprised of two commissioners from each of the county boards from the four counties served by the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency: Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego Counties.

Their first order of business was to nominate officers to the board of health. Allan Bentz, from Otsego County, will serve as chairman. Vice-chairman will be Jack Jones, from Emmet County. Other members are Larry Bargy and Bernard Blackmore, representing Antrim County; Vic Patrick and Valerie Snyder, from Charlevoix County; Alan Behan, from Emmet County; and Jeff Garfield from Otsego County.

The members of the board of health meet at 10 a.m. on the first Tuesday of the month, at the Charlevoix offices of the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agcney.

The meetings of the board of health are open with time set aside for public comment. For additional information, telephone Chase at (231) 547-6238.

Cruise ship expects to dock in Round Lake

Company Chris Conlin said the plan is to come though the channel into Round Lake. The Mariner is uniquely designed to travel through shallow water and narrow channels with its draft of only 6 feet 6 inches and beam width of 40 feet.

The Pine River Channel is approximately 90 feet wide leaving 25 feet of space on either side of the vessel as it makes its way through.

City Manager Mike Wiesner said he has not been contacted by a Great Lakes Cruise Company representative. And whether or not the Mariner will be able to dock in Round Lake depends on when the boat is here and what is available.

With summer already hopping in town, some may wonder what good a cruise ship will do here in August. Both Conlin and Merta feel the cruises will increase the town's economic vitality.

Conlin said that because Charlevoix is a start point he sees the opportunity for Grande Mariner patrons booking extended stays in town, bringing money to hotels.

"Charlevoix is a beautiful city, people will come in to shop and dine, I think Charlevoix has a lot to gain," he said.

Merta agrees and said that is why the chamber joined Cruise Michigan, an organization that opened the door for ships like the Grande Mariner to come to town. While Merta had not confirmed the upcoming visits with Great Lakes Cruises, she said the chamber is supportive of the initiative.

"The idea being this ship is like a floating hotel, people come to town and spend money, they shop, they grab something to eat," she said.

This added commerce is why Merta said Traverse City, Manistee, Mackinac Island and Northport are also on this summer's list for Great Lakes Cruise Company's cruise destinations.

Aside from the money cruise goers may bring to town she said the ship itself is an attractive feature for Charlevoix.

"It's like seeing the Coast Guard ship at the dock, it says that Charlevoix is a boater's destination or a yachter's destination," she said.

The eight-day Lake Superior trips are scheduled to take place Aug. 3-11, Aug. 12-20 and Aug. 30-Sept. 3. For more information visit www.greatlakescruising.com.

World Day of Prayer to be celebrated at First Congregational in Charlevoix

All men and women in the community are invited to attend.

Led by women across denominations, the day is set aside for coming together in study and prayer to bringing into the world peace and justice and a closer relationship with God. The first World Day of Prayer service was on Jan. 9, 1930 and movement spread rapidly through the world.

It was decided to have World Day of Prayer on the first Friday of March each year. On the same day every year, sisters and brothers in Christ from all nationalities and denominations come together under a common theme.

World Day of Prayer services are given in 180 countries worldwide. The yearly service prayer is translated into more than 1,000 languages. The 2003 prayer theme is "Holy Spirit, Fill Us."

Grey Gables joins theater in Second Sunday

Many Charlevoix non-profit organizations have been the recipients of hundreds of dollars as the result of the generosity of Bill Supernaw at Cinema III who donates one dollar from every ticket sold to the "Second Sunday Film Series."

One dollar of each brunch reservation will be donated to a designated local non-profit group. Cost of the brunch is $13.95 with food service at the Grey Gables beginning at 11:30 a.m. and ending at 2 p.m. when the art film at the cinema is scheduled to start.

Wal-Mart looking at land on south side

WAL-MART

Wisniewski stressed that any plans he has seen are very preliminary.

"A lot of times I get this information and nothing happens," he said.

Wisniewski said preliminary plans indicate a possible entrance and exit on Marion Center Road and a possible entrance and exit on US-31.

While all of this information has come to light, company officials and property owners remain silent. Representatives from Wal-Mart did not return calls from the Courier last week.

Al Wojan, who owns the main property being looked at next to the Flight Deck bar, also had no comment at this time.

According to information obtained by the Charlevoix Courier, real estate agents for Wal-Mart have assembled several of the properties necessary for its plans in the Marion Center Road and US-31 area. Purchase agreements have been made on some of those properties.

This information concerns at least one neighbor of the properties.

Tom Conlan, general manager of the Belvedere Golf Club, which owns the Belvedere Golf Course on Marion Center, said he was not aware that Wal-Mart was interested in land by him.

He added, "I don't think a Wal-Mart is an appropriate neighbor for the Belvedere Golf Course."

A big question on the minds of many in the community is: How will this affect the businesses already in Charlevoix?"

Hugh Mason, member of the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority, said he doesn't think it will hurt the downtown businesses and pointed out there were similar concerns in the community when Kmart came in on M-66.

"People don't come to Charlevoix for a Wal-Mart," he said.

Mason added, "My concerns with Wal-Mart are is there enough business to support that store?"

Dennis Anderson, store manager of the Kmart on M-66, said a Wal-Mart will not hurt his store as much as the local grocery stores.

Anderson said because there is already a Wal-Mart Supercenter in Petoskey, the Charlevoix Kmart has already adjusted its pricing to compete with them.

"To be competitive, we have already got to address them as if they were here," he said.

As for why Wal-Mart would have a supercenter in Charlevoix and Petoskey, Anderson pointed out Kmart has a store in Charlevoix as well as Petoskey.

"They are two different populations," he said. "Charlevoix pulls from East Jordan, Ellsworth and a lot of small communities with people that don't always drive up to Petoskey more than once a week."

Anderson said Wal-Mart probably realizes that if Kmart can support a store in Petoskey and Charlevoix, it could too.

Bob Borths, store manager at Oleson's Market on Antrim Street, said a Wal-Mart Supercenter will "definitely" affect his store.

"Everyone is going to feel it. It is not pretty, that is for sure," he said.

Cuts for school budgets lower

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Recent state budget news has bright and dark sides for Charlevoix Public Schools.

Gov. Jennifer Granholm is proposing to keep per pupil funding at its 2002-2003 level for the 2003-2004 school year. But, Charlevoix students counting on cashing in on high MEAP scores will have to look elsewhere for some of that scholarship money.

Granholm announced her $38.6 billion budget proposal Feb. 6 with nearly 39 percent going to education.

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Dr. John Sturock said it was encouraging to see that her priorities are education and children.

Granholm's proposed budget keeps the per pupil funding at its current level, $6,700 per student. This means for the 2003-2004 school year, the proposed budget would restore money that was cut this month to fix a $127 million school aid budget deficit.

Sturock said this is good news in light of earlier discussions that forecasted an 11 percent decrease in funding, but he isn't counting

Study on middle school comes back

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A presentation about future uses of the Charlevoix Middle School revealed the school could be converted to a library or a community center or a mix of both.

"It will fit, now the question is that a good or a bad fit," Bill Williams, an architect with Engberg Anderson Design Partnership, Inc., of Milwaukee, Wis., said.

Charlevoix Public Library Director Valerie Meyerson said this is a question the community has to answer.

Engberg Anderson is Charlevoix Public Library's consulting group that was hired in mid-December by Charlevoix's Downtown Development Authority (DDA) to pursue a study at the school. The DDA agreed to pay up to $32,500 for the group to look at reuse of the building located off Grant Street in the city of Charlevoix.

Two possible reuse options that were explored included use of the school as a library and use of the school as a community center.

Williams presented the results of this study at a meeting March 5.

The analysis of the building which was built in 1927 included studies by different teams of experts including Early Environmental Consulting, Inc. of Traverse City who looked at asbestos removal and Grand Traverse Construction, Inc. who evaluated the structure itself.

All this information combined to conclude that the building is in good shape and could be converted.

The new Charlevoix Public Library, which will require 20,000 square feet of space, will fit into the old school's first and second floors with major work needed to meet load bearing requirements on the second floor. The current library is 6,700 square feet.

Using the second floor for library purposes would require a major

Chamber proposes potty trailer plan

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Representatives of the Chamber of Commerce would like to ease the burden of finding an available public bathroom in downtown Charlevoix by locating a mobile trailer facility in East Park.

John Campbell, newly appointed chairman of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors, presented the proposal to those who attended the chamber sponsored First Friday Business Breakfast March 7 at Grey Gables.

He said the chamber has been working on this idea for about two months.

The plan involves a 48 foot semi-trailer that is 8 feet wide and can be bought, painted and used for years. The trailer has its own plumbing system and offers three women's toilets and sinks, four individual showers and three men's urinal, sink and toilet units.

In looking at what is available, Campbell discovered these units are often used on movie sets and he described them as "pretty posh" and a far cry from the typical "porta potty."

Aside from having its own plumbing, the trailer is handicapped accessible by ramp, has vinyl flooring, laminate on the walls, light fixtures, exhaust fans, hot and cold running water and all the extras.

The chamber is proposing to place the trailer behind the bandshell in East Park and after park renovations are complete, placing it on a side street so it's accessible.

Campbell said the benefit of this system is it will have more longevity than putting money into the current facility which will be replaced when East Park is renovated starting in 2005.

"We want to make Charlevoix a nice place to come to," he said.

However, city manager Mike Wiesner said he doesn't feel there is a public bathroom problem and the city adequately responds to demand for public bathrooms by providing portable units around town during peak times.

"To me its almost better to spread the availability out. That seems to work pretty well," he said.

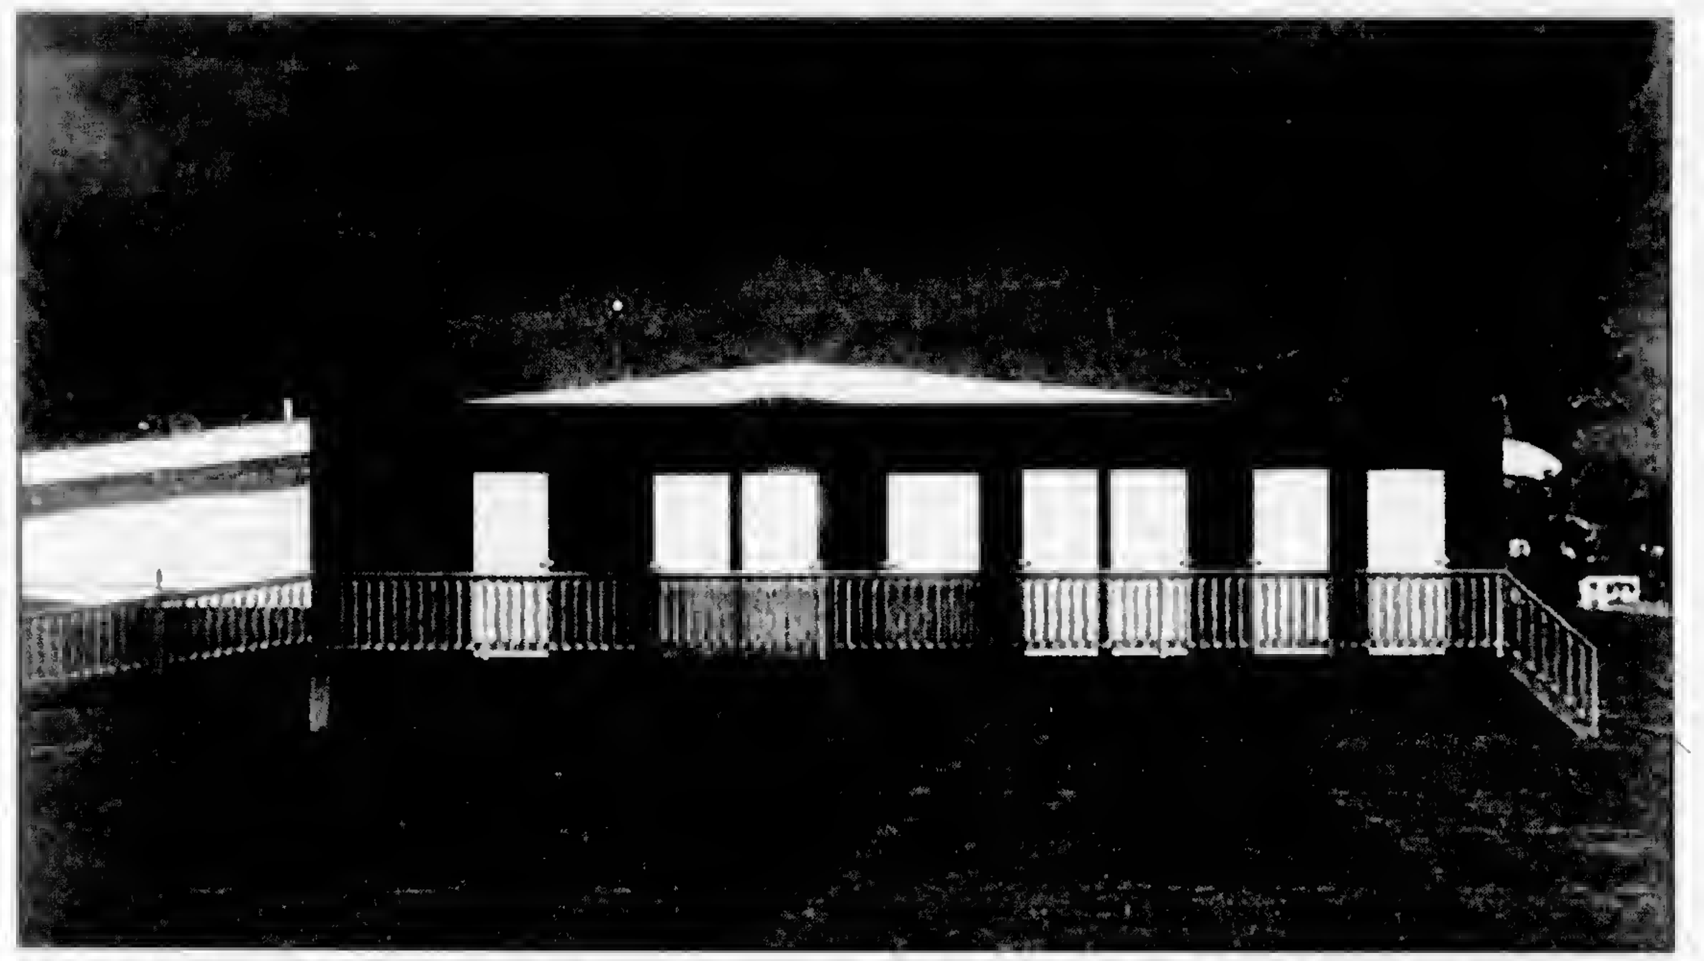
The city currently offers public bathrooms at the chamber and harbormaster's building at both street level and below. In Bridge Park, there are handicapped accessible public bathrooms in the below grade building. There are also public bathrooms at city hall that Wiesner said aren't easy to get to.

The trailer proposal was not included in the 2003-2004 budget, which will be discussed at a public hearing to take place at 7 p.m., March 17. The cost for this proposal is unknown at this time.

In the budget, there has been money put aside to do some repairs to the lower level marina bathrooms and upper level bathrooms at the chamber and harbormaster's building.

"We've looked at these units before. And as I think to the future and the downtown park plan, we will have additional permanent public bathrooms at the marina office facility at the foot of Clinton Street and at the bandshell where the current chamber building is now. That, tied with having porta potties spread throughout should take care of it," Wiesner said.

Campbell said chamber representatives will bring the idea before the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority (DDA) in the near future. If there are agenda items, the DDA will meet at 5:30 p.m. March 24 at city hall.



This trailer was superimposed on a picture of the bandshell to show what a similar project might look like in the park if the Downtown Devlopment authority opts to move forward with the chamber's proposal. (Courtesy graphic)

Editor trying to understand the war push

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

I tried, I really did at first.

I tried to believe the president when he said we should go to war with Iraq, even when others in his administration were saying it wasn't a very good idea. I tried to believe his administration when they said Iraq was a bigger threat to us than North Korea, who already has nuclear weapons. I tried hard to support the president, even when he said Iraq was connected to Osama bin Laden and Al Qaeda, which even the CIA said is untrue.

But then, rational thought overcame me.

This military buildup in the Middle East in preparation for a "possible" war with Iraq does not make sense to me. While there are many reasons against going to war, here are just a few of them.

First of all, the pro-war people are saying Iraq has weapons of mass destruction and needs to disarm. But, we have not yet seen any solid evidence of those weapons of mass destruction. That information is slowly coming out with United Nation inspections.

Rather than let the inspectors continue to work, President George Bush and his administration seem to be trying to jump into war quickly. If they want the rest of us to fully understand their concern, they need to let the inspectors continue to do their jobs, thus adding more evidence from an outside source.

Meanwhile, North Korea is saying it has nuclear weapons, is talking about war and kicking out international nuclear inspectors. But, Bush says he is just going to deal with this immediate and real threat through diplomacy.

Second, the president keeps trying to tie in Iraq and the terrorist group Al Qaeda, which are run by Osama bin Laden and were behind the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks. However, there is no evidence of this and there is actually evidence to the contrary.

Even the CIA has said Hussein has no ties to Al Qaeda and is actually hated by bin Laden. In fact, none of the hijackers on those planes that hit the World Trade Center and the Pentagon were from Iraq. A majority of them were from Saudi Arabia.

Third, the president keeps saying if the United Nations does not agree to action in Iraq, the United States is willing to go alone. It is not a good idea to go against the world and be seen as the bully.

In order for true world peace to happen, we need the entire world's help. When we just decide to go it alone and invade another country, that flies in the face of world peace and makes us look like the bad guys in the eyes of the citizens of many other countries.

Now, you may say, "Who cares?" Well, we all should. Our world is not such a big place anymore. Our economy, our peace and the success of our future depends on other countries working with us.

Countries that flout the international will, both now and historically, are countries like North Korea, Iraq and Afghanistan under Taliban rule. It is kind of odd that we would treat the world's opinion in the same way as our enemies would.

Fourth, this just sounds like a disaster waiting to happen. Once in Iraq, the fighting will most likely take place within the cities and in close quarters, creating a very bloody situation for both sides. Then, once we do win, the United States will need to occupy the land for many years and it will cost a heck of a lot of money.

Plus, anyone who thinks we will not create more enemies by being an occupying force in a Middle Eastern country, certainly does not read history. Just ask every other country that has tried to use an army to create peace in the Middle East — a place where some people are not afraid to put bombs on their bodies and blow themselves up to make a point.

Fifth, but certainly not the last reason, many pro-war people are saying those who speak out against a possible war in Iraq are unpatriotic.

If it is patriotic to just sit passively by and let the government do something you don't agree with and if it is patriotic to just follow the leader of your country with no question, then our modern view of patriotism is skewed. Under this thinking, Thomas Jefferson, Sam Adams and even George Washington were not patriots. The loyalists to the king of England, who just followed their leader without question and let the government trample on their rights, were the patriots.

Let me sum this all up with one final point. Right now our economy is in the dumps, our rights are being taken away in the name of safety and an insane regime that runs North Korea is playing around with nukes, yet we are focusing on a bad guy in a Middle Eastern country who we are not sure is a threat or not.

I tried to understand, but what am I missing?

Resident makes a living fixing wedding issues

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

Think of Kris Rundblad as your fairy godmother, that is, if you ever find yourself in charge of a corporate event, or are planning a wedding for your daughter and several hundred of your closest friends.

Kris will see to it that you can freely socialize with your guests while elements outdoors rage with unexpected high winds and rain. She will see to it that a wet dance floor is replaced and she will — instead of you — rise the plumber out of bed to come and fix a broken pipe. She will calm down an overzealous disc jockey or a fix a wedding cake that looks like the leaning tower of Pisa.

She will handle a cheeky photographer, who brings uninvited guests to the wedding. Really, this happens!

Kris started her business, Merry Makers, fulltime in 1997, and now covers weddings and birthday parties from Harbor Springs to Grand Rapids. She works with a team of local vendors who can produce anything one wants and something that is equal or better than what is available in Chicago or New York. In addition, the vendors she works with here are a great team.

When an out of state florist or a group of musicians are brought up north for a special occasion, they are delighted to find a high level of cooperation among the local vendors, more so than elsewhere, I'm told.

Kris was born and raised in Lansing, graduated from Ferris State and attended Michigan State University, where she specialized in commercial art and advertising. In 1980 she moved "temporarily" to Charlevoix and has stayed here ever since.

Water is important

Editor:

Did you hear it? That first spring thaw and the sound of water running across sidewalks and lawns and into street drains. Maybe you even made a little channel with your boot or shovel and watched in fascination as the water changed directions and patterns.

Spring rains will soon turn those little trivial rivulets into rushing streams, cleansing the land and carrying the sediment and refuse of the winter into our streams and rivers and lakes. This spring, take a moment to pay attention to where the stormwater runoff goes — watch and listen.

Notice how pavement and roof tops (impervious surfaces) speeds

the flow of water to the drains and lakes. Stop in parking lots and look into the black space of the parking lot drain. Notice the new basins around shopping centers that allow run-off to slowly sink into the ground to recharge the water table. Trace with your eyes and imagination, where the water goes. In the fascinating journey of water, from frozen snow men in back yards to parking lot snow piles, how water makes it's way to our lakes and beautiful Lake Michigan determines the quality of our beaches, the quality of our fisheries, the quality of our lives and the economics of our region.

Governor Granholm and new DEQ head, Steven E. Chester, have committed themselves to protecting the waters of Michigan. On a local level, we have a right and a responsibility to ensure that our city, township and county ordinances protect water quality. Northern Michigan is unique. Our cold water streams still support trout populations. Our expanses of clean beaches are rare in the world. But without care and protection, the rush of sediment and pollution caused by unwise development can turn streams into drains, will destroy the fishery and will degrade our beaches.

The streams, wetlands, underground aquifers and inland lakes are all connected to the Great Lakes in an interdependent web, forming one great hydrologic system. Our activities on the land determine the quality of our water, and the quality of our lives is rooted in the quality of our water. Those little streams of melt water have a lesson for us. Listen! Our livelihoods and our lives depend on it.

Stop harming the Bill of Rights

Editor:

I would like to thank United States Attorney General John Ashcroft for trying to dismantle the Bill of Rights. Hitler could never have done for Germany what he did if the Germans had a Bill of Rights.

The so-called USA Patriot Act and The Domestic Security Enhancement Act of 2003, will erase the Bill of Rights. I never believed I would live to see a reenactment of the 1930s, especially by America, the land of the free and home of the brave.

God Bless America.

Proud of team

Editor:

To the Charlevoix Rayder Basketball team, thank you.

Ryan DeYoung, Matt Burtt and Mike Rosen, though your playing time is minimal, your dedication to the team is second to none. There is no one that gives more unselfishly. You are the glue of this team.

Spencer Bryan and Donovan Swanson, for being walls that stand very strong, but can topple at the perfect time.

Cody Crain and Ben Bergmann, for having the courage to move up and be future leaders of this team.

John DiMartino, for patiently waiting for your time and playing as big as anyone out there.

David Shearer, for your ability to take on any task asked of you. Your intellect shows on the court.

Bryce Daly, for your exceptional skills and vision on the floor. You make the difficult seem so effortless.

Travis Smith for your endless energy and determination. Your flight pattern around the court is truly fun to watch.

Nate Teuscher, for being the fuel that makes this team go and backing down to nothing.

Todd Carey, for playing as big as the biggest, as strong as the strongest. You are a silent hero.

Drew Wright, we all knew you had it and we're glad you found it. Your intensity has solidified the team.

Scott Friske, your presence alone can change the game. Your focus and desire should be taught in the classroom.

Keith Haske, Brett Erskine and Bryan Hawkins, for helping these boys build character and heart.

In closing, the above are individuals, all with unique strengths who come together and play as a team, whose successes or failures bring a whole community together as one.

We're proud of you all.

Getting an experienced wedding coordinator costly

Her experience working in management positions in local restaurants over the years has been very helpful in her current venture. She married Ted Rundblad, a metallurgist, who is employed at East Jordan Iron Works, and she is now the proud mother of a son Lee, 19, daughter Katie, 13, and Rob 11. The two youngest attend Charlevoix Middle School.

One of the most unusual Merry Maker events that Kris planned locally was christened the "Groom's Retreat." The groom wanted to take a shower after the wedding and before changing into his going away outfit.

Since the wedding site was located under a tent on the shores of Lake Michigan, Kris suggested, "Why not take a dip in the lake?"

The idea took hold and this unusual send-off ended up with a separate tent for the groom and his attendants. The tent was stocked with monogrammed towels, boxer shorts, cigars and brandy! Not to be outdone, the bride and her bridesmaids decided at the last minute they too wanted to take a dip in the lake. They threw off their shoes and strode into the water—bridal gowns and all!

Many out of state people really want to get married up north at their family's summer place. For this they need a lot of help in coordinating a large wedding. For those who are curious as to how much it takes to hire an experienced wedding coordinator — I must tell you that the average cost of an American wedding today is $20,000 — so you can expect to pay her, for starters, from $1,800 to $2,000.

Then on the other hand, we can just sit back and enjoy watching celebrity or royal weddings on television.

The Crooked Tree Arts Center is planning an "art-full" day trip to Grand Rapids on Wednesday, April 30.

Organized by the Crooked Tree Arts Center's Visual Arts Committee, the trip features a special day filled with visual delights and wonders.

A luxury coach will depart at 7:45 a.m. from the Wal-Mart parking lot in Petoskey with an estimated return time of 7:30 p.m.

The first stop is the Frederick Meijer Garden and Sculpture Park for a guided tour of the Light and Color: Chihuly in the Garden exhibition by renowned glass artist Dale Chihuly, whose works are prized worldwide for their beauty and stunning design.

The visit also includes time to view the new Sculpture Garden, the magnificent Leonardo's horse sculpture, butterflies and spring gardens.

The afternoon tour is the Grand Rapids Public Museum for the Dead Sea Scrolls exhibit. The Van Andel Museum is the only U.S. venue for this unique exhibition, organized in collaboration with the Israel Antiquities Authority.

Rarely seen outside of Jerusalem, the exhibition includes actual fragments of 12 different scrolls.

First discovered in 1947 by a Bedouin shepherd, the Scrolls include some of the earliest surviving text of the Old Testament — written more than 2,000 years ago.

The exhibition also includes numerous artifacts from Qumran, the ancient Judean settlement located near the caves where the scrolls were discovered. An audio tour is included.

In addition, an optional stop will be arranged for those who would like to view the Paris 1890 exhibit at the Grand Rapids Art Museum, which features original work of art and beautiful posters by Toulouse Lautrec, Pierre Bonnard, Mary Cassatt and Edgar Degas.

There is an additional $7 charge for this exhibit which includes an audio tour.

The price of the tickets are $80 for Crooked Tree Art Center members and $90 for non-members.

Band gets good rating at district festival

For the fourth time in five years, the Northwest Academy Advanced Band received a superior rating of "1" from each of four judges at the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Associations District Two Band Festival.

The festival took place Feb. 22 at the Petoskey Middle School.

This honor was a pleasant surprise for band director Gary Stutzman who noted that last year's band received similar rankings, but that this year's band has not been able to practice very often as a whole group. CJ Toton and Craig Welscott are performing regularly as members of the award winning ska band, "Scotchcoat."

"Our core group of musicians are now seniors. They're out and about visiting and auditioning at colleges. For instance, trumpet player Rachel Bellairs returned from an audition in Baltimore, Md. two days before the festival and she left for Boston, Mass. as soon as we finished. It is a testimony to our younger players that they can hold things together while the older players are away and it also shows how our older players have influenced the underclassmen with their dedication and musicianship," Stutzman said.

The festival format has each band play three prepared selections for three adjudicators. Two judges submit written comments, while the third gives verbal critique with a cassette recorder. After this part of the program, the band performs two selections which are not known to them. This is called "sight-reading." The fourth judge critiques the sight-reading performance. All four judges praised the Northwest Academy Band for their sound and attention to detail, despite their small number of players.

"One of the judges filled every available blank space on the comment sheet with superlative comments. I also received congratulatory notes from other people who were thrilled to hear our performance. I never thought we could top the comments we received last year, but this year is even better. I've never experienced the outpouring of enthusiasm that our band has brought forth this year," Stutzman said.

Northwest Academy students will continue their musical endeavors with the State Solo and Ensemble Festival March 22 in Manistee and with the State Band Festival in April.

Sheriff warns about AT&T check

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater said several senior citizens are receiving checks made out to them for $20 from AT&T.

If this check is cashed, as the "fine print" indicates, your telephone carrier is changed to AT&T.

Lasater recommends you read the check in its entirety, especially the fine print.

Elementary school plans movie musical

Third grade students at Charlevoix Elementary School gathered in the school gym March 7 for their final song practice before the big concert with their teacher Marina LaBlanc. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

Staff Writer

Students at Charlevoix Elementary School are gearing up for the Thirty-first Annual Spring Musical.

"It's a community event, a tradition. The musical establishes memories for families," Marina LaBlanc, the founder of the school musical and the Elementary School Music teacher, said.

This year, the event, "Let's Go to the Movies," will take place at 7 p.m., March 19 in the Charlevoix Middle School gym, celebrating the rich legacy of the film industry.

Over the last two months all 385 elementary students have been practicing 13 songs from old and new movies.

LaBlanc will play all but one of the movie tunes on her familiar piano.

"They (the students) are comfortable with me playing and I'm comfortable with them," she said.

The students voices will be accompanied by dance routines for a few songs including "Footloose," "Shrek" and "The Pink Panther."

Not only will the dances fit the tune, but costuming will jog participants' memories of favorite movie moments.

Staff and students have helped set the movie mood in the gym with huge painted buckets of popcorn and movie scenes depicting the history of the industry from its start in silent pictures to the present.

"I think this experience gives them (students) a sense of self-worth and self-esteem. It teaches them to work together and to cooperate. And they also learn about history, geography and different cultures," LaBlanc said.

Those who attend will also learn a thing or two about movies during the evening performance which is expected to last about 1.5 hours.

LaBlanc is expecting the typical huge crowd for the event with attendance numbers generally running between 1,200 and 1,400. Admission is free.

Prosecuting attorney hosts police training session

On March 7 over 30 police officers attended a four hour legal update training session organized by the Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur.

At Kur's invitation, First Lieutenant David S. Greydanus of the Legal Training Section of the Michigan State Police traveled to Charlevoix from Lansing to speak to the group.

In addition to being a police officer himself, Greydanus is also a licensed attorney. Each year he publishes a Legal Update for Michigan Police Officers and he is also the author of a criminal law and police procedures manual.

Greydanus highlighted recent changes in the criminal law and also covered search and seizure issues.

Officers also heard a presentation from Mitchell Stevens and Lt. Ken Mills, the commanding officer of the local SANE (Straights Area Narcotics Enforcement) team about the types of drugs and drug activity their officers are seeing in the northern Michigan area.

Kur holds an annual legal update for all officers in Charlevoix County that is free of charge. She said she was very appreciative that Greydanus, Mills and Stevens accepted her invitation to speak this year.

"We had an excellent turnout and each speaker was very well received. We had officers attending from each police agency we serve, the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, the Charlevoix City Police Department, the East Jordan City Police Department, the Boyne City Police Department, the State Police and the DNR," Kur said.

She added, "With the criminal law and police liability law constantly changing, it is imperative that all of our police officers be properly trained and updated-both for their own protection and for the public's protection."

Council members talk about the budget

Editor's note: This is the third report in a three part series that will look at the city of Charlevoix's proposed 2003-2004 budget. The series will lead up to the budget public hearing scheduled to take place at 7 p.m., March 17 in city council chambers at city hall.

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

As Charlevoix's City Council approaches the 2003-2004 city budget public hearing council members say they're comfortable with most of the budget.

"It's a pretty bare bones budget. There's not a whole lot of extras in there," third ward councilman Sherm Chamberlain said.

While council members said they have no big complaints with the budget, some said there are two items they are on the fence about.

An increase in parking fines and salary increases for city staff in lieu of union contract problems will likely be topics of discussion at the March 17 hearing.

The union contracts are currently "an unknown" in the budget. And third ward council member Shirley Gibson, second ward council member Karen Campbell and mayor Gabe Campbell all said they want to see the contracts squared away in the near future.

The contracts in question deal with a large group of city union employees including: secretarial, street department, sewer and water workers who have been without a contract since April 1, 2002.

The budget proposes a 3.5 percent salary increase for these workers with 3.5 percent in back pay from April, but nothing has been settled.

Gibson, Campbell and the mayor said city manager Mike Wiesner's 12.5 percent salary increase this year is not appropriate in lieu of the contract debacle.

"That doesn't stack up, I don't think it's fair to treat employees that way," mayor Campbell said. "It's time to look after our workers too."

He would like to see the city meet the union workers' demands.

He said council has participated in several closed session discussions about the contract but they haven't really cleared things up.

"After the meetings, I feel like I don't know any more going than I did coming in," he said.

Budget on city council's agenda

BUDGET

Because the city is run by a city manager form of government, contract negotiations fall under the city manager's duties.

Wiesner would not disclose details of the workers' demands and union workers who were contacted did not return phone calls.

Wiesner said it is the city's desire to come to an agreement with the workers.

One other budget item that will likely be a topic of contention at the hearing is the parking meter violation rate increase.

Council's attention was directed to parking tickets at its March 3 meeting when former councilman Bob Timms spoke out against increasing fines.

The proposed budget would increase non metered parking tickets from $5, $10 and $20 to $10, $15 and $30. And metered parking tickets from $2, $10 and $20 to $5, $15 and $30.

Timms urged council to take another look at the parking ticket increase before adopting the budget.

"Do you think you are helping the downtown by doing this? I really don't think it's necessary to give people a bad time that much in our little burgh here. I think $5 is quite excessive," he said.

Timms' comments did not fall on deaf ears, the mayor and council member Campbell said they feel the proposed spike would hurt downtown businesses.

"We're moving in the wrong direction on that. If we are trying to put downtown businesses out of business, that's a quick way to do it. That's a huge increase. I think it would really hurt the merchants," mayor Campbell said.

First ward councilmen Norm Carlson and Bill Haggard did not return calls by press time to discuss their budget outlook. Second ward councilman Bill Bellows is on vacation until March 16.

Bids opened for city hall renovations

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

General contractors bids for the city hall project were opened March 6 with Petrie Construction of East Jordan coming in as the low bidder.

Jim Nichols, co-owner of Fuller-Nichols Architects, the Harbor Springs architectural firm assigned to the project, said his firm will review all 10 bids and meet with city administrators to go over the numbers to make a recommendation to city council soon.

He added that they will likely recommend and work with Petrie Construction, the low bid, unless they find "something is out of line there."

Council is expected to award a contract at its meeting scheduled to take place at 7 p.m., March 17 at city hall.

Petrie Construction representatives bid the project at $2.067 million. Initial cost estimates formulated by city staff and the architects for the project were $2.3 million.

Going into the bidding process city manager Mike Wiesner said the architects had indicated the market for a project of this nature is good and bids should come in on the low end.

City hall renovation project liaison Jim Shull said he was pleased with the numbers that were returned.

Petrie is the same construction outfit that completed the renovation at the Charlevoix County Jail two years ago.

The city hall project will include expanding and upgrading Charlevoix City Police and Fire departments including the addition of shower facilities, a fire department training room and a workout room.

To allow for the expansion, the renovation will include a 2,200 square foot addition on the three-space parking area off Mason Street, adjacent to the police department. Plans for this expansion include retaining the building's sandstone structure with limestone trim.

New second floor council chambers equipped with additional seating and state of the art technology including audio visual components is also part of the project.

Discussion of possible meeting locations while the building is under construction have pinpointed the Coast Guard training room below Bridge Park and the basement of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

The current main level council chambers will be the office of the building department, the electric department and the city clerk.

Elevators will be added to the building on the main floor.

After March 17, when contracts are expected to be awarded, the first of four phases will begin with renovations to the old Post Office off Mason Street. City employees will temporarily relocate there while city hall, which was built in 1939, gets spruced up. The renovation is expected to take eight weeks and will include the addition of restrooms, partitions and upgraded electrical.

In phase two, city administrative personnel will move to the post office and the recreation department will relocate to Mount McSauba. After staff has moved, the addition will be built and city offices, the basement and meeting rooms will be renovated.

Phase three will include minor changes to the post office to accommodate the police and fire departments. And in phase four, police and fire personnel will move there while their quarters are renovated.

Petrie's bid said they could finish the project in 420 days.

Michigan State glee club to perform

The Crooked Tree Arts Center will host the Michigan State University Men's Glee Club at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, April 4.

The glee club, once called the Singing Statesman, is one of the oldest student organizations at Michigan State University. The concert will be at the Ross Stoakes Theater at the Crooked Tree Arts Center.

Originally established in 1880, the organization was a social club where men come together to sing and enjoy themselves. The glee club is a non-audition choir and spans the full range of majors at MSU.

In the last six years, the glee club has tripled its membership, now over a hundred strong, and has reestablished itself as one of the most active and energetic student organizations on campus. Glee club members participate in sports teams, an annual football game against the MSU Marching Band and numerous informal gatherings outside of rehearsal. This camaraderie sets the glee club apart from the other choral organizations on campus and has drawn many new members into the club.

Through its illustrious history, the glee club has served as an ambassador for MSU through appearances on the Ed Sullivan show, at the inauguration of President Eisenhower and across the world. In the summer of 1996, glee club toured Central and Eastern Europe, presenting concerts in Prague, Vienna, Bratislava, Budapest and Kecskemet.

The club was honored to perform at the gala opening concert of the MENC Winter Conference in January '98, sharing the stage of Hill Auditorium in Ann Arbor with the University of Michigan Men's Glee Club.

In February of the same year, the glee club performed at the midwest conference of the American Choral Director's Association (ACDA) for the first time, receiving high critical acclaim and snaring an invitation to appear at the 1999 national choral conference in Chicago.

The summer of 1998 saw the glee club back in central Europe, performing for crowds in Weimar, Dresden, Prague, Vienna and Munich. Two years later, the club brought its unique and thrilling sound to Amsterdam, Brussels, Paris and London in May of 2000.

The members of the glee club give freely of their time each semester, traveling to high schools, churches and alumni organizations in search of new recruits and positive community relations.

Tickets are on sale now at the Crooked Tree Arts Center box office, online or over the telephone. The temporary box office is located at 445 E. Mitchell, downtown Petoskey. The telephone number is 347-4337 or visit www.crookedtree.org

The concert is general seating and all tickets are $10.

Little Traverse hospice forms new support group

Hospice of Little Traverse Bay has offered grief and loss support groups to the community for a number of years providing educational materials and a supportive environment for anyone suffering the loss of a loved one.

This year, it has expanded the support services to include a new group, "Survivors of Suicide Loss." As part of the Community Bereavement Program, Hospice Family Counselor Greg Billiard, along with Lucy Hartlove, began the group this winter as a short term series.

For many, the death of a friend or loved one through suicide is one of the most traumatic events a person can experience.

There are so many questions and so few answers it is difficult to know where to begin. Emotions run the gamut from shame and guilt to anger and denial.

Processing and exploring suicide related grief is often more than most grief support groups have time or energy to handle.

Due to the interest in the group, they have gone to a monthly format with sessions being given from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. every fourth Monday of the month at the Episcopal Church on E. Mitchell in Petoskey.

Group members will have the opportunity to connect with others, receive education on the grief process and find direction and support in coping with suicide loss.

Meetings will be confidential, free of charge and facilitated by trained family counselors. For more information or to register for the group please contact Hospice of Little Traverse Bay at 487-4825.

School election changes made

Deadlines for filing to run for local boards of education are just around the corner, with April 7 being the last day to file for most board seats.

Schools are facing immense challenges of providing all students with a topnotch education, but doing so with scarce financial resources and a new, non-compromising law. Now, they need to be prepared to meet upcoming filing deadlines and to comply with recent election law amendments.

Many interested individuals are not aware of the election process and crucial deadlines required for filing.

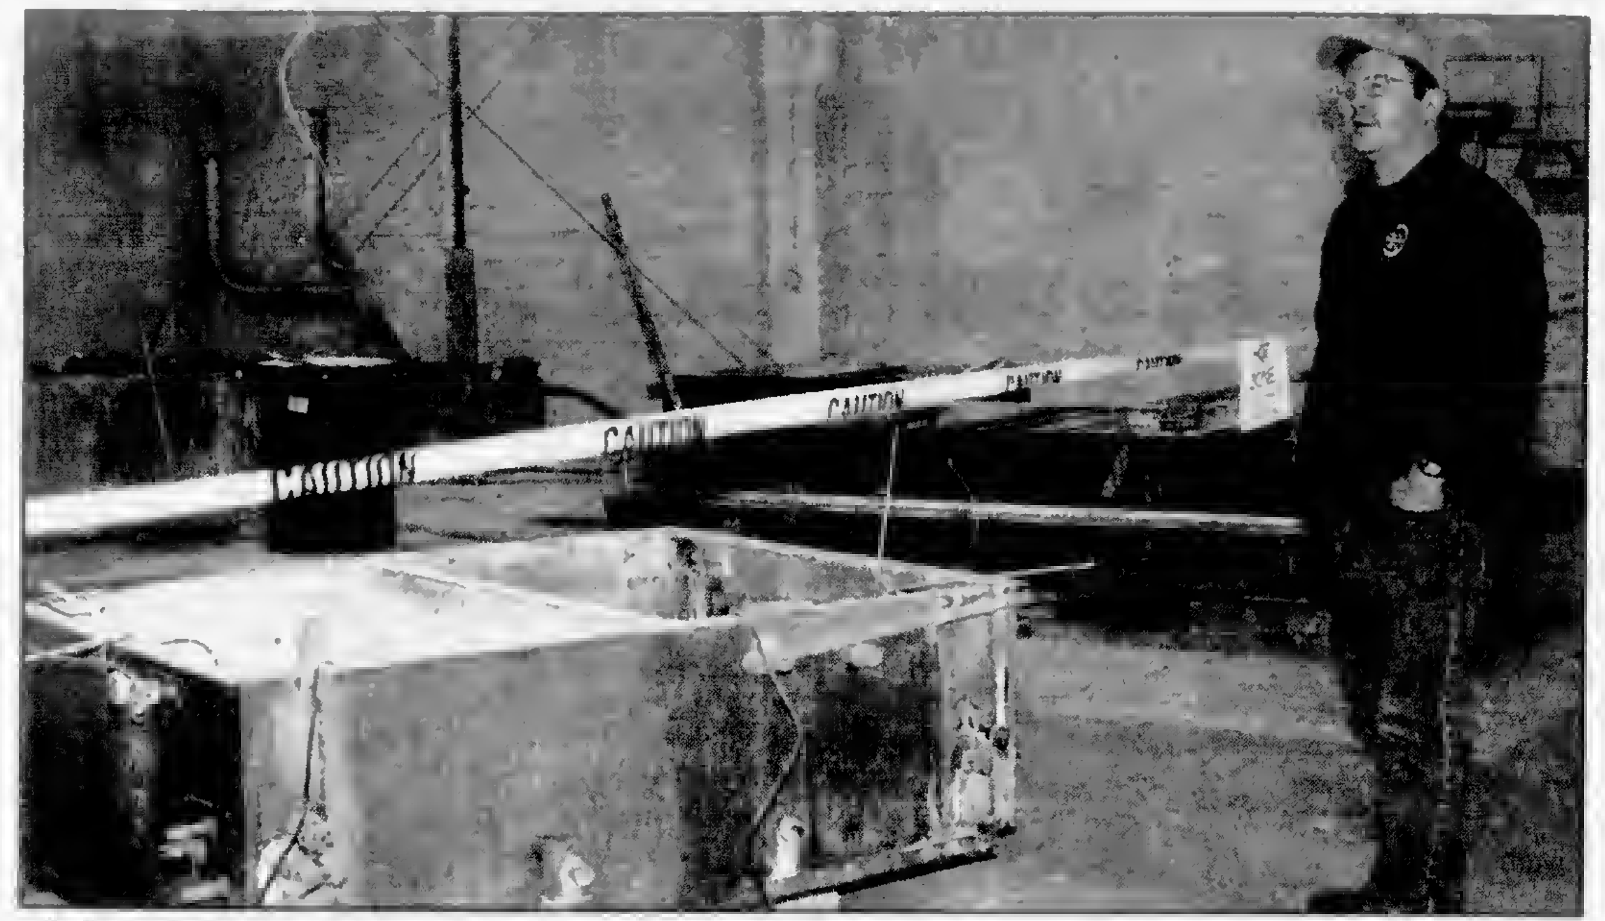
Key changes include:

- New option of local and intermediate school district candidates to pay a $100 filing fee instead of filing a nominating petition.
- Revisions and new signature requirements to the nominating petition.
- New accreditation seminars required for school board secretaries.

Key dates include:

- April 7 — Last day to file affidavits of identity and nominating petitions or a $100 fee (most local boards and intermediate school boards elected by popular vote).
- May 5 — Last day to file affidavits of identity and nominating petitions or a $100 fee (intermediate school district boards elected a meeting of representatives of constituent districts).
- June 2 — Election day for intermediate school districts where board members are elected at a meeting of representatives of constituent districts.
- June 9 — Election day for most local boards and intermediate school district boards elected by popular vote.

Please call (800) 968-4627 or e-mail info@masb.org. Citizens can purchase copies of the "2003 Candidates Guide to School Board Elections" by contacting Michigan Association of School Boards.



Hoskins clean-up

Representatives of the United States Environmental Protection Agency were at Hoskins Manufacturing in Charlevoix last week disposing of hazardous wastes inside the plant including: acids, caustics, solvents, lubricants and metal wastewater treatment sludge. They will complete the disposal effort this week marking the end of the EPA's involvement with the Charlevoix facility. Hoskins is located at 5339 M-66 North in Charlevoix's Marion Township. The Charlevoix site was built in the 1960s and was shut down Nov. 13, 2001. (Above) On-scene coordinator Jeffrey Kimble of the EPA's Grosse Isle office stands by tanks that were located under wire drawing machines that will be taken off site because of spots on them that are over hazardous level criteria for heavy metal content. South Point Collision has a new building

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

As of Feb. 1, Gary Janz has more elbow room.

Janz, the owner of South Point Collision, Inc. moved into his new building on US-31 south, about a mile past Bells Bay Road on Feb. 1, giving him 1,500 more square feet for his business, which was located on US-31 across from the Charlevoix Municipal Airport since it opened in 1995.

"Overall business was good and we decided we needed a bigger facility," he said.

The additional space this new building gives him allows Janz to work on more vehicles at one time, increase productivity and bring in new equipment, such as a "latent down-draft paint booth" and a new hoist for underbody inspections.

Janz also has space for a new drive-in estimation area and a waiting area for customers.

South Point Collision, Inc. is an auto body repair and automotive painting business.

Janz came to Charlevoix from Lansing in 1979 to run the service department at Fochtman's Chevy and Buick dealership. But, in 1995, the chance to run his own business presented itself and Janz took it.

South Point Collision's new facility is located at 05453 US-31 South. It is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday or by special appointment.

It can be contacted by calling 547-1293.

Twenty-three medals for middle school wrestling

Charlevoix Middle School hosted its annual wrestling tournament with 14 schools and 328 wrestlers competing.

"All the wrestlers have been working very hard and it is paying off. They displayed good sportsmanship and positive attitudes and should feel proud," coach Craig Golovich said.

The Charlevoix team finished with 23 medals among their 30 wrestlers.

First place winners include: Dylan Sladek, Joey Left, Nate Golovich and Nick Gottshall.

Second place finishes went to Eli Daman and Lynzie Gottshall.

Third place winners were Eric Tripplehorn, Brandon Darrah, Tony Filizetti, Logan Kline, Mat Golovich, Zeke Daman, Spencer Hankins and John Aimesbury.

Fourth place winners were Avery Penfold, Thomas Rich, Cassie Hillstrom, Jacob Roach, Travis Johnstone, Devin Brewer, Kyle Jones, Cliff Jones and Scott Plude.

Great Lakes orchestra to give two March concerts

The Great Lakes Chamber Orchestra will present a concert at 7:30 p.m. March 22 in the Cheboygan Opera House and at 4 p.m. March 23 in Petoskey's Crooked Tree Arts Center - Ross Stoakes Theater.

Scott Thornburg, trumpeter, will be the featured soloist, performing Haydn's Trumpet Concerto in E-Flat. Thornburg, professor of music at Western Michigan University, is well-known in northern Michigan because of his continuing tenure as a faculty artist at the Bay View Music Festival.

Under the baton of Dr. Robert Ritsema, the orchestra will also play J.S. Bach's Suite Number Three in D Major, "a Suite for Strings" by the Danish composer Carl Nielsen and a romantic "Elegy" by Tchaikovsky.

Ritsema, professor emeritus from Hope College, recently retired from his position as Music Director of the Kalamazoo Youth Symphony.

The Great Lakes Chamber Orchestra is made-up of more than 30 musicians from northern Michigan communities of Alanson, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Bellaire, Brutus, Gaylord, East Jordan, Harbor Springs, Petoskey and Traverse City.

The orchestra is enjoying its second season of presenting concerts throughout northern Michigan communities. Each concert is given in two communities - following the orchestra's mission of bringing live orchestral music to the region.

The orchestra is dedicating the March concerts to the memory of Charlotte McGuire, a cellist who performed with the orchestra this past year. McGuire loved to make music with the orchestra and continued to do so even after moving from Petoskey.

She lost her life in a auto accident in January.

For the Petoskey performance on Sunday afternoon of March 23, tickets are $12 for adults and $8 for students. Call the Crooked Tree Arts Center at (231) 347-4337.

Volleyball team loses in regional

BY JULIE MUSILEK
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Rayders volleyball team fell to Rogers City in the Class C volleyball regional March 8 in Boyne City.

"They (the Hurons) come from a really strong program with talented athletes. That's where we want to get to," head coach Liz Grunch said.

Rogers City went on to claim the regional title.

"We are rebuilding now, but in a couple years that might be us if we keep up the hard work," she added.

The final match score at the regional competition was 15-5 and 15-7.

Seniors Natashia Kleiber and Erin Burns closed their high school volleyball careers with strong play.

"Both had an outstanding game. I've had them for three years now and they are one of the reasons the program has developed as it has," Grunch said.

Kleiber lead the team with four offensive kills and on defense had 12 digs. Burns added to the dig count with eight of her own.

Becca Kanine helped lead the offensive charge with seven assists while Amanda Boss went seven for seven from the serving line with one ace.

On defense, Theresa Martin kept the Rayders alive with five blocks while Kari Way and Andrea Ruhlman each tallied four.

The loss to Rogers City marks the end of the Rayder volleyball season. Their record was 26-14-4. The team is already gearing up for next winter when Grunch said they'll make another run for a regional title.

"We have great players returning that can attack the ball hard. We will be strong next year because the girls are willing to put in the time to get better. We feel great about winning districts and are already pumped up for next year," Grunch said.

Charlevoix wins fifth straight district

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

After finishing off a first half that seemed to spell the end for the Rayders, the Charlevoix basketball team came back in the second Friday to beat Elk Rapids and win its fifth straight district title, 63-71.

Throughout the first half of the game, the Rayders seemed to be taking a beating from the strong Elk Rapids team, who blocked several Charlevoix shots and couldn't seem to miss the basket. However, the Rayders came out of the locker room into the second half of the game a different team.

Charlevoix coach Keith Haske said he told the team at half-time that Elk Rapids was playing the best he had seen them play in a long time. But, he stressed time was running out for them.

"I told the kids I didn't think they (Elk Rapids) could keep it up," he said.

When the Rayders came out, Haske said they got a little momentum in the third quarter and combined with the encouragement from Charlevoix fans, that momentum just kept on going. And, just as Haske predicted, Elk Rapids stopped making baskets and stopped blocking shots.

Haske said he thought Bryce Daly did a great job Friday night. Daly was covering one of Elk Rapids' best players, who ended up only making one shot.

He also pointed out great play by Todd Carey, Nate Teuscher, Scott Friske and Drew Wright — who Haske said had their best game of the year.

"Overall, I thought it was a great team effort. A lot of kids chipped in and did some good things," he said.

Friske had 19 points, 12 rebounds and four blocks; Wright had 10 points; Teuscher had 14 points, seven assists and four rebounds; and Carey had 10 points.

The Rayders are moving on in the tournament to regional play. Charlevoix will face Mio at 7 p.m. Wednesday at Traverse City West High School.

According to Haske, Mio plays a lot like Kalkaska. He said the team is quick and shoots the ball well from the three point line.

Charlevoix High School basketball won its fifth straight district crown Friday. They are (front, from left) Matt Burtt, John DiMartino, Mike Rosen, ballboy Justin Erskine, ballboy River Gauthier, Cody Crain, Todd Carey, (back) assistant coach Bret Erskine, Scott Friske, Drew Wright, Ryan DeYoung, Nate Teuscher, Spencer Bryan, Donovan Swanson, Travis Smith, David Shearer, Bryce Daly, Ben Bergmann and coach Keith Haske. Old middle school studied for library uses overhaul. A structural evaluation done by Grand Traverse Construction, Inc. of Traverse City, found for a library to use the second floor it would have to be demolished and rebuilt. Currently the floor can handle 40 pounds per square foot and library standards require 150 pounds of floor loading capacity per square foot.

"Forty to 150 is quite a jump to make," Williams said.

Aside from the floor problem, it was clear at the meeting that those in attendance and Meyerson do not feel a two story library is ideal.

Meyerson said security and operational expenses are the two things driving their effort to have the new library be a single level. She said a double story building means double the staff.

"Staff will have to go up already because of the increase in size. A single floor building can provide all the services the community wants and keep staffing to a minimum," she said.

At the meeting, Charlevoix residents and Friends of the Library member Kay Heise said convenience is another major factor that is compromised with two story libraries.

Meyerson said community brainstorming at the meeting opened a new avenue through which the library could use the school and be a single level. Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner inquired about the size of the gym and possible use of it as part of the library.

The first floor is 12,250 square feet and the gym is 6,464 square feet. If both are used this brings the library to 18,714 square feet of space on one level, just 1,286 square feet less than its optimum size.

Over the past year, the Committee for the Charlevoix Middle School, has campaigned to have this gym open for public use and has touted the need for the gym to be saved.

However, since then no one has stepped forward with the financial backing and a plan to save the gym.

Co-chair of that committee, Connie Saltonstall, said she has not yet heard from committee and community members about the library using the gym.

Another option that would allow the gym to stay and the library to operate on a single level is building an addition on the school.

With both these single level options the second floor could then be used as meeting space, or as school administrative offices with separate access from the outside.

Meyerson said the library's final direction will come from community support and the project's price tag.

According to the architects' report, it will cost just as much to renovate the site for use as a library as it would to build a brand new one.

Costs to convert the school to a two story library were estimated at $2.8 million versus $2.4 million for new construction.

Big ticket items in renovating the school include: $535,000 to replace the heating and cooling system, plumbing and fire protection, $350,000 to replace the electrical, $205,000 to demolish and replace the second floor and $150,000 to remove asbestos from the building.

There are three areas in the school that contain asbestos, the plaster ceilings, the vinyl floor tiles and some insulation.

Costs to convert the school to a community center were close at $2.6 million. One cost savings in this project was leaving the second floor at its current load bearing.

Neither price includes acquisition of the property or furnishings. The property which includes 13 lots and the building that is just under 42,000 square feet has been appraised at $835,000 by Michigan Appraisal Company, Inc. of Charlevoix. Williams said furnishing the site will likely cost an additional $1.4 million.

Because the single level ideas were generated at the study presentation, costs for projects with and without the gym were not calculated.

The Charlevoix Public Library Building Committee met last night, Tuesday, to discuss the presentation. Results of that meeting were not available by press time.

The Charlevoix Public Library Board of Trustees will meet at 4 p.m. March 13 in the library basement to discuss the building committee's findings and members' thoughts of the presentation.

If there is support for pursuing a single level library that encompasses the gym or adds on to the building, further site investigation will be done by Engberg Anderson. After the site issues have been ironed out the architects will get to work on design.

Meyerson said she is hoping to see the design process in full-swing this summer so both seasonal and year-round residents can be included. After design is complete library administrators and volunteers will get to work to raise funds for the project with the hope of starting construction in 2004.

Construction is expected to take 15 months.

Last week Bill Williams, an architect with Engberg Anderson, presented a study his firm conducted at the former Charlevoix Middle School. Analysts concluded that a new library or a community center could relocate to the school. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

MEAP funding cut, school budgets saved

BUDGET

on the final budget following the proposal. And the budget the House and Senate approve in October may or may not follow the governor's proposal.

"I'm sure that all the special interest groups that got nixed will be out there beating the bushes. I'm not going to put the money in the bank. Until something is locked in stone, I'm leery of it," he said.

While the state budget proposal does mean fewer cuts will have to be made, it doesn't totally protect the Charlevoix School District from cuts.

"We still have to tighten our belts. It means we don't have to cut as deep, but we still have to make cuts," Sturock said.

Restoring the per pupil funding doesn't account for the district's cost increases next year. Sturock said costs for health care, utilities, contracts and operational expenses will all go up.

He said in planning the 2003-2004 budget, he will protect the district by looking to the future. The state budget shortfall is expected to last a couple of years and the district will plan out two or three years and manage its fund equity to keep its programs up and running during this economic downturn.

The budget and possible cuts will be discussed at the board's meeting April 14 to prepare for the 2003-2004 fiscal year which starts July 1.

This budget preparation will keep school administrators busy while students in the class of 2004 may have to make plans to come up with $2,000 they were banking on to help pay for college expenses.

The proposed state budget includes major cuts to the Michigan Merit Scholarship Program which many students at Charleviox High School receive.

The program distributes tobacco settlement money to high school students who perform well on the Michigan Education Assessment Program (MEAP) test. Under the proposed budget, starting with the class of 2004, students would get only $500 instead of the $2,500 to $3,000 they currently receive.

Sturock said this was former Gov. John Engler's way of offering students an incentive to take the test. But he doesn't think that with a reduced incentive Charlevoix students won't take the test.

"We had high numbers of students taking the test prior to any incentive," he said.

SCRAPBOOK

Winter was always a fun time in Charlevoix

Charlevoix has had many fun things to do in the winter in years past.

In 1937, a beautiful ice throne was built at the school skating rink. They had a winter queen and her court. Their names were: Frances Withers, "Tut" Bartlett, Millie LaBlance, Helen Gallagher, Marjorie Jan Miller, Alice Meyers, Esther Fochtman and Millie Hiller. (Their picture is in the Bob Miles II book, page 396)

Dale (the writer's husband) remembers his dad taking him down there to watch the ceremonies. His dad bought him a hamburger out of the little summer house located just east of the ice rink. Mr. and Mrs. Bill Freeburn were frying hamburgers on the stove in the cold, unheated cottage.

Also popular was ice boating, which has continued until recent years. The original ones held five or six people. Ice fishing was also enjoyed by many who built shanties and placed them on Round Lake. It wasn't uncommon to have 20 below zero for a week straight and this made the ice form on the lake to hold them. I remember going out to a shanty with my friend, Phyllis Mason. We loved to fish for perch and enjoyed it very much. In the summer we sat on the docks in Round Lake and would sometimes catch 30 in a few hours. They were delicious. I had to fillet and fry them myself. My dad felt I should know how to do everything.

To demonstrate how cold it used to get, in 1962 and 1963, Dale and I were caretakers of the new Community Reformed Church. We checked the church every evening, as the temperature was so bitterly cold. It had gone down to 20 degrees below zero. When we walked into the sanctuary, the big laminated arches and the roof decking were snapping and popping, making loud noises, due to the severity of the extreme cold. The water supply, which was 6 feet underground, froze up that first winter, due to the fact that the ground had been disturbed when the line was installed.

The city had to attach a fire hose to the plug on the corner and run a hose over ground into the boiler room, and we had to leave a faucet running continually so that it wouldn't freeze. It was the only way of getting water to the building.

One time, Lake Michigan froze clear and smooth from North Point to South Point. The weather was just right, with no wind or snow to interfere, and the ice was clear and very smooth. Locals donned their ice skates and went out and had a great time. It has never happened since. Sliding hills were made everywhere in the country by the kids, and in town, we enjoyed the hill on Grant Street, called "Dodgers Hill." I imagine the correct name would have been Dodge's Hill, as it was adjacent to a place owned by people named Dodge. The city usually had two men to watch the kids and stop traffic. They kept warm in a big fish shanty placed at the corner of Antrim and Grant. We also had the skating rink between Mason and Clinton Streets, by the school.

Fred Hardy, Stub Swanson and others built a big ski jump at Mt. McSauba, and that was used for those who were proficient in skiing. Kids would head for the Belvedere Golf Course on Saturdays to use toboggans on the hills there. They would start up by the club house, and head west, down the hill. Dale remembers going out there often. In the early 1960s, the chamber of commerce, led by Bob Humphries, had a demolition derby out on the ice at Ferry Beach. Old cars competed to see who could go the longest and keep running, after smashing into each other countless times. That was lots of fun to watch, but of course the ice was thick enough that year.

In the 1920s and 1930s, several fellows, Oscar Stroud, Frank Bird, the Register of Deeds, and Floyd Brown, local Dodge dealer, all had home made bobsleds. They were very sturdy and held many people. They were approximately 20 feet long.

Oscar told Dale that Clair Webster, local Standard Oil dealer, to fill his truck with water, and water down the center of Bridge Street, so the street would ice over, and the sleds would go fast. They would begin at the south hill on the corner of Bridge and Hurlbut, and then would traverse the town, and go up the north hill until they stopped. Oscar completely rebuilt his sled and brought it out to Mt. McSauba for everyone to see on Saturday.

In 1927, a group of Charlevoix kids went out on the icebergs in Lake Michigan. The picture depicts some standing on the top, and the others under them in the ice cave. Dale's mother is the third from the left in the cave and was a senior in high school. The only other identified, is Rodney Belding, the boy in the cave, second from right.

This was always an exciting thing to do through the years, and the ice bergs would change with every high wind. I can remember going out on them, and then one day, the Coast Guard said it was prohibited and that ended that. There also were winter festivals and parades. People made their own entertainment in those days, and it was fun for participants and onlookers alike.

Teachers honored with award

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Two dedicated Charlevoix Elementary School teachers will be given the Eighth Annual Outstanding Person in Education (OPIE) award May 7 at a banquet at Boyne Highlands.

"The award recognizes outstanding service to the school district— these are people who do special things for kids," Terry Cox, Uniserv Director with the Michigan Education Association, said.

Earlier this school year, teachers in the Charlevoix School District nominated and chose third grade teacher Pat Carland and Responsible Thinking Classroom teacher Sue Goss as award recipients.

"It's your peers voting for you. It makes me feel like they appreciate the job I do. And it validates that I'm doing the job the way it should be done and that people respect what I do," Goss said.

In the 2000-2001 school year, after two years of substitute teaching and working as a playground aide at the school, Goss accepted the position of Responsible Thinking Classroom (RTC) teacher.

In the RTC, children who have disrupted class or broken school rules learn how to cope with situations. Goss said in their time with her, students learn to be responsible for their actions and are taught how their actions affect other people.

"I have compassion for kids who are upset or struggling and I want to be able to help them. There is a sense of accomplishment when you see a student come in upset and by the time they leave they've calmed down and you've been able to help them," she said.

Carland has taught at the elementary school since 1970. She decided to become a teacher because of her admiration for her mother-in-law, who was also a teacher, and because of her passion for working with children.

She started out as a special education instructor, moved on to teach fourth grade and then in 1985 moved to her current position, third grade.

Over the years she has seen the academic expectations of students increase along with the need for parental involve-

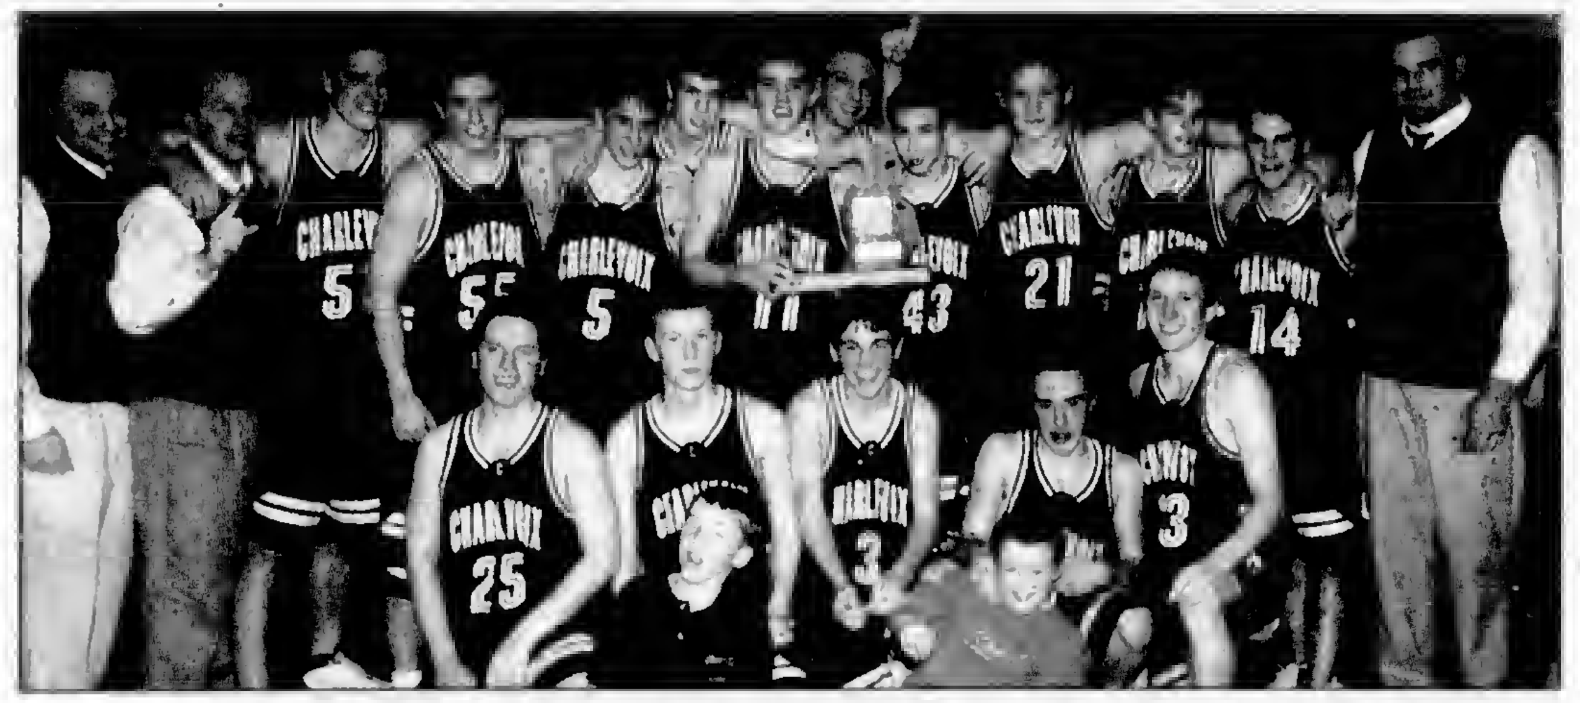
Rayders' regional domination



The Charlevoix Rayders won the regional Friday. A new developer has shown interest in the former Charlevoix Middle School.

The school, which is located off Grant Street in the city of Charlevoix was vacated at the end of the 2001-2002 school year. The new Charlevoix High School was completed in September of 2002 and middle school classes moved to the old high school.

Beaver Islanders return from Irish trip

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The ghosts of Beaver Island's Irish heritage have been reawakened due to a recent trip by many of the islanders to their ancestral home in Ireland early this month.

Of the almost 60 islanders and former islanders that went to Arranmore Island in Ireland to take part in a traditional "twinning ceremony" — where Arranmore Island and Beaver Island recognize themselves as twin cities — many have said they have come back changed for life.

"It is hard to explain the emotional, spiritual aspect of it," Paul Cole, one of the trip organizers said upon returning.

. Cindy Cushman, another organizer, described the islander's feelings as they have visited a place of their ancestors and have left a little part of themselves there. That part of themselves will always be calling for them to return.

"I was devastated to leave. It is just trying to pull you back and there is nothing you can do about it. We have our lives here (Beaver Island) and part of yourself is left there," she said.

Cole added the trip will change the islanders and the island forever, even for those who did not go.

"It is going to catch on. It will not be too long before the next group goes over," Cole said.

Many residents of Beaver Island are ancestors of Irish people who came from a small island in Ireland called Arranmore. The Arranmore Irish came to North America to escape a life of poverty and a cruel landlord. Once in North American, they made their way to Beaver Island.

According to Beaver Island history, the Irish liked the island so much they would send money back to their relatives on Arranmore Island and have them come over.

In 2000, several Arranmore Island residents came to Beaver Island and participated in a twinning ceremony there. This recent trip by the islanders was in response to that and to make the island's twinning a full reality.

The trip was recognized by the Irish government and was covered by many Irish media outlets. A documentary company even followed the Beaver Islanders around for the week and will be coming to Beaver Island in the spring.

To get to Arranmore Island, the Beaver Island residents had to fly to Dublin, Ireland. From there they took a bus to Donegal Town, Ireland and then a ferry brought them to the island of their ancestors.

Richard Gillespie, a Beaver Island resident who gave a speech at the official ceremony in Ireland, said when the ferry boat's ramp came down onto Arranmore "150 years of history went back together."

Cushman also said it was an amazing and emotional moment. She said over 200 people from Arranmore Island were waiting for the Beaver Islanders at the dock.

When the boat arrived, people were clapping, bagpipers were playing and flares were going off.

"I wished time could have slowed down," she said.

Cole added, "People you didn't even know were coming up and shaking your hands. One of the kids from the school looked at me and said, 'You must feel like a rock star.'"

Gillespie said it was a very emotional moment for many people — both American and Irish. He added there were many similarities between the people and the way they live their island lives.

"Everyone sat in the pubs and halls staring back and forth at their own history. They very much looked like each other," Gillespie said.

He added, "Tyranny tore us

EDITORIAL

We are at an important point in our nation's history.

We are a nation at the brink of war. Our future and the future of the world is uncertain, as there is much debate to the outcome of this war.

While we watch the events in the Middle East and North Korea unfold, no matter what our opinion on this war is, we should support and pray for the men and women in our United States Armed Forces that are stationed there. They are our brothers, sisters, fathers, mothers and friends and they are in a very deadly place.

Let us hope they all come back safe. There has already been too much blood spilled; let us hope that very little is spilled in the future.

In order to keep Charlevoix in touch with our servicemen and women, the Charlevoix Courier is requesting information on how residents and visitors to the area can contact them.

We are looking for addresses to write to, e-mail or otherwise, for Charlevoix residents who are in the service overseas. This will enable the public to let our troops know we are thinking about them and hoping for their safe return.

So, if you are a Charlevoix resident and have a relative from Charlevoix County who is stationed or being stationed overseas, please let us know how we can contact them. Send all addresses to the Charlevoix Courier, P.O. Box 117, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

We will be listing all of the addresses we receive each week in a new edition to the newspaper called "Military Mail" that will be starting the first week of April.

Writer proposes holiday in honor of equinoxes

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

March 21 is identified on my calendar as the vernal equinox, one of those celestial events that mostly escape our attention.

When people lived outdoors and looked at the sky much more than we do, events like equinoxes and solstices were of sufficient importance to cause the building of gigantic celestial calendars like Stonehenge in England, or some of the even older stone circles in other parts of the world. We are more likely to think of March 21 as the first day of spring, or as I prefer, the last day of winter. Maybe we could make it a worldwide holiday; maybe we should.

Anytime after the middle of March, the tropical plants that are trapped in my greenhouse over the winter begin to show signs of life that have been missing for at least three months. For most tropical plants day lengths near 12 hours are important for their growth and even survival. In their native homes around the equator somewhere near 12 hours of light and 12 hours of darkness are pretty much standard fare year-round.

The longest day of the year and the shortest, the solstices, are much more likely to get our attention than equinoxes, but maybe we should be looking more carefully or thinking more carefully. What exactly distinguishes an equinox? Since on those spring and fall days the sun is positioned directly in line with the equator, it means that all the world (even in the Upper Peninsula) for those two days each year, the sunrise and sunset are 12 hours apart. In Alaska, in Afghanistan, in Iraq, in Bangladesh, in England, in China — pick a place, there will be almost exactly the same number of hours of light and darkness.

We are familiar with the idea that rain falls equally on the just and the unjust, but we all know that it doesn't fall on everybody in the same amount. Most of nature is like that, more than a bit capricious. But on those equinoxes, spring and fall, the light that fuels our whole natural world comes in the same amount to all the creatures including us. If we think equality is of some importance, maybe we should be celebrating the equinoxes on a worldwide basis. We could celebrate twice a year.

I'd like to propose an international holiday, crossing all the political, religious, ethnic and economic boundaries that we all pay so much attention to. I'd like to propose EQUAL DAY on March 21 and Sept. 22; those times when the life-giving light of the sun falls on all of us for the same amount of time.

I'm sure that the people who built Stonehenge would approve and we certainly could use something that everyone on the world could celebrate.

Let's begin observing EQUAL DAY this March 21. If everyone spent just a little time around sunrise and sunset considering the similarities we humans share and what we share with the rest of the living world, it might make it easier to solve those vexing political, religious, ethnic and economic problems we also share.

Letters to the editor

Disagrees with column

Editor:

I would like to address this term "pro-war people." I think you may be hard pressed to find anyone who wants to go to war. Some believe it is our only choice in the current situation. Saddam has had many opportunities to comply with the United Nation resolutions and he is stalling. He says he has no weapons of mass destruction yet he has threatened that an attack by the U.S. would lead to war anywhere in the world "wherever there is sky, land or water."

How will he do that sir, if he is as innocent as he proclaims? Why is it that people such as yourself think they have all the answers and solutions while the president is clueless? How ridiculous to think that the president, his advisors and the U.S. intelligence agencies tell the media everything they know just to keep you up to speed.

I respect all the arguments you listed in your article, I see why you feel the way you do. I wish you were right. I wish inspectors could go in and find all of the horrible things that Saddam is hiding and we could deal with them in a peaceful civilized way. But I think you do not see that Saddam is not playing by your rules, and never will.

As far as being called unpatriotic, not everyone sees people with your opinion that way. However, many people have become very critical and disrespectful. It is not doing any service to bash the president and the "pro-war people" as you call them, just to get your opinion heard.

Why in such a short time is it forgotten what it felt like on Sept. 11, 2001? We thought it would never happen here, we were untouchable. We were wrong. There are people in the world who hate us enough to die for the cause, as you pointed out.

They will not stop to read U.N. resolutions.

Perhaps Saddam is not linked to Al Qaeda, but he does share a hatred for the United States and a passion to destroy us.

I support President Bush. I respect that he is doing what he feels needs to be done to protect America. With all due respect sir, I am not a "pro-war person" or "following the leader of my country with no question." I am an American and proud to be one. I have respect for my president and the troops serving this country to protect freedom at huge cost to themselves and their families.

I choose to keep my questions to myself and find answers through available information, contemplation and prayer, not defensive rants and accusations of incompetence to those who are in charge.

Good editorial

Editor:

I want to compliment you on a well written editorial (page 4, March 12 edition). I served in the Air Force during the Vietnam era, and I have always tried to support our elected leaders. No doubt Saddam is a very evil person. However, I couldn't express my own questions and growing concerns about the push to go to war with Iraq any better than you did. In my opinion you were on track with each point. Thank you. Likewise it would be interesting to read and benefit from any "factual" responses you receive that refute your thoughts.

Liked editorial

Editor:

Thanks for your great editorial of March 12, "Trying to Understand the War Push." You are right on target!

We commend you for your courage in an area of the state where many assume that you must agree with the administration in order to be "patriotic." We suspect that you will be criticized by some "patriots" for not supporting the war effort of your country, but we have no business waging war on these terms. It will not accomplish its avowed purposes and will do far more harm than good.

We shudder to think of the inevitable results of this kind of warlike attitude. It's time for us to consult with the rest of the world in seeking our common objective of peace, instead of assuming that we know better than anyone else.

Keep up the outstanding editorials. Let's work together for peace instead of assuming that war solves any international differences.

Against war

Editor:

As Roman Catholic clergy and pastoral administrators in the Petoskey Vicariate of the Diocese of Gaylord, we join with the Pope John Paul II, Bishop Cooney and the American Catholic Bishops Conference in strong opposition on moral grounds to the seemingly eminent war with Iraq.

We do this as loyal and patriotic Americans with a deep and reverent love for our country. It is from just such love and reverence that we speak at this perilous time.

At the same time, we support with prayer and deep concern all those in the military and their families and friends. We pray they be kept safe and returned home soon and unharmed. Their response to the call of the country is loyal and respectful.

We also pray for all the Iraqi people in harm's way. Their suffering to date is beyond imagining and a violent and massive force would only destroy more life and leave such destruction we cannot imagine. Also, the uncertainty and instability in the region and world would only cause more and more threats to human life.

As the Pope has stated, "War is always a defeat for man." We pray for the wisdom of God and the openness of world leaders so that another way may be found, God's way.

Thank you

Editor:

Paul and I would like to express our thanks for the outpouring of support he has received during the search for a new fire chief and after his selection. We have been truly overwhelmed and gratified by all of the best wishes, congratulations and sincere "pats on the back" that have come his way in the past month.

It is wonderful for him to be able to rejuvenate and challenge himself after over 20 years doing police work and yet not have to leave his community to do it. Good guys do finish first sometimes. Most people we talk to are excited and optimistic as we are. These are wonderful feelings to have when the temperatures are zero and our country is at the brink of war.

War is wrong

Editor:

The defense expenditures for the axis of evil countries: Year 1998, Iraq, $1.4 billion, year 2002, $1.4 billion. Year 1998, North Korea, $2 billion, year 2002, $2.1 billion. Year 1998, Iran, $5.7 billion, year 2002 $5.7 billion.

Iraq and Iran aspire to gain nuclear weapons, North Korea has one or two.

The defense expenditures for the virtuous countries. Year 1998, United Kingdom, $36.6 billion, year 2002 $36.4 billion. Year 1998, USA, $265.9 billion, year 2002, $291.2 billion.

Now the United States spends well over $300 billion per year, and the amount is increasing. Britain has 185 long-range nuclear weapons of mass destruction. The USA has 6,000 long-range nuclear weapons and 1,670 - 3,300 short-range nuclear weapons.

The Constitution gave Congress the authority to declare war. When Congress gave that authority to the president, he became the military dictator of the United States. When President Bush notified the United Nations that they must do what he demands or they are irrelevant, then he became the military dictator of the world.

It is evident that President Bush intends to attack Iraq because the Iraqi government has not disarmed to his satisfaction. If the United States military forces attack Iraq there will be great damage to Iraq and President Bush will be the responsible leader for the post-war Iraq. That is the best scenario.

The worst scenario is that a military attack on Iraq will ignite uncontrolled conflict throughout the area and beyond.

Here is an alternative plan. President Bush should give the people of Iraq democracy now without war.

New fire chief officially hired

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

After 11 years of service to Charlevoix, former City Fire Chief Doug Carver, 62, officially turned the department over to fire lieutenant Paul Ivan March 14.

Paul Ivan

Ivan trained with Carver last week and was officially hired on as chief by city council at its meeting March 17 after passing both physical and psychological examinations.

"According to what I hear in the community, we (council) finally did something right. Everyone I talk to is happy and proud you are our chief," Charlevoix City mayor Gabe Campbell said.

In mid-February, after sorting through a field of 33 possible candidates, council made the recommendation to hire Ivan pending those examinations.

Ivan, 45, has been a Charlevoix City Police officer since 1981 and a fire lieutenant with the Charlevoix Fire Department since 1997.

In recommending Ivan be hired, Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson described his former employee as "extremely dependable, very conscientious, very dedicated and hard working."

"He is very well-rounded. He has all the good qualities that would work in any occupation. And a lot of those things will make him a very good fire chief," he said.

As fire chief, Ivan plans to work to consolidate Charlevoix Township and city fire departments under a fire district. He also plans to continue his studies and receive fire officer I and II certification while providing more training within the department.

Ivan said he plans to put in 10 to 20 years as chief.

Carver may help with fire officer class training in the city after his retirement.

The department currently includes a full-time chief, three full-time firefighters, 25 paid-on-call firefighters and 12 paid-on-call emergency medical technicians. The three full-time firefighters are Lyle Gennett, Bob Roloff and Schwartzfisher.

Halverson is hoping to fill his vacancy with the police department before the busy summer season gets into full swing. He currently has six full-time policemen on staff, including himself.

The application process for hiring a new policeman ended March 14. The city received 45 applications.

Sheriff's office warns about possible new telephone scam

According to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office a telephone telemarketer is contacting Charlevoix County residents with a possible scam.

The office said the caller says he represents a company in Quebec, Canada and the recipient of the phone call has won a large amount of money from Canada. All that is needed to have the check sent is for the resident to send a check or money order to the company for $5,000 and their check will be sent out to them.

If the resident is hesitant, the telemarketer will reduce the amount needed to release the check to $2,500.

Fortunately, the three Charlevoix County citizens who have been called, realized if it sounds too good to be true, it most likely is and terminated the conversation.

The telemarketer seems to be concentrating on senior citizens with a good credit rating, the sheriff's office said.

Congressman meets with Charlevoix residents

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Bart Stupak, northern Michigan's representative in the U.S. House of Representatives, hosted a town hall meeting at Charlevoix High School Monday night.

Those in attendance asked the congressman questions ranging from the pending war in Iraq and on many domestic issues. But, it was clear that war was on the minds of many in attendance and Stupak let his views be known to them.

"I think the (President George) Bush policy is contrary to everything this country stands for. But, once the fighting starts, we are going to support our men and women over there," he said.

Stupak said by going alone into Iraq, without United Nations support as in the Gulf War, the United States stands a good chance of being "stuck" in the country for a long time.

"A lot of us feel because of the situation, it is very easy for the whole Middle East to blow up," he said. "I am very concerned."

He said he believes the situation could be resolved without the use of war through stronger inspections by the United Nations and more sharing of intelligence on Iraq by the United States.

Stupak was asked a question about if the President should get Congress to declare war on Iraq and he answered legally Bush does not have to. This is because the Gulf War technically did not end and was only under a cease fire. Plus, Congress gave the President approval to use force in Iraq last year — a bill Stupak voted against.

But, Stupak said many congressmen regret that vote.

Stupak said at the time many Republicans were calling Democrats unpatriotic if they didn't vote for it. He told a story of a former United States Senator from Georgia who was the victim of a nasty campaign that claimed he was unpatriotic, even though this former Senator had lost three of his limbs in Vietnam.

Stupak added the big issue facing Americans that is not being addressed by the current administration is the economy.

"Unemployment is at its highest since 1992. Unfortunately, the president and his administrators have been focused on Iraq and international affairs, rather than the economy," Stupak said.

He said he urges the president to take a page out of former President Ronald Reagan's book. When faced with a sour economy, Reagan called a summit of business leaders and leaders of both parties to come up with solutions.

However, Stupak said, no solutions have been offered.

> "A lot of us feel because of the situation, it is very easy for the whole Middle East to blow up."
>
> Bart Stupak,
> United States congressman

In the latest Bush budget, Stupak said there is $674 million in tax reductions, which will not jump start the economy. He said even finance experts say this budget would not help the economy in the United States.

But, Stupak said the budget resolution will be "rushed through."

He further pointed out that the United States is currently $300 billion in deficit spending, not including any money that is going to be spent on Iraq. Once the war starts, he said the Pentagon can get $90 to $100 billion to fight the war.

The bad things about deficit spending is it leaves less money for needed programs, such as Medicare, Homeland Security and health issues, as well as causing interest rates to go up.

Attendee Francis Ladi, of Charlevoix, said she enjoyed the meeting with Stupak.

"I have heard him speak a number of times. I hardly miss his appearances in Charlevoix," she said.

Tim Matchett, of Charlevoix, said he thought the evening was interesting.

"He (Stupak) has several viewpoints which are contrary to the president. A lot of good questions were asked," Matchett said. "He is presenting the Democrats' view as opposed to the Republicans' view we are hearing more of in the media."

The people of Iraq should have a choice to vote between the evil Saddam Hussein or the virtuous George Bush to lead their country. The election could be held under the honest supervision of the United Nations, an election that is more reliable than the latest election of either President Bush or Saddam Hussein.

If the evil Saddam Hussein loses the election, he retires to a palace. If the virtuous, liberating, compassionate, patient President Bush loses the election, he withdraws his military force from the area.

Weapons of mass destruction have made national defense establishments obsolete because national defense establishments with weapons of mass destruction will make mankind obsolete.

War is not an acceptable solution to international disputes.

Support wrestling

Editor:

Wrestling used to be a popular sport. Now wrestling isn't a popular sport, because it doesn't get as much attention as football, baseball and basketball. I think we need a better wrestling program at Charlevoix Middle School.

If we get a better wrestling program, more kids could have more winter and summer sports. We need more winter sports because if kids don't like basketball they could wrestle. If kids' moms won't let them play football, they could wrestle.

First, to make more money for middle school wrestling we need a bigger program. To make more money for the program, we could charge for people to get in the Charlevoix tournaments. If we charge that way then the program could pay for shoes, headgear and uniforms.

A good wrestling program would make more kids come, so then more kids won't get out of shape.

Please help Charlevoix Middle School get a bigger program for wrestling. If we don't get a bigger program, kids won't want to join. If more kids won't join Charlevoix Middle School's program, the wrestling program won't have much money.

Raise drop out age

Editor:

Do you think 16-year-olds are responsible enough to make the decision to drop out of school? I agree with Jennifer Granholm to raise the age when kids can legally drop out from 16 to 18. Too many kids are dropping out of school. Sixty-two kids dropped out of Timberlane High School.

If people dropped out earlier then teachers will get paid less. Then, they might want to quit and schools will gradually fall. The kids get a better job with education. All people can accomplish dreams and quitting school would be throwing your dreams away.

Sixteen-year-old kids are not responsible enough to make that big of a decision. The kids couldn't afford it to quit school because they don't have a good education and they won't get hired for a good job. Then, more businesses will close because less people will get hired because they have no high school diploma.

If you drop out at 16 you are more likely to get in trouble during school and work hours. Kids who drop out will most likely do drugs, drink, and make gangs at the age of sixteen when they are bored. People will get in more accidents because kids are drunk and become crazy drivers. I know someone who got in an accident and they dropped out that week.

In conclusion, most 16-year-olds are not mature enough to make the decision to quit school. I hope all Michigan voters take this seriously. I know I will always take this seriously.

Library starts new Internet policy

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix Public Library recently integrated an Internet use policy addressing concerns that are currently being discussed by the United States Supreme Court.

Just two weeks ago, the Supreme Court considered whether library patrons should be able to surf the Internet without government ordered pornography filters.

This spring, justices will decide if Congress can require public libraries to install software to filter out pornography as a condition of receiving federal money.

In Charlevoix, instead of installing filtration software, the library board of trustees tackled the issue hy having library staff monitor Internet use at the six Internet connected computer work stations.

"For us to provide unfiltered stations, we have to have monitoring access to protect children," Library Director Valerie Meyerson said.

She said the board chose to monitor because filters often don't work, allowing patrons to access unsuitable sites while blocking viable sites.

This monitoring system worked well for some time. But then, in December and January, complaints from patrons offended hy material they were seeing on screens started to come in.

"When we started getting

Bruce Campbell
Thursday, March 20, 2003
NCMC Student Center • 7:30 pm

Thursday, March 20th at 7:30pm marks the day and time that a Michigan native returns to tell his tale at the NCMC Student Center. In 1979 Bruce Campbell raised $350,000.00 to produce a low-budget film, Evil Dead. Completed piecemeal over four years, the film gained notoriety in England where it became the best-selling video of 1983, beating "The Shining". After its appearance at Cannes, where Stephen King dubbed it "the most ferociously original horror film of the year," New Line Cinema stepped forward to release Evil Dead in the US. Since this introduction to film, Campbell has worked in both television and cinema. Currently, his talent takes him on a national tour to promote his best-selling memoir titled "If Chins Could Kill: Confessions of a B Movie Actor". Most recently he had a cameo appearance as the ring announcer in friend Sam Raimi's summer blockbuster, Spider-man. As an added note, Bruce's father, Charlie Campbell is an adjunct instructor for NCMC.

Book signing to follow.

Held at the NCMC Student Center. No Admission Charge. Doors open at 6:45 pm.
Seating is on a first-come, first-served basis.

Library to watch for unsuitable internet use

INTERNET

complaints, I knew we had an issue we had to deal with," Meyerson said.

The library board discussed the issue at its meeting Feb. 13 and found the library's Internet use policy wasn't strong enough to address repeat offenders. And the board recommended that privileges of repeat offender's be revoked for one year.

Meyerson discussed the problem with a lawyer specializing in library law who advised her as to how to approach the new language and on March 5 the board adopted the new policy.

The policy states, "While patrons are free to access whatever Internet sites they wish, the library must also be mindful and respectful of the rights of other patrons (particularly children), to not be exposed to material and images they (or their parents) may find personally unsuitable."

"Any patron asked to remove an image or text from the monitor and then continues to view unsuitable images or text, will be asked to leave the facility. If there is a repeated offense, the patron will lose computer privileges for one month. Any and all offenses after the month suspension will result in losing computer privileges for one year."

Meyerson said this new language gives her staff recourse in their effort to keep offensive material away from child and adult patrons.

"We are here, providing this service and the Internet offers phenomenal resources but I don't want to offend people and make people afraid to come to the library and bring their children here. Now I feel like there is action we can take," she said.

Now it is up to the library staff and parents to determine what if unsuitable. Meyerson added defining that is difficult.

"If I would be uncomfortable with my child looking at something, it's unsuitable," she said.

The local library's effort to define "unsuitable" and protect the public from the seamy side of the internet without violating the First Amendment right to free speech is the same gray area the Supreme Court is wading through.

But Meyerson said she feels the local policy still allows for open access of information while protecting patrons and children.

County vision statement to direct growth

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Who: Charlevoix County
When: After town meetings across the county in 2002.
What does it mean: The vision statement offers a picture of the county in the year 2022, in terms of development. It will help guide the county to this vision through its planning decisions.

A recently developed vision statement for Charlevoix County will help direct growth in the area over the next 20 years.

"The vision statement is a look at what ideally the people would like to see. If we do reach this, we will see a county maintained in the way that reflects why a lot of people who moved to the area moved here," Charlevoix County Planning Department Director Larry Sullivan said.

The statement which offers a glimpse into Charlevoix County in the year 2022 was developed by representatives of Lansing's Planning and Zoning Center, Inc. in conjunction with the county planning department.

Its contents are based primarily on visioning town meetings that took place across the county during the summer of 2002. The statement, along with the county land use plan which is currently being created, will help guide county growth and development.

"Overall the county plan will allow the opportunity for input from people across the county and will provide an understanding of what is happening across their borders and how that may impact them," Sullivan said.

The land use plan which is expected to be complete by the end of 2003 is a tool to help communities move toward this vision.

"It recommends development policies and provides a consensus among local units of government as to what and where they want to see things happen," Sullivan explained.

The statement's vision of life in Charlevoix County, two decades from today reflects a way of life similar to what currently exists with natural and agricultural landscapes, small towns, healthy school districts and a thriving business community.

Words used to describe the county in 2022 include: wooded, farmland, open space, clean lakes, clean air and small towns.

While it reflects a desire to protect these elements that add to the area's quality of life, the statement does not ignore the prospect of growth.

Residential and commercial development is encouraged in the vision, to the point that it doesn't lead to sprawl.

Residential developments are described as compact.

"Settlement occurs in a compact pattern, close to existing cities and villages and in buffered clusters in rural areas," the authors state.

Any large scale developments are said to be located in "select locations," close to urban areas. The statement does not outline where in the county these locations are, but Sullivan said the county land use plan will outline suitable areas.

It further states that the downtown is made more viable because "no new strip malls, regional shopping malls or 'big box' stores have been built at the edge of towns since 2003."

Sullivan said this does not mean these stores will be excluded, but need to be integrated into the urbanized area.

"This isn't saying that all development should happen within city limits, the idea is to minimize the leap frogging of going out further and further," he said.

In this distant vision of the county, recreation thrives, power lines are underground and structures like wind turbine generators and cellular towers are allowed with height and placement regulations that minimize their impact on "scenic vistas."

Sullivan said it is possible with this vision of development to see growth in the county over the next 20 years. But there are two critical elements that will decide whether the statement will come to fruition and growth will be realized — affordable housing and cooperative government.

Providing affordable housing is an element of the land use plan which includes policy statements encouraging townships to vary housing types and price ranges.

To make sure this residential development and commercial development proceed in an orderly fashion the statement encourages cooperative government.

Sullivan said the importance of cooperative government does not mean the vision statement advocates county-wide zoning, but instead encourages communities to work together and agree on a core set of principles.

"This is a way to move the county forward in a positive direction. The only way that (countywide zoning) would happen is if the townships ask for it," he said.

The vision statement can be read in its entirety at libraries across the county or on the Internet at www.charlevoixcounty.org.

"The spider looks for a merchant who doesn't advertise so he can spin a web across his door and lead a life of undisturbed peace."

Council nixes parking ticket increase

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

> "They think it's the best way to put businesses out of business."
>
> Gabe Campbell,
> Charlevoix mayor on what businesses > think of raising the parking ticket prices

Charlevoix's City Council nixed parking meter violation rate increases and discussed union contracts before approving the 2003-2004 city budget.

Prior to discussing the budget, council went into closed session to hash out the latest developments in one unknown item included in the budget, union contracts.

The contracts in question deal with a large group of city union employees including: secretarial, street department, sewer and water workers who have been without a contract since April 1, 2002.

The budget proposes a 3.5 percent salary increase for these workers with 3.5 percent in back pay from April, but nothing has been settled.

According to third ward councilman Sherm Chamberlain the closed session discussion was an update from city manager Mike Wiesner, who handles contract negotiations.

Wiesner informed council that city administration is waiting to hear back from a union representative as to what their official position is, that is, what they want.

"We are more than happy to deal with them, but we have to know where they officially stand, to do that," Chamberlain said.

While many council members wanted to see this issue settled before the budget was adopted they are willing to wait to hear from the union.

However, they weren't willing to let metered parking violation rate increase slide.

The proposed budget would have increased non-metered parking tickets from $10 and $20 to $15 and $30. And metered parking tickets from $2, $10 and $20 to $5, $15 and $30.

Council agreed to the non-metered increase, but said any increase in the metered rate runs the risk of hurting downtown businesses.

When the budget public hearing kicked off, city mayor Gabe Campbell brought the increase up. He said he had spoken with merchants who were opposed to any increase in the metered fine.

"They think it's the best way to put businesses out of business," he said.

First ward councilman Norm Carlson said he had heard the same complaint from business owners.

City Manager Mike Wiesner said the proposed increase was aimed to help businesses, not hurt them.

"One of the reasons this was suggested was because we always think of meters as for turnover, not revenue. Two dollars is not as much as

U.S. Wildlife Service seeks comment on lynx habitats

Who: U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service

What it is: A 30 day comment period on the habitat of the Canadian lynx

What does it mean: It will help the service determine the quality of the habitat for this animal and reevaluate the range of the animal.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service recently opened a 30-day public comment period seeking information to help determine the amount and quality of habitat in the northeast, southern Rockies, Great Lakes and northern Rockies/Cascades regions of the United States for Canada lynx.

The Canada lynx was listed as a threatened species under the Endangered Species Act in March of 2000. Within the contiguous United States, the lynx's range extends into different regions that are separated from each other by ecological barriers consisting of unsuitable lynx habitat.

These regions are the northeast (Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York); the Great Lakes (Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan); the northern Rocky Mountains/Cascades (Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, northwestern Wyoming, Utah); and the southern Rocky Mountains (Colorado, southeastern Wyoming).

In compliance with a court order, the service must reevaluate a finding it made regarding the range of the lynx. This finding must be completed in June, 2003.

The service intends to examine information that has become available since the listing of the lynx in March of 2000. It is making some of this information available on the service's Internet site to enable the public to review and comment on it.

The information is available at: mountain-prairie.fws.gov/endspp/lynx.

The service invites comments on elements relevant to its determination concerning the range of the lynx. Its reevaluation will not be limited solely to the information available on its Internet site.

Written comments and information must be postmarked by April 15 and sent to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Montana Field Office, 100 North Park, Suite 320, Helena, MT 59601; or e-mail fw6_lynx@fws.gov.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is the principal federal agency responsible for conserving, protecting and enhancing fish, wildlife and plants and their habitats for the continuing benefit of the American people.

The service manages the 95-million-acre National Wildlife Refuge System, which encompasses 540 national wildlife refuges, thousands of small wetlands and other special management areas. It also operates 69 national fish hatcheries, 64 fishery resource offices and 81 ecological services field stations.

The agency enforces federal wildlife laws, administers the Endangered Species Act, manages migratory bird populations, restores nationally significant fisheries, conserves and restores wildlife habitat such as wetlands, and helps foreign governments with their conservation efforts. It also oversees the Federal Aid program that distributes hundreds of millions of dollars in excise taxes on fishing and hunting equipment to state fish and wildlife agencies.

it used to be. We thought there may be more incentive for turnover if the basic fee was raised," he explained.

Chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors John Campbell spoke on the board's behalf opposing an increase. And Steve Bennett, president of the Charlevoix Convention and Visitors Bureau also spoke in opposition.

"We are going to have a hard enough time breaking even this year with the business climate and political issues. We don't need another slap in the face for those who do come to town," Bennett said.

Council agreed and passed the $15.2 million budget without the rate increase. The combined metered and non-metered increase was expected to bring in an additional $8,500.

Coast Guard warns: Stay off the ice

With the recent spell of warm weather, the U.S. Coast Guard would like to warn the public of the dangers of ice and freezing cold water. Changing weather has caused the ice to become more unpredictable and unstable, claiming lives and property.

Ice conditions vary due to current, wind, sun and temperature and it is impossible to determine how thick or thin ice is just by looking at it. Ice does not maintain a uniform thickness; in fact, a sheet of ice may vary from 12 inches to only 1 inch within a distance of only 10 feet.

The Coast Guard offers the following advice to increase safety when out on the ice:

- Use the buddy system; never go out alone.
- Wear an exposure suit that is waterproof and a lifejacket. When a person falls into freezing water they instinctively breathe in, usually resulting in drowning unless they are wearing a lifejacket.
- Carry two ice picks or screwdrivers. In case you fall in use them to dig into the ice and pull yourself out.
- Carry a whistle or other noisemaker to alert people that you are in distress.
- Always be aware of what the weather conditions are; any changes could result in a change of ice thickness.
- Hypothermia becomes the biggest danger after falling through the ice. Hypothermia begins to set in quickly as the person's body core temperature drops below 95 degrees.

These tips may help increase a person's chance of survival, should they fall through the ice:

- Devote all of your efforts to getting out of the water. Act quickly before you lose full use of your hands.
- Don't take off your clothes. Instead, button, buckle, zip and tighten collars, cuffs, shoes and hoods. If possible, cover your head — in cold water about half of heat loss comes from the head.
- Don't try to swim, unless it is to a nearby boat or object you can climb on top of. By releasing the warmer water between your clothing and your body sending "warm" blood to your extremities, swimming can cut your survival time by as much a 50 percent.
- Even if it's painful, remain as still as possible. Intense shivering and severe pain in cold water are natural body reflexes. These will not kill you but heat loss will.

Celebrate farms this March 21

Celebrate America's farmers on March 21, National Agriculture Day.

Whatever food we want — whether it is raspberries in February, asparagus in November and oranges throughout the year — American consumers can usually buy it in today's world.

American farmers are the most productive in the world. In the United States , one farmer provides enough food and fiber for 129 people.

In Charlevoix County, there are over 250 farmers producing a wide variety of products from milk and honey to corn, beef, pork and garden vegetables.

While the average farm may be as large as 200 acres, many of Charlevoix's farmers specialize in unique crops which only require a small amount of land. New agricultural venues for the Twenty-first Century farmer include hydroponic and commercial fish farms, mushrooms, ginseng, ornamental trees and flowers.

For more information about agriculture in Charlevoix County in the Twenty-first Century call the Charlevoix County Farm Bureau office at 547-2043.

Public Notice?

Without it in your newspaper, you're left guessing what the government's doing in your community.

Public notice is the people's right to know the issues that affect them directly, and people know the place to find public and legal notices is in the newspaper. What you're holding right now is a historical document, printed and published with a date on every page. Public notices have been posted here since the days of colonial America. In our democratic society your newspaper fulfills an essential role in serving your right to know. After all, it shouldn't be your responsibility to know how to look, where to look, or when to look, let alone to know what you're looking for to be informed. Why guess? That is why you have, and read, your newspaper... where your right to know is already being served.

Islanders say Irish trip has changed their lives

IRELAND

apart, but our love of heritage brought us back together."

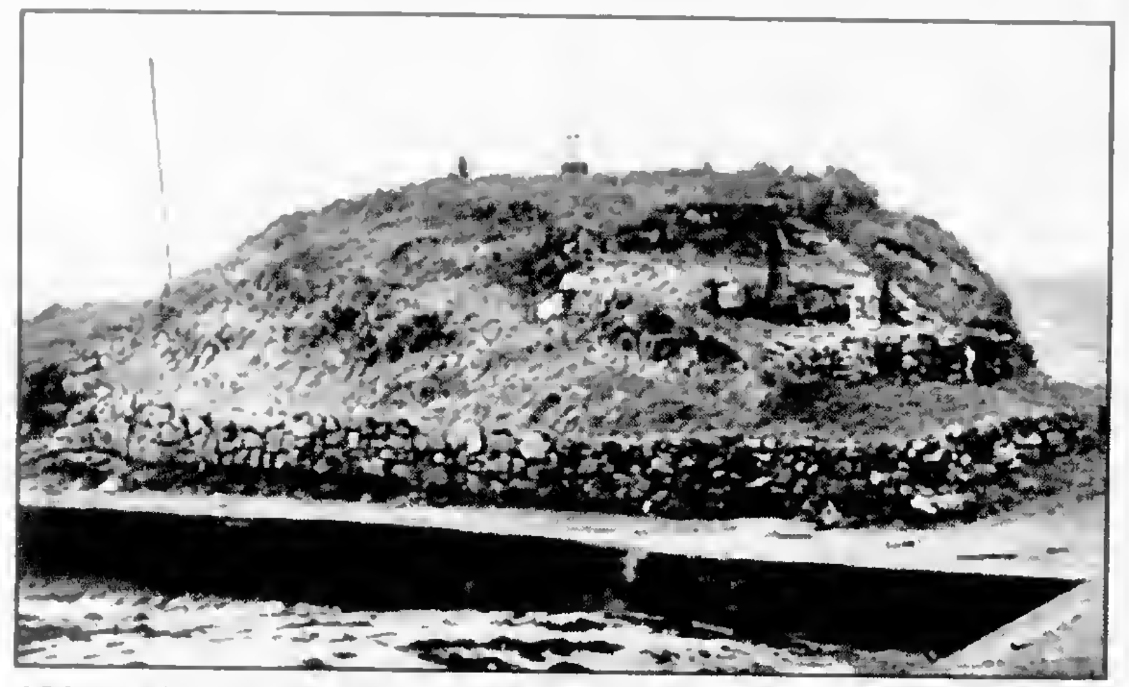
Now that the two islands are one, many of those that went are trying to figure out what is next.

Cushman said there are plans being made to have an exchange student program between Beaver Island and Arranmore Island in the future. She added some islanders would also like to send one student a year over to Ireland to learn Irish Gaelic — the language of Ireland.

Plans are also being made for another series of trips between both Arranmore Islanders and Beaver Islanders, Cole said.

Gillespie summed up the main change this trip has caused and the change that will affect the island for many years to come.

"I think the people that went on this trip will forever more value what price was paid to give them life. This was a great education for all of the Beaver Island people that went and those they will share the story with," he said.



(Above) The cruel landlord of Arranmore Island that forced many of the islanders over to North America in the 1800s, used to ban burial in the ground on Arranmore. Islanders used to have to bury their dead at sea. But, eventually the landlord allowed them to bury their dead on this rocky mound, which is now an old graveyard, because he could not get any other use out of it. (Photo by Richard Gillespie)

(Above) This monument was unveiled at the official "twinning" ceremony on Arranmore Island, Ireland with the Beaver Island residents. On the right is a beaver and on the left is an otter, in the middle is a fish. The monument was made in honor of the twinning of Beaver Island and Arranmore Island. (Above right) This is the ferry that brought the Beaver Island residents over to Arranmore Island for their stay. (Below right) This is the original ferry that served the island. When vehicles were brought over, planks had to be put down on the deck of the ferry and the vehicle was parked sideways on it. Thornburg to perform March 22, 23

Who: Great Lakes Chamber Orchestra concert
What It is: A two day performance with trumpeter Scott Thornburg.
When: 7:30 p.m., March 22 at the Cheboygan Opera House and 4 p.m., March 23 at the Crooked Tree Art Center in Petoskey

Trumpeter Scott Thornburg is the featured artist with the Great Lakes Chamber Orchestra concert 7:30 p.m., March 22, at the Cheboygan Opera House and at 4 p.m. March 23 at the Crooked Tree Arts Center.

Thornburg will perform Haydn's Concerto for Trumpet and later in the concert will play principal trumpet in Bach's Suite Number Three for Orchestra. While it is not the principal focus of the concert, a brief history of advances in the development of the trumpet is evident in the Bach and Haydn works.

During Bach's era (1720 - 1750) trumpet players performed on an instrument that was essentially a cylindrical tube limited to playing the notes that today we associate with the bugle (a conical tube). Performers could vary the combination of notes by changing the length of the tube — accomplished by adding pieces of tubing to the mouthpiece.

Scales were impossible to play in the low range, but could be managed in the very high range and Bach wrote for this extreme range.

Called "Clarino" players, these trumpet virtuosos formed guilds (unions) and commanded "top billing."

By 1775 few "Clarino" players were being engaged by composers; changing taste and perhaps the flexibility of the clarinet, introduced to the orchestra in the 1750s, caused the decline of their use. Clarinets could play all of the same notes, including scales in the lower range.

What composers gave up was the distinctive sound of the trumpet.

Haydn's Trumpet concerto was originally written in 1796 for a new, experimental instrument, the keyed trumpet. Several instrument makers designed keys similar to those on the clarinet in order to provide the lower scale notes and this is the instrument for which Haydn wrote the concerto.

By 1815 makers were experimenting with a valve system which allowed the air flow to be diverted to permanently connected tubing.

While "natural" trumpets (without valves or keys) are still played by early music specialists, today's virtuoso trumpeters have a wide range of instruments to choose from when performing literature of the earlier eras.

Thornburg performs routinely on the flugelhorn (a valve instrument like the bugle, with a mellow tone), the cornet (part conical and part cylindrical), valve trumpets pitched in B-flat, C, D, E-flat, and the piccolo trumpet, which plays an octave higher than the B-flat. As the pitch goes up, the instruments get smaller (shorter). The higher pitched instruments make playing the extremely high passages more accurate in pitch and less stressful for the performer.

Thornburg will perform the Haydn Trumpet Concerto on the E-flat trumpet and switch to his piccolo trumpet for the Bach Suite.

Concert tickets are $12 for adults and $8 for students. Tickets for the Cheboygan Opera House performance are available by calling (231) 627-5841 or (800) 357-9408. Tickets for the Petoskey performance are available at the Crooked Tree Arts Center at 347-4337.

Fire training

The city of Charlevoix Fire Department recently hosted a county-wide controlled burn at Norm Starr's residence located at 11327 Ferry Road in Eveline Township.

The controlled burn consisted of burning an approximately century old barn. The previous owner of the property was Oakley Saunders.

The training drill consisted of a joint effort between the countywide fire department and firefighters. This type of training aids in better command and control between departments. Communication and tactics on the fire ground is of the utmost importance and is practiced on this type of drill.

The city fire department thanked all of the fire departments that assisted with this drill.

Those included: Charlevoix Township, Banks Township, Boyne City, Boyne Falls, East Jordan, Hudson Township and the city's Explorer Post 53 junior firefighters. They also thanked the Starrs for letting them use their barn to better their departments with needed training. (Coutesy photo)

Charlevoix named as a Tree City USA

Charlevoix has been named a Tree City USA by The National Arbor Day Foundation.

It is the eleventh year Charlevoix has received this national recognition.

Charlevoix is also the recipient of a fourth Tree City USA Growth Award for demonstrating progress in its community forestry program in the following activity areas: Education and Public Relations, youth education, planning and management, sidewalk/curb policy, tree planting and maintenance and special tree planting project.

The prestigious Growth Award was created to recognize environmental improvement and higher levels of tree care in Tree City USA communities.

The Tree City USA program is sponsored by The National Arbor Day Foundation in cooperation with the National Association of State Foresters and the USDA Forest Service.

To become a Tree City USA, a community must meet four standards: a tree board or department, a tree care ordinance, a comprehensive community forestry program and an Arbor Day observance.

"Trees in our cities and towns help clean the air, conserve soil and water, moderate temperature, and bring nature into our daily lives," said John Rosenow, president of the National Arbor Day Foundation. "Tree City USA designation recognizes the work of elected officials, staff and citizens who plant and care for the community forest."

"Trees are a vital component of the infrastructure in our towns and cities, and provide many environmental and economical benefits," Arbor Day Foundation President Rosenow added. "A community, and its citizens, that recognizes these benefits and provides needed care for its trees deserves recognition and thanks."

HEALTH

There are many birth control options

Susan Killam, R.N.

'Your health'

Each year in the United States, 6.3 million pregnancies occur. Half, 3.15 million of these pregnancies are unplanned or unwanted. Contraception allows men and women the ability to plan, postpone and prevent pregnancies.

This article will discuss newly available contraceptive methods, as well as methods being developed or seeking availability in the United States.

Not all methods are appropriate for every couple. Personal health history issues may rule out some methods. Effectiveness rates vary. These rates are expressed in both typical as well as perfect use rates.

Benefits, disadvantages, cost and availability of a method are important considerations in selecting a method. Continuous abstinence is the only 100 percent effective method to prevent pregnancy.

Current methods include: birth control pills — both estrogen/progestin hormones and progestin only; IUDs; fertility awareness (rhythm); condoms — male/female; spermicides; emergency contraceptive (morning after) pills; diaphragm; cervical cap; sterilization — tubal/vasectomy; injections — monthly/every three months and withdrawal.

Three newly available methods in the United States are Mirena IUD, Ortho Evra Patch and Nuva Vaginal Ring.

Mirena IUD is a progestin releasing plastic device inserted into the uterus by a clinician. It can be left in place for up to five years. Typical and perfect use rates are 99 percent effective.

The Nuva Vagina Ring is a soft, flexible, transparent ring containing estrogen and progestin hormones which are slowly released into the vagina and then into the bloodstream over a three-week period. Nuva ring is placed into the vagina by the user and left in place for three weeks. It is then removed for one week. This cycle is repeated every four weeks. Its effectiveness rate range from 92 to 99 percent.

Five contraceptive products in the process of being developed or seeking to become available in the United States are: Seasonale, Implanon, Jadelle, Lea's Shield and Essure.

Seasonale is a combination birth control pill containing both estrogen and progestin hormones. Packaging is structured so that hormone-free week (resulting in menstrual period) occurs only every three months. Its effectiveness at preventing pregnancy is 95 to 99 percent.

Seasonale may be available in the United States in the fall of 2003.

Implanon is a single rod progestin containing implant inserted by clinician under the skin of the upper arm providing protection from pregnancy for up to three years. In clinical trial studies, no pregnancies have occurred in over 73,000 menstrual cycles.

Jadelle is a two rod progestin containing implant inserted by clinician under skin of upper arm for up to three years. Its effectiveness in clinical trials is 99.7 percent.

Lea's Shield is a one size reusable for up to one year silicone rubber cap placed over the cervix by the user. It is used with spermicide gel and can remain in place for 48 hours. A valve in the cap allows release of cervical fluids and air. Effectiveness rates are around 80 to 90 percent.

Essure, is a small, metal spring inserted by a gynecologist into each fallopian tube via the vaginal canal and uterus. Over a three-month period, the spring reacts with tubal tissue to create a blockage. This is a permanent method of birth control and is 99 percent effective.

Men, as well as women, play an important role in pregnancy prevention. To choose the best method, a couple needs information about, access to and financial resources for obtaining contraceptives. Good communication and decision making skills are also important for successful contraceptive use.

Susan Killam, RN, MSN, Nurse Practitioner, has provided women's reproductive health services at Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency since 1980 and jail health services at Charlevoix County Jail since 2002. She can be contacted at 547-7615.

School gearing up for annual spring musical

Students at Charlevoix Elementary School are gearing up for the Thirty-first Annual Spring Musical.

"It's a community event, a tradition. The musical establishes memories for families," Marina LaBlanc, the founder of the school musical and the Elementary School Music teacher, said.

This year, the event, "Let's Go to the Movies," will take place at 7 p.m., March 19 in the Charlevoix Middle School gym, celebrating the rich legacy of the film industry.

Over the last two months all 385 elementary students have been practicing 13 songs from old and new movies.

The students' voices will be accompanied by dance routines for a few songs including "Footloose," "Shrek" and "The Pink Panther."

Staff and students have helped set the movie mood in the gym with huge painted buckets of popcorn and movie scenes depicting the history of the industry from its start in silent pictures to the present.

Those who attend will also learn a thing or two about movies during the evening performance which is expected to last about 1.5 hours. Admission is free.

Rayders beat McBain, win regional

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix has gotten its vengeance on McBain.

The Rayders paid the Ramblers back from being beaten in last year's regional championship game, by beating McBain in overtime 63-58 Friday.

Charlevoix coach Keith Haske said this was just another one of the classic match-ups between the Rayders old March Madness opponent for the last three years — physical and very competitive.

"It was just an amazing game. It was a lot of fun," Haske said. "It was a great high school game."

He said the key to beating McBain was Charlevoix's strong defense and rebounding. Charlevoix contested every shot McBain had open throughout the game, making them work for their points.

Haske said he liked how his team went to the boards against McBain and noted Scott Friske and Drew Wright for their offensive playing.

Statistics for the game were: Friske with 24 points and 18 rebounds; Wright with 13 points and eight rebounds; Bryce Daly with 10 points and Nate Teuscher with four rebounds, five assists, two steals and two blocks.

This win came on the heels of an easy victory for Charlevoix against Mio, 87-53.

Haske said Mio was physically a lot smaller than Charlevoix and the Rayders used that to their advantage.

Plus, Haske said his team knew Mio would be trying for many three-point shots. So, the Rayders shut down the Thunderbolts chances for those shots with good defense and taking away second shooters.

Friske had 24 points, 14 rebounds and two blocks; Teuscher had 13 points and eight assists, Daly had 10 points and Ben Bergmann had 10 points.

The Rayders faced Ishpeming Westwood last night, Tuesday, in the quarter-finals. The results of that game were not known before press time.

If Charlevoix won that game, the Rayders would be moving on to the semi-finals at 1 p.m., Thursday at Michigan State University's Breslin Center.

ment in education.

Even though she has put in over 30 years of hard work for the school district she said she was surprised to find out she had won the OPIE award.

"You never expect something like that. It was a nice honor. It makes everything I've been doing all these years seem worthwhile, it's a very special award," Carland said.

Recently she has toyed with the idea of retirement, but said she won't be leaving the classroom any time soon. She still enjoys coming to school every day, being part of the teaching team, being creative and challenging her students.

Both Goss and Carland credited the staff at the elementary school for making their classrooms a success.

The teachers will join 24 other OPIE honorees from area school districts served by the Michigan Education Association, at the upcoming event hosted by the Harbor Springs School District. The OPIE Award ceremony will begin at 8 p.m. May 7 at Boyne Highlands.

"Our citizens up here are very proud of their hometown schools and it's a great idea to recognize the contributions local school employees make to their schools and communities," Cox said of the upcoming event.

Developer interested in part of property

In August of 2002 the former middle school property went on the market. And, since then, the site has had the attention of both public and private entities.

Since then, the city of Charlevoix and the Charlevoix Public Library have been scouting out the school and surrounding 13 lots as has Stuart Kaufman, a developer from Charlevoix and Birmingham.

The library is interested in using the building or site to construct a new facility. The city needs marina overflow parking close to town. And Kaufman thinks single family residential homes would be the best use for the land.

Now, a second private developer, Bill Sherman, a Boulder Park resident, has entered the playing field with thoughts of a joint private and public venture with the library.

According to Charlevoix Public Library Director Valerie Meyerson, Sherman would like to use the building for condominiums and have the library use the gym as part of its new building.

She said the news of Sherman's interest in the site throws an interesting twist on the fate of the school.

The library board met March 13 to hash out how it should proceed following a presentation made by library architects Engberg Anderson Design Partnership March 5. The presentation looked at the school as a possible location for a new library or a community center.

In lieu of Sherman's latest proposal the board voted to direct its architect, Bill Williams, to estimate the cost of using the school, including the gym, for a single story facility, and, in spite of some reservations, to cost and analyze Sherman's proposal.

"The board is trying hard to be open and flexible in looking at all its options," Meyerson said.

The board has not yet sat down with Sherman and talked about his vision of the library's relationship with his condominium development.

However, when the board met, trustee Cynthia Postmus said in considering using the gym the library may be losing its vision of creating a facility that will serve the needs of the community for the next 40 years.

"This is a huge opportunity to do something good and we may be boxing ourselves in. Do we have the flexibility we need in that building or are we short-changing ourselves in the long run," she asked the board.

> "This is a huge opportunity to do something good and we may be boxing ourselves in. Do we have the flexibility we need in that building or are we short-changing ourselves in the long run?"

> Member of the library board of trustees

Meyerson said her understanding of Sherman's plan is to negotiate the sale of additional land adjacent to the gym, to the library for its building. But, she added that she doesn't think he knows how much property the library wants.

She said the 20,000 square foot building, parking lot and space for future additions would require at least eight lots.

Sherman did not return calls regarding his development plans by press time.

The updated architectural use and cost analysis should shed some light on the library's ability to use the school as a library or use the gym and an addition for its purposes. It is estimated that it will be ready in two weeks.

In the meantime, the six month deadline the school board gave the city and library to make their decision will expire in April.

Meyerson plans to meet with Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Dr. Johns this week to hash out a number of issues including the deadline and whether or not the school would sell the library just the vacant land.

In the past the school board has expressed interest in keeping the sale of the building and the property as a package deal.

Assisted living development proposed

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The city of Charlevoix Planning Commission is looking into amending its zoning ordinance to accommodate an assisted living complex.

Diane Gillette, owner of Sunnybank Retirement Community in Petoskey, approached the commission March 10 with a plan to bring a similar facility to Charlevoix's north side.

"It's often an alternative to a nursing home and there isn't anything to serve this particular need in the market," Gillette said.

Sunnybank builder Lionel Thomas of DKL Construction in Traverse City, said assisted living facilities are lacking in Charlevoix and if Sunnybank were to locate here it would be self-driven.

Planning commission member John Campbell agreed and before making a motion to look into zoning ordinance amendments, said, "There is certainly a need for it."

The rest of the commission unanimously supported his motion.

Now, city planner Gerry Harsch and zoning administrator Diane Manore will work together to develop options as to how the ordinance can be changed to accommodate Sunnybank. Currently, there is no provision in the ordinance to handle this type of development.

There are two areas that are close, but don't touch directly on it. Harsch said the R-4 planned residential multiple family dwelling area allows between nine and 11 units per acre, much less density than the typical senior housing project. The other is a provision in the R-1 and R-2 single family district that allows for colleges and thus is open to dormitories.

"Similar with rooms, cafeterias and common areas that would be in a senior development," he said.

One possible amendment would be to change the ordinance wording to allow for assisted living in the R-1 district with conditions. Another would be to require a special use permit in the R-1 district. Other options would be to allow it in the R-4 multiple family district or to establish an assisted living district.

The commission is expected to review the alternatives in April.

Gillette told the commission she and partner Ruth Bellissimo have been looking for property in the city for a couple of years, because the facility would be most easily serviced by its water and sewer services.

She currently has an option to purchase a piece of land in the city that fronts Petoskey Avenue and is owned by Charlevoix resident and Realtor Ed Amick.

This is part of the same 8 acre piece of land between Petoskey Avenue and Division Street that the planning commission was considering rezoning in December of 2002. At that time Amick wanted to rezone two acres of the parcel from R-2, single family residential, to R-4, a residential zone for apartments and other multiple family dwelling uses.

However, the public hearing in the matter before the planning commission was canceled after Amick withdrew his request, because he had some unanswered questions that needed to be answered.

At that time the request was to rezone 2 acres of that parcel that border Petoskey Avenue to build condos. This same piece is what Sunnybank is interested in.

The proposed unit is a single-story building spanning 36,000 square feet, covering about one acre of land. It is shaped like an X with wings containing 54 units, 32 of which are efficiency and 22 that are one-bedroom apartments.

Its exterior is vinyl sided with cultured stone on the lower portion and a canopy near the font door for weather protection.

Harsch said this type of development fits comfortably with residential neighborhoods because it has low volumes of traffic, is well landscaped and while the building is larger than a typical home, it is one story.

Gillette does not have a construction timeline she is aiming to meet, but said if zoning accommodations are made she and Bellissimo would break ground as soon as possible.

Sunnybank of Petoskey which is located off East Mitchell, is similar to what owners Diane Gillette and Ruth Bellissimo are proposing for part of Ed Amick's property between Petoskey Avenue and Division in the city. The Petoskey assisted living complex has 44 units; the proposed Charlevoix site would have 54 units. The planning commission is currently considering amending the city zoning ordinance to accommodate this use. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

Even though many Charlevoix residents watched together as the United States launched its first attack on Iraq, their support for the war was divided.

Charlie Butcher, commander of the local American Legion and vice-commander of the local Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) post, said members of those veterans organizations are behind president George Bush and American troops.

"It's about time," he said of the start of the effort. "It was a targeted opportunity and that's what war is all about."

In fact, Butcher said many of the veterans he knows back the effort to the point that if they could, they would re-enlist.

While some veterans are celebrating what they see as the first stages of an American victory in ousting the "evil tyrant" Saddam Hussein, other citizens are hanging their heads in disgust.

Charlevoix resident Steve Little said he is in mourning and doesn't remember a darker time in American history since the Vietnam War.

Little doesn't buy President Bush's claim that the war is aimed at disarming Iraq and securing America from the threat of weapons of mass destruction.

"Bush's aim is to turn the Mideast into the Midwest. He's

Wal-Mart shows preliminary plan

By JEREMY MCBAIN

Representatives from Wal-Mart met with Charlevoix Township trustees and planning commission members last week to show them preliminary plans for a new supercenter in the township.

According to Charlevoix Township Planning Commission member Chuck Center, the township officials and Wal-Mart representatives met on March 13. At that meeting, the representatives showed the officials preliminary plans for a Wal-Mart Supercenter to be located on the south side of Charlevoix Township — near the Flight Deck Bar on US-31.

"It was an informal meeting," Center said.

Nancy Rajewski, planning commission chair and township trustee, said the meeting was really a way for the Wal-Mart representatives to learn what the township officials' thoughts were on the development. She said changes to the preliminary plans were suggested.

Center said, "They were very open to suggestions."

He added the representatives have resubmitted their plans to their architects to incorporate the township officials' requests

Borths enjoying helping others at Oleson's

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Since 1975, Bob Borths has helped the people of Charlevoix feed their families.

It was in 1975 that Borths, now 51, started working at Oleson's Markets in Charlevoix in his early 20s. He is now the store manager.

"I love the people," he said about his job. "I like to talk to people and you never see me in a bad mood."

Borths started at Oleson's after the company bought out the former Krogers grocery on Hurlbut Street. He said a friend of his, Bill Hornsby, who was the manager of Krogers, convinced him to come work for Oleson's with him.

"He thought I had potential. I don't know why he wanted to work with me so bad," Borths said with a laugh.

Borths came to Charlevoix with his family in 1967 from Wisconsin, when he was in eleventh grade. He said he stayed in the area after graduation because the United States was fighting the Vietnam War and he was not sure if he would be drafted.

"I thought I would wait it out. So I went to Oleson's because they had insurance," he said.

Borths said he was never drafted, but he would have gone to war if he was called to service.

When he first came to Charlevoix, Borths said he thought it was a very nice place.

"I liked the beauty. It was a clean town and the people were friendly," he said.

But he had some adjustments to make.

He originally came from a large town in Wisconsin, with about 700 students in each class. But, Charlevoix was a small resort community with about 100 students in each class.

Over the years, Borths has seen many changes taking place in Charlevoix — from condominiums being built around Round Lake to the railroad bridge being taken down.

He said one of the big surprises for him was when Kmart came into Charlevoix.

"I didn't think our town could have supported them," he said. And now he is wondering the same thing as reports indicate Wal-Mart is interested in coming to Charlevoix.

But, change has not only taken place in the community under Borths' watch. There have also been many changes at Oleson's over the years.

He said the store has been remodeled three times and it was expanded two years ago. The expansion was necessary for the store to compete with other grocery stores in the area.

"It was really needed, we needed to compete or we would get pushed aside," Borths said.

Borths also said he has noticed a change in workers, for the worse.

Today, young people do not want to work, he said. All they want is a paycheck, without putting in the time.

However, older workers are a blessing for him.

"Older people care about their jobs. I just hired a woman who loves her job, she is an older woman. This is like a hobby for her....and they are dependable too," he said.

But, life is not all about work at a grocery store for Borths.

Borths has been married for almost 30 years to Cookie Borths, an employee in the Charlevoix County Clerk's Office. Together they have three children: Lisa, 25, Ryan, 22 and Kyle, who died in 1995 at the age of 10.

Lisa and Ryan are graduates of Western Michigan University.

Besides his family, Borths has many hobbies. He was a student of the martial art Kuk Soo Wan with his sons for about six years.

"I did it to bond with my boys," he said.

He also enjoys playing horseshoes and is in the Petoskey league and a traveling league. And for the last 25 years, he and his wife have played in the Charlevoix Recreation Department's co-ed volleyball league.

"I just like to stay physical and be active," he said.

As for the future, Borths said his most immediate concern is a Wal-Mart coming to Charlevoix, based on articles he has read in the newspapers.

"Wal-Mart comes into a town, eats it up and leaves," he said. "It will eat up this community. People may deny it, but it is going to happen. We (Oleson's) are lucky to be downtown and we get boaters and walkers."

This immediate threat will also impact Oleson's, Borths said. While the company wants to get bigger, this may harm those plans.

In the meantime, Borths continues to help his customers find the perfect ingredients for their family dinners, give them a smile as they shop and a friendly greeting — a talent he has perfected with almost 28 years of service to Charlevoix shoppers.

He is quick to offer advice to the young people of Charlevoix.

"Education....get as much as you can get. No one can take it away from you," he said.

Another excellent spring performance

EDITORIAL

Another winter will be behind us soon.

The cold temperatures are slowly climbing, the snow is beginning to disappear and, once again, music is filling the air in Charlevoix.

This music is not the sounds of birds, the chiming of church bells or a man whistling a tune — this music is coming from the mouths of Charlevoix children as part of an annual sign of spring. The music the children of Charlevoix were singing, seemed to start a few months ago and was slowly building up over the winter until Wednesday.

It was on Wednesday that Charlevoix Elementary School children showed their parents and others in the audience, how much talent they have at the thirty-first annual Charlevoix Elementary School spring musical.

Each year students are prepped for this event by their equally talented teacher Marina LaBlanc. They work hard to learn the songs and dance moves, many of them singing or dancing at almost any free moment they get.

All of this hard work comes together for the students in the annual spring musical when hundreds of parents and others pack the gymnasium at Charlevoix Middle School. What a great feeling it must be for these students to be in front of such an enthusiastic crowd, who are cheering loudly and clapping with all their joy.

And this year was just as good as every other.

Charlevoix teacher Marina LaBlanc did an excellent job preparing the students for this year's musical as she has done every year. And just like every other year, the student performances were excellent.

We salute LaBlanc and the students of Charlevoix Elementary School for another fine spring musical. It is surely one of the community's favorite signs that spring is near.

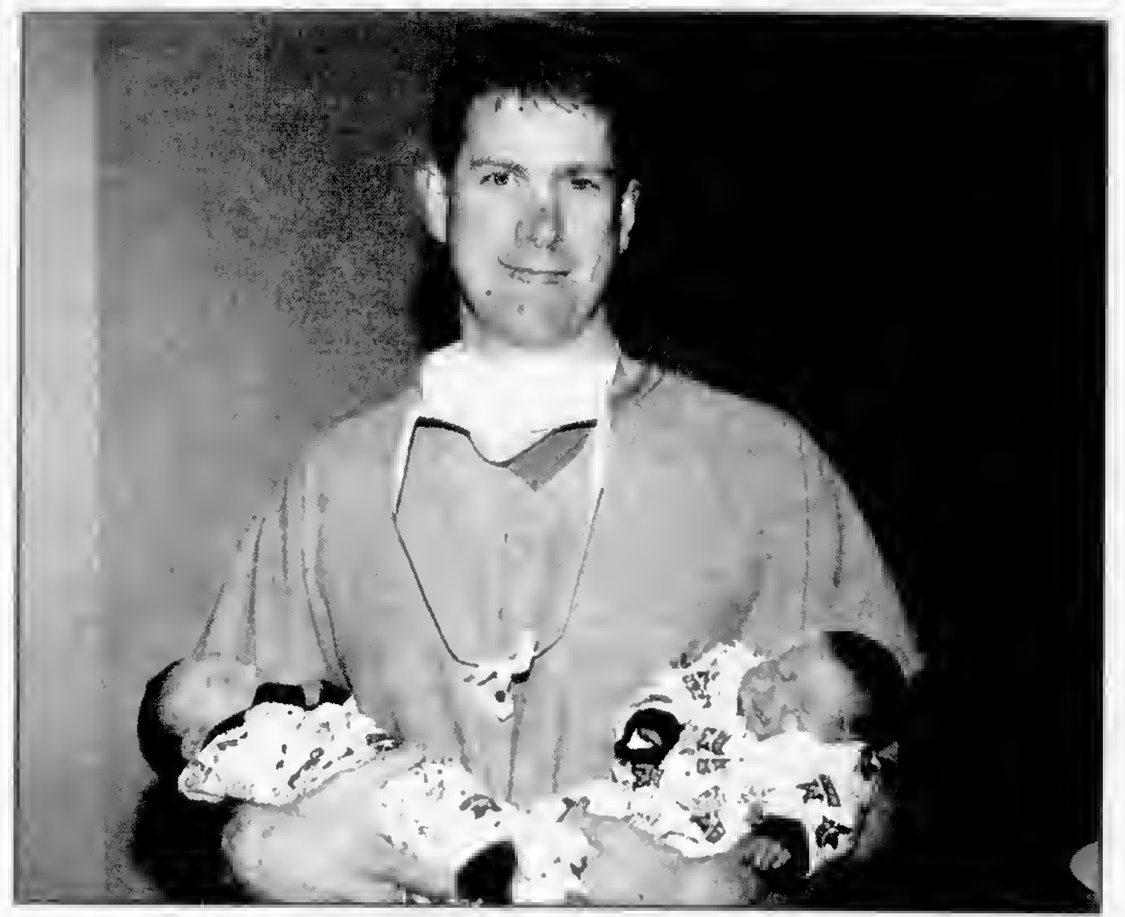
New obstetrics department a fine addition to hospital

Edith Gilbert

'Just a thought'



Dr. James Jeakle holds twins Taylor and Jordan Noble. Their parents are Rachel and Kyle Noble of Boyne City. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

When Dr. Jim Jeakle was 5 years old, his mother broke her ankle while the family vacationed in Charlevoix.

He remembers his father driving up Park Avenue to the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

"When I grow up," Jim said then, "I am going to be a doctor in that hospital!" Not only is he a doctor here today, he is chief of staff!

Jeakle completed his residency at Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak, which Fortune Magazine recently named in its list of the 100 best places to work in America. Still, when he checked out "that little Charlevoix Hospital" he remembered from childhood, he told me he couldn't believe what he saw!

Thanks to past outstanding financial support by the community, this hospital has attracted both qualified doctors and staff. He feels that our small town of 3,500 has done a great job to set us apart. It was an easy decision for him to move north with his family in 1995.

Next month the new obstetrical wing of the Charlevoix Area Hospital will be up and running. Jeakle assures me that for a small 44-bed hospital, the obstetric unit is "state of the art!"

For example, the new OB wing has its own operating room that is used only for C-sections, and it will have an infant security system. It is the only hospital in the north that has a scalp pH machine that measures a baby's oxygen level during labor!

In the past, an average of 200 babies have been delivered here every year, but this number is bound to increase. Now there will be a total of eight instead of four family birthing rooms with natal resuscitation equipment and radiant infant warmers.

The cheery rooms, overlooking Lake Michigan, are large with comfortable chairs for family members. The new, huge families' waiting room also overlooks the lake. It is still in need of furniture, but Jeakle isn't worried. He feels that the big-hearted donors, who in the past have helped make this small hospital as efficient as any hospital in a major city, will continue to support its needs through their multiple foundations and successful volunteer fund-raisers.

In addition to the above improvements, there is a new meeting room with a large screen, "Where I can continue my medical education every Tuesday and get credit hours by attending interactive live telecast lectures offered at Wayne State University. This information and technology was once only available at major medical centers, but it is now much more available to rural hospitals."

Besides excellent nursing patient care, there are classes offered for the whole family during pregnancy and after birth, including education for mothers with a full time lactation consultant; for parents (Lamaze, CPR and car seat classes); sibling classes for children. During Halloween the members in the mother's circle bring their babies in costume to a Baby Fair Reunion Party.

The next time you visit this avant-garde facility, you will be impressed with the caring spirit radiating between doctors, nurses, patients and in fact, the entire community.

Great season Rayders

Editor:

I want to take just a moment to publicly congratulate the Charlevoix boys' basketball team on another great season. You represented your school and community with dignity and class all over northern Michigan.

I had the opportunity to videotape all of the Rayders games for Coach (Keith) Haske, and this afforded me the opportunity to be a little closer to this outstanding group of young men. I got to see them in a slightly different perspective and I was very impressed.

You experienced thrilling victories and heart breaking defeats and always you represented your community and your school with class.

To the Charlevoix community, if you haven't gone to a sports event recently, come on out and support these young adults.

The spring sports season is right around the corner and there is a lot to see and cheer, but mostly I bet you will come away with the same impression I have had for three decades and I get each time I go to a school event. We are truly blessed with a community of outstanding young adults.

Oh, one more thing for the entire "RAYDER NATION." Next basketball season started last night about 9:30 on the bus back from Cheboygan.

Old school could be of use

Editor:

To begin with, how would you like it if all your good memories just got blown away? Well, I know a lot of people that are having that happen to them because of Charlevoix deciding to demolish the old middle school. I think we should keep it standing and well. All you would have to do is fix it up a bit and "Walla!"

You could turn it into something magnificent! You could turn it into a homeless shelter! That would be a great and helpful building here in the good town of Charlevoix!

Also, we are the middle town of most all the towns and I think it's a very good idea! Not one town around us has a homeless shelter or something that helpful! There are a lot of people seeking homes and hoping for somewhere to stay.

Most importantly, it is winter. In the winter, the weather is cold and that's the time when people are hoping for a place to keep warm and stay. We should stop their searching and give them a place! They would be so delighted!

Another point is, there are three floors full of rooms and areas to be used for places to rest, eat, and live a healthy life! There is plenty of room to put people and there are plenty of people to put in those rooms.

In conclusion, I just wanted to let you know how the people that used to go to that school plus me feel about the old middle school being taken away! Thanks for your cooperation!

War is not the answer

Editor:

I write these words with a heavy heart, for the bombs are falling.

Our brave men and women in the military will shed their blood because President Bush has disregarded the will of the people and launched a war of aggression against Iraq. Thousands of innocent children will die.

A civilization that has stood for 50 centuries will suffer immeasurable harm. A city of five million will be reduced to rubble. The bombs are falling.

Although I agree that President Hussein is a bad man, and that Iraq would be better off without him, he is the leader of a sovereign nation. The United Nations placed demands on him that he was complying with. The inspections were working. No weapons of mass destruction were found, and the non-compliant weapons that were found were being destroyed as ordered.

The peaceful disarmament of Iraq was becoming a reality. But now, the bombs are falling.

Terrorism is a horrible scourge on the world. The attacks of 9/11/01 reminded the American people that everyone is a potential target of terrorists.

President Bush is right for wanting to end terrorism. I disagree with his methods. I think he is only attacking the symptoms, and not the disease.

But Saddam Hussein has not been linked to recent terrorism. Our own intelligence agencies have failed to find any link between Iraq and Al Qaeda. An independent investigation on behalf of Vice President Cheney came to the conclusion that such a link does not exist. Several foreign intelligence agencies have denied the existence of that link. Yet President Bush says that President Hussein is in league with Al Qaeda. And so the bombs are falling.

Diplomacy has not failed. The world has for the first time engaged in a serious and open debate on the legitimacy of war. Two countries with a thousand years of being enemies have joined together as friends to implore President Bush to allow the international weapons inspectors the time to finish the job that they started.

Diplomacy has not failed President Bush. President Bush has failed diplomacy. On his orders, the bombs are falling.

Over the coming weeks and months, the American news media will report on the course of the military action in Iraq.

They will report only what the military allows them to report. When you read these reports, keep in mind that collateral damage means dead children. I weep for the people of Iraq.

The bombs are falling.

Terrorist organizations that have no interest in the fate of President Hussein will strike at America. In response, our government will take steps to further curtail the basic freedoms that make the United States the great nation that it is. I support the troops — I want them to come home.

I love my country. I weep for her now.

The bombs are falling.

Student to compete in problem solving

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A Charlevoix Middle School student's skills in solving the problems of the future have earned her the opportunity to compete at the state level.

Shauna Spencley, the daughter of Charlevoix residents Dean and Patti Spencley, joined Charlevoix Middle School's Future Problem Solving Program this year.

After recently earning high praise for her work from state evaluators, 12-year-old Spencley was invited to the Michigan Future Problem Solving Program Bowl to take place March 29 and 30 in Ann Arbor.

"I'm excited to see how well I do," she said.

This opportunity is the culmination of a year-long program through which Pat Miller, the program coach and middle school science teacher, taught 38 students to creatively seek, attack and solve problems that may arise in the future.

Future Problem Solvers provides academic benefits by emphasizing higher thinking and problem solving skills helping participants reach their intellectual potential.

"It gives them a systematic way of solving problems using a six-step process — to look at alternatives, to make decisions and to come up with different solutions and solutions within solutions," Miller said. "And once they learn the process they can apply it to any situation. It allows them to really stretch their imaginations."

Since November of this school year, the students have been working in teams on three problems — sports medicine, electronic commerce and nanotechnology.

State evaluators looked over their work with regards to electronic commerce and sports medicine and sent back responses to Miller, who then focused lessons on weak areas.

Spencley's response to the nanotechnology quandary was what qualified her for the upcoming competition.

Next week, she will compete with other future problem solvers from across the state in grades four through six to work toward a solution to an unknown topic related to DNA identification.

If Spencley does well at the state competition she will move on to the International Future Problem Solvers Conference to take place in June at the University of Connecticut.

"We are proud of her and she is definitely capable (of qualifying for the international competition)," Miller said.

Charlevoix Middle School students have placed at the international conference in the past.

The Future Problem Solvers program was developed in 1973 at the University of Georgia. Currently, nationwide there are 150,000 to 200,000 students from the United States and foreign countries participating, 8,000-10,000 of which are in the state of Michigan.

Smallpox vaccine needed

Editor:

Are you afraid of diseases being spread around the United States. like the smallpox diseases?

Well, don't be because there's a cure! I would like our government to require all people in the United States. to be vaccinated with the smallpox vaccine so we will be safe from the disease.

To have a vaccine is safe to the community. So if the community got the vaccine it would not spread the disease.

If we don't have the vaccine, the community will be less populated because of the disease. The smallpox needs to be isolated.

The vaccine is not harmful to human beings like us. It's just like a polio shot. Did it harm you? No. Neither will this shot. Would you rather suffer from a disease than getting the shot?

To have the vaccination other countries can see that it's not harmful.

Other countries would stop sending the diseases to us. Then finally other countries would want to take the vaccine.

So now the United States can be more germless than any other country if the citizens got the shot. I hope the government takes this into consideration.

Biological fears are real

Editor:

Today in the United States, citizens are worried about someone bringing the biological smallpox disease to our country. I think that people of all ages and gender should have a smallpox vaccination.

The smallpox vaccine can keep our citizens healthy. Furthermore, many people in the United States have never had a smallpox vaccination.

Without the smallpox vaccine, people who catch the disease may die. If everyone gets the vaccine, people will not get the disease and stay healthier.

The smallpox vaccine is not harmful. Without the shot the disease will make you suffer if you catch it. For those that are afraid of the shot, it will only hurt for a few seconds but then it will prevent them from getting the disease.

In the future if everyone gets the shot, we will be a more developed country and immigrants from foreign countries will want to move here because of the great health care.

If we do not have a healthy society, people will not want to move to our country or think good things about it.

It is our society so we should make sure we get the vaccine. I want everyone to be healthy and live as long as possible. We should all get the vaccine so the United States of America can be healthy.

Dropout rate should be 18

Editor:

It would be great for the dropout rate for someone dropping out of high school to go to age 18. If people were more educated then we could have a more educated country.

If citizens would listen in class, those extra two years of schooling could really pay off in the future.

If you have a little education, then you might end up working at McDonald's, or some other low-paying job, instead of having the job you always wanted.

Another reason would be that we would have too many uneducated people in the world. People who drop out of school early do not have as many job opportunities.

Example,when you go out trying to find work, most of the jobs will not hire you because you did not graduate and you dropped out of school early.

Uneducated people can't get good jobs, so our population in the world will go down because there won't be any money. You end up living on the streets, without a job, so in that case the population would go down.

Example, people who are not educated cannot have as good of a life. If you're out of school by 18, you're old enough to make your own decisions. Example, you can vote when you are 18.

Therefore, if they raised the dropout age to 18, you would be old enough to make your own decisions.

New stoplight necessary

Editor:

Kids may want to cross the street. But what would happen if there was an accident?

Charlevoix needs a stop light and crosswalk between the St. Mary's church and Charlevoix Middle School road.

The first reason is that I've heard many people talking and complaining about all the traffic. And if we put a stop light up there the traffic would get smaller and not as fast.

It may take money and we have a bus to cross the road for the kids, but that is only on the week days. We need to cross the road on the weekends to get home or to a friend's house.

Even if it may take money people won't complain. In addition, kids won't get hurt. Also, there has been a car crash there. That road also gets slippery and that can cause more car crashes. So Charlevoix please take my letter into consideration.

Save the old middle school

Editor:

My name is Andrea Smith and I go to Charlevoix Middle School and I was wondering, did you go to the old middle school? Would you like to have a building full of memories torn down? I strongly believe that we can turn it into many different places.

It holds many memories for people. For example, someone could have got his or her first award there. Or if that doesn't convince you we have won many basketball games there.

It could be a retirement home. There are not many retirement homes in Charlevoix. Also our elders have been here longer than us so they should get a retirement home.

My last reason is it could be a larger library because the old one is getting too small.

Besides if there is too much room left over from making it a library, then they can make it into office departments. This would make the unemployment rate go down.

The old middle school is a great place. It could be a retirement home or a bigger library.

There are many professions that can be performed at the old middle school. Charlevoix voters don't tear down the old middle school.

Skaters, paintball players need room to roam

Editor:

I am a skateboarder and I have seen many talented skateboarders with nowhere to go. I am also a paintball warrior in need of a challenging arena.

Building an indoor skate park and paintball arena would keep kids busy so they will have a better chance of staying off drugs. This will keep kids healthy so that they can participate in other sports. Another good reason is that paintball wars are sometimes played dangerously.

If this is played in backyards, a runaway paintball could hit a person or property that is close by. When you have the right equipment it is a lot of fun. Also, if this is built this will decrease the number of skateboards on the sidewalks.

This will make it safe for people on the sidewalks and on skateboards.

If Charlevoix builds a skate park and paint hall arena this will make our town a lot safer.

High school French trip on despite war

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

With France opposing the American conflict with Iraq and the war itself under way, a Charlevoix High School trip abroad was almost canceled.

On March 20, parents of French students signed up to go to France over spring break met with principal Gary Grundman and high school French teacher Sue Kessler to decide whether the trip is a good idea.

It was decided that unless the state department issues a warning against travel to France, the 11 students and two chaperones, Kessler and Melissa Marchand-Harrison, will leave Charlevoix High School at 1 p.m. Monday, March 31, for Paris. They will join 13 students from Alma High School there.

"The students are very excited, they were very afraid the trip would be canceled," Kessler said. "I think France is a very safe country and I hope it proves to be this time as well."

Kessler does not believe anti-American sentiment in France will be a problem for the group.

The question of whether it was safe to send the students weighed on Kessler's mind the morning of March 19. Later that morning, Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, Dr. John Sturock, contacted her and asked that she look into the issue.

Kessler called ISE, Inter-cultural Student Experience of Minneapolis, Minn., the company through which the travel plans were made.

> "The students are very excited, they were very afraid the trip would be canceled."

> Sue Kessler, High school French teacher

ISE representatives assured her they had 20 groups currently in France that hadn't run into problems.

However, other groups had canceled trips.

Parents and Kessler ultimately made the decision to move forward with the trip.

However, if at any time a parent is uncomfortable with sending their student they can pull them from the trip.

Parents who choose to cancel without a recommendation by the state department will not be reimbursed the $1,800 trip cost.

Alma students have not decided whether to cancel.

The program requires that at least eight Charlevoix students travel.

During their 15-day stay in France, the students will spend a week touring Paris and a week with host families in Brittany, returning to Charlevoix April 14.

These students will leave March 31 for a two-week trip to France. Fears of traveling abroad during war time almost canceled the trip. Work to begin on city hall project

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A groundbreaking ceremony will officially kick off the Charlevoix City Hall renovation project.

"I think the community, mayors, council members have worked long and hard to save and plan for this project. So often we go out and do projects, finish them and start another and don't celebrate enough," city manager Mike Wiesner said of the upcoming groundbreaking.

The event is scheduled to take place at 3 p.m. Thursday, March 27. in front of the former post office located off Mason Street, next to city hall.

The pubic is invited to attend. At the site there will be an opportunity to review project plans, the construction timeline and to enjoy refreshments. A surprise guest will also make an appearance.

Charlevoix's City Council officially awarded the construction contract to low bidder Petrie Construction of East Jordan for $2.067 million at its meeting March 17.

Petrie's contract is just under $200,000, or about 10 percent, over the city's current building construction budget of $1,874,672.

Wiesner said that because the project is starting almost two years later than was initially anticipated, the city won't need to borrow any more money from the electric fund than was planned.

The loan planned from that fund is $678,000. The city will still be able to pay the loan off with 4 percent interest at $240,000 annually over four years, paying "a little" more in the fourth year than was originally budgeted.

Petrie's bid indicated the company could finish the project in 420 days.

The city hall project will include expanding and upgrading Charlevoix City Police and Fire departments, including the addition of shower facilities, a fire department training room and a workout room.

To allow for the expansion, the renovation will include a 2,200 square foot addition on the three-space parking area off Mason Street, adjacent to the police department. Plans for this expansion include retaining the building's sandstone structure with limestone trim.

New second floor council chambers equipped with additional seating and state-of-the-art technology, including audio-visual components, is also part of the project.

The current main level council chambers will be the office of the building department, the electric department and the city clerk.

Elevators will be added to the building on the main floor.

The first of four phases will begin with renovations to the old post office. City employees will temporarily relocate there while city hall, which was built in 1939, gets spruced up. The renovation will include the addition of bathrooms, partitions and upgraded electrical.

In phase two, city administrative personnel will move to the post office and the recreation department will relocate to Mount McSauba. After staff has moved, the addition will be built and city offices, the basement and meeting rooms will be renovated.

Phase three will include minor changes to the post office to accommodate the police and fire departments. And in phase four, police and fire personnel will move there while their quarters are renovated. The city has no plans for the post office once all departments are back at city hall.

THREE WAYS TO "HEAT CHEAP" THIS WINTER!

1. Move to Florida.
2. Leave your furnace off until March.
3. Get a Geothermal Add-On System.

If you heat with propane or oil, the new geothermal heating and cooling system from ClimateMaster can save you hundreds of dollars on your energy bills.

A new geothermal add-on system is super efficient...it pulls about 70% of its heat from the earth.

Enough to pay for itself!

Recall election is scheduled for May

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

After a long, heated battle, Eveline Township registered voters will go to the polls in early May to decide the fate of two elected officials.

The Charlevoix County Election Scheduling Committee met March 14 and set May 5 as the date for the recall election. That day, voters will decide whether to unseat township clerk Don Hayden and supervisor Dan Skrzeczkoski.

"It's in the voters hands," Skrzeczkoski said.

Those who petitioned to bring the recall to a special election claim the two representatives have not properly represented them.

The petition for recall that was circulated stated that Hayden has shown deliberate disregard for the zoning ordinance and the citizens of Eveline Township. Those driving the recall allege that in 2001 he intentionally omitted information from a zoning amendment notice he posted as planning commission clerk, dealing with wind turbine generators.

He has since resigned from the planning commission.

Petitions to recall Skrzeczkoski said he misrepresented township residents by not recognizing and "correcting" Hayden's mistake and by suggesting that Dawson Way rezone his proposed wind turbine property to R-4.

While the recall petition was the sounding board for some residents' grounds for recall, the ballot will have 200-word statements from both Hayden and Skrzeczkoski rebutting the Hayden wrote, "I admit to having made mistakes in those 14 years (of township service). But legal counsel has declared them to be insignificant and inconsequential. Now the recall group wants me out because they don't read the newspapers that are used to advertise notices of hearings for public meetings.
